WITNESS PRETTY EASTER SERVICE

C. D. Streeter and Daughter of This City, Were Present at Sunrise Prayer Meeting on California Mountain.

SIGHT IS IMPRESSIVE

Universal Peace Plea is Made by One of the Speakers at Service—Mr. Streeter's Letter.

The following letter describing an impressive and beautiful Easter service on Mount Rubidoux in California has been received here from C. D. Streeter who with his daughter witnessed the service Easter morning.

Mr. Streeter's letter follows: "I was again privileged to attend sunrise prayer meeting on this mountain, which is located on the edge of Riverside, California. Last year there were 6,000 people in attendance, but this year there were 15,000; over 1,500 automobiles were used in getting the people to the top of this mountain, but the majority of the people walked. This was the sixth annual pilgrimage and at the first only thirty people were present."

The services are non-sectarian so that all nationalities and faiths could enjoy this service. A platform was erected, which held those participating, and faced Father Serra cross. On this cross were hung a myriad of diamond crystals, and for three hours before the commencement of the service, powerful electric searchlights played upon it, bringing out in its steady glare many of the colors of the spectrum—a beautiful sight to behold.

A choir of one hundred voices started the program with the "Anthem to the Easter Dawn," written for the occasion by Mrs. Carrie Jacobs-Bond. The pastor of the Magnolia Presbyterian church led the invocation and the people joined in its recital—the Lord's prayer. Two songs were sung by the people, "In the Cross of Christ I Glory" and "Sweet Peace, the Gift of God's Love." DeWitt V. Hutchings read Henry Van Dyke's "God of the Open Air," being written especially for the occasion by Mr. Van Dyke two years ago.

Dr. Charles Edward Locke, pastor of the First Methodist church of Los Angeles, made a most eloquent plea for universal peace and said: "In the midst of the breaking dawn of this glad Easter morning, standing by this glittering token of a world's redemption, we join in the happy hallelujah of holy scripture."

It is a most significant fact that at this time, when the whole of Europe is war-tossed and blood stained and thousand upon thousand of the best of her manhood have been sacrificed to the demands of national conquest, a little band of pilgrims turned their Easter devotion into a beautiful appeal for peace.

While Dr. Locke was delivering his remarks and his prayer for peace, a large peace-flag was unfurled at the foot of the cross and flags of the different nations were planted near it. It was a most impressive service and think everyone felt that they had received a great inspiration.

If you are ever in the vicinity of Riverside at Easter time, do not fail to witness this inspiring spectacle.

HIGHLAND PARK STUDENTS COMING

Electrical, Mechanical and Civil Engineering Classes From School at Des Moines Here Wednesday.

Thirty or forty engineering students from Highland Park college, Des Moines, will come to inspect and study the Keokuk water power next Wednesday. The party will include electrical, civil, and mechanical engineers in embryo with Dean Adolph Shane in charge.

They will arrive on the Rock Island road soon after noon, and will be conducted over the works in the river by engineers from the Mississippi River Power company. Dr. G. Walter Barr will be in Keokuk that day and will make the trip over the government works and power plant with the college students. The Highland Park college of engineering has become one of the leading technical schools in the west and its laboratories and shops are said to be the largest and best equipped of any educational institutions in the United States.

Every school of engineering from Pennsylvania to Oklahoma and from Wisconsin to Arkansas has sent its students to Keokuk to spend a day studying the world's greatest engineering achievement, and the prospect is that practically all of them will come every year in the future.

That Pay Day Law. Waterloo Times-Tribune: The state legislature has passed a law that the railroads pay their employees twice a month instead of monthly. The railroads will probably do as they please about this. They may have the notion that a corporation not organized under the laws of Iowa and engaged in interstate traffic can pay its employees when it is most convenient.

LONDON IS NOW FULL OF SOLDIERS

Appearance of Khaki Clad Tommies No Longer Attracts Much Attention From the Citizens.

RECRUITING POSTERS

One Favorite Slogan is: What do the Men in the Trenches Think of the Men Who Stay at Home?

[By Wilbur S. Forrest, United Press Staff Correspondent.] LONDON, April 8. (By mail to New York)—London is today a city of soldiers.

To the average Londoner the sight is commonplace. But to the newcomer the khaki clad "Tommies" are a source of immediate interest and he meets them everywhere. They swarm the avenues, inhabit the hotels, ride the trams, subway trains and motor buses and receive no more attention from the British public than the man in civilian garb. For the most part, the British soldier of London is the recruit. His uniform shows unmistakable signs of newness and he wears it with a show of pride and anticipation of something to come. He has enlisted and is held in the city awaiting the call to the camps where Kitchener's men are now being trained for the front. When there is room, the new recruit will be placed in the camp and put through a grueling service that will equip him for the rigorous work in and about the trenches. The newest recruit will see steady glare in perhaps six or eight months—if the war lasts that long.

Occasionally, however, there mingle with the new uniforms one that has seen the active work at the front. It is stained and lacks the smart curves. The veteran who wears it is either fresh from the hospitals or on leave. Occasionally he carries his arm in a sling or walks with a limp.

Not lacking about London also is the Scotch kiltie. His bare knees and quaint uniform gather few passing glances from the Londoner. To the freshly arrived foreigner, the kiltie is a source of never ending wonderment.

The abundance of soldiers in London is explained by the unique publicity campaign carried on by the government to stimulate recruiting. Dotted about on every available space are catch phrase signs that dig the heart of the patriotic Britisher.

On every public conveyance, every building and street are appeals to get into uniform and go to the front. Not a single taxi cab in London lacks its circulating appeal. The trams, the underground cars and even the horse drawn conveyors are all the same—plastered with flaming letters that tell the Britisher he is not half the man at home as he could be at the front.

"You know what you think of the men in the trenches, but what do they think of you?" is a typical appeal.

Since the German raid on Scarborough, enlistment is inscribed on these posters. The publicity campaign is bringing results well approved of by the war office according to information today. Fear of a German air raid in London has largely passed. The suggestion that Zeppelins will come in the night and drop bombs is met with a smile everywhere. The people are crossing that bridge when they come to it and in the meantime they are not seeking a convenient cellar in which to hide.

Occasional searchlights playing into the air at night, a scant few aerial guns mounted along the Thames, and the precaution that street lights do not cast their glow into the upper darkness are the only evidences that London weeks ago feared the Zeppelins and took precautions. Today the brave citizen will say that these precautions were merely those of the military and were not entirely necessary.

While the fear of German invasion has disappeared, the intense hatred for the enemy is, however, apparent everywhere. To order German fried potatoes in a restaurant is a joke; potatoes are not fried in that manner in England. Apollinaris water, a German product, is also extremely unpopular and cannot be bought. The foregoing are only two of the many mistakes a newly arrived American may make in London. He will soon learn to order French or English fried potatoes and water other than that bottled in Germany.

What is true of London, is true of all England. The country and people are engaged in the serious business of war and they
