Mrs. W. C. Hughes has returned from a several week's visit with her mother in Minneapolis.

For Society Editor Call Black 665.

AFTER THE FOURTH. (Upon the injury of a little boy by fireworks.) Poor little lad! If he were mine (And mine may be the next, God knows!)

What matter if he loved them well, These deadly unsuspected foes Which he and I together, sought And stood away for sturdy joys, To celebrate the day of days, With proper heed of smoke and noise?

What boots it now that I am wise, And count too late, the fearful prize? For sport, or pride, or patriot zeal To risk such costly sacrifice? Ah! had! What could I say to thee? Where and for aching heart defense? Oh! Lord, good Lord, forgive us fools And give us just a bit of sense.

—Charles Irvin Junkin in the Ladies' Home Journal, July, 1915.

"THE GODDESS" TO APPEAR IN KEOKUK

Story to be Published in The Gate City Beginning Next Sunday

Beginning next Sunday and continuing for fifteen weeks there will appear in the Sunday issue of this paper the thrilling, entertaining and instructive serial, "The Goddess." This story will be of intense interest to young and old. It is educational and will prove a delight to all who read it. It is seldom The Gate City runs a serial story but this one promises to create such widespread interest and to interest our readers so intently that it was decided to publish the serial. "The Goddess" is by Gouverneur Morris, famed as America's best writer of idylls. With Earle Williams and Anita Stewart in the principal roles there isn't the slightest reason why the picture production should not be attractive. As a reading proposition Morris has prepared the story in its most delectable style and each instalment is sure to be eagerly read and each succeeding chapter anxiously awaited. Be sure and read all of the serial and be sure and begin with the opening chapters in next Sunday's issue of The Gate City.
