If Root is Nominated.
The New Republic notwithstanding Mr. Root's exceptional qualifications for the work of the presidential office, his popularity as a candidate would suffer very much from the antagonisms provoked by his career. There would be aroused against him all the bitter personal, sectional and class opposition which remain left over from the political controversies of the Taft administration. The republican voters of the western states are not interested in military preparedness, foreign policy and administrative organization. They are still very much interested in preventing any man from becoming president whose profession or business career has been closely associated with eastern corporations

Pupils Recital Saturday.

The pupils of Mrs. Amanda Barnes-Barham gave a recital on Saturday afternoon in the auditorium of the Y. W. C. A. Every number on the program was given in a very pleasing manner, reflected much credit upon the teacher, Mrs. Barham is a recent addition to Keokuk musical circles. She was for years on the concert stage professionally, and was on the Redpath circuit for several years. She studied in the Chicago conservatory and in the College of Musical Arts in Indianapolis. She is both a pianist and harpist. Miss Hanchett who appeared on the program Saturday afternoon, played on Mrs. Barham's harp, which is one of the finest harps made. Several of the pupils are from out of town. Miss Celia Walljasper came from West Point, Misses Marie Potts, Lillian Hanchett and Sarah Hamilton are Fort Madison musicians. The program follows:

- Polonaise in A Minor..... Chopin
- Cello Walljasper.....
- Gypsy Rondo..... Haydn
- Mazurka, No. 3 Op. 69..... Moszkowski
- Helen Kleiselsch.....
- Marche Aux Flambeaux..... Hermann
- (2 pianos—8 hands.)

- Irene Rollosson.....
- Nocturne, Op. 12..... Decevee
- Kathryn Vaughn.....
- Morceaux Melodieux..... Guriltt
- (2 pianos—4 hands.)
- Mary Harrington, Nancy Anderson, Hark! Hark! The Lark, Schubert-Liszt, Sarah Hamilton.....

The Marder Recital.

The recital given Friday evening by the pupils of Mrs. Ella Marder in the Y. W. C. A. auditorium proved an enjoyable musical event, and the work of the pupils of Mrs. Marder reflected in a great measure the careful and painstaking instruction which had been given them. Both piano and violin numbers were played, and those who appeared on the program were almost entirely among the followers of Mr. Taft in 1912. All the professional opponents of corporate interests would pounce upon him and begin a campaign of personal abuse which would be reminiscent of the Hearst campaign against McKinley and Hanna. Mr. Root knows all this better than anyone else. The knowledge should persuade him not to sanction the submission of his name to the voters of his party. His own past would prevent his real qualifications as a candidate from getting a fair hearing.

Author Presents Book.

Mrs. Ivins has a specially inscribed copy of Ralph Graham Taber's last book of poems "Stray Gold, a Rambler's Clean-Up." The title illustrations running through the book are the work of William S. Ivins, who it will be recalled, collaborated with Mr. Taber in writing the comic opera Dalai Lama. Mr. Taber has traveled extensively in southern Europe, in Africa, Labrador, in the Ugava country, in the Rocky mountains, in Mexico, and in Central and South America. He has been employed at one time and another as train dispatcher, journalist, editor, theatrical manager, explorer, prospector, miner and attorney at law. He and Mr. Ivins are both on the legal staff of the Great Northern Railway Co. Mr. Taber was in Keokuk last week attending the marriage of his son to Miss Katherine Sage.

In dedicating his book, Mr. Taber uses this verse:

Earth's richest Ore,
Life is worth living here below,
Though the roads be rough and hilly,
If we have a life-long friend or foe
Who will back us willy nilly,
Would that it might be mine to share
With all my readers such friendship
As these two friends to the Rambler bear—
So here's to Olive and Billy,
"Billy" is Mr. Ivins. The book is put on the market by McClure and is printed on tinted paper and bound in red leather and is a handsome little book of about two hundred pages.
