ST. PAUL, SUNDAY, MARCH 24, 1878.

The Fort Snelling bridge will tap the very garden spot of Minnesota, and draw its wonderful yield of the staple farm products into the welcome lap of St. Paul, while we in turn will furnish the farmers with our goods and wares in extenso.

The county commissioners of Scott county, on behalf of the people they represent, ask us to give them the means (by a bridge over the Mississippi at Fort Snelling) of restoring the former commercial intercourse by wagon transportation, between that county and the leading metropolis and capital of the State.

On a northwest line from Fort Snelling to Eden Prairie it is about 17 miles. From "Lake of the Woods" or Minnehaha creek south to the Minnesota river (county line) it is fifteen miles.

The developments of the investigation into the management of the Insane Asylum at St. Peter, are simply horrible. The testimony which we publish to-day is sickening in its brutality, and will carry pain to hundreds who have friends at this much vaunted charitable institution.

A FURTHER INSTITUTION.

Thanks to the Fire Department.

As a resident of the city, my dwelling house being in close proximity to the burning of the two barns between Tenth and Eleventh streets, last evening, permit me through your columns to gratefully thank the fire department of the city, for their promptness and energy in confining the fire to its place of origin, and saving the adjoining dwelling houses, some of which were within a very few feet of the burning barns.

Very respectfully, JAS. STARKET.

A VITAL QUESTION.

The people of Ramsey county will have submitted to them next Tuesday a question of vital interest to St. Paul. It is not only the question whether $100,000 in bonds shall be issued, but whether the policy of reaching out in all directions for trade is to be formally inaugurated.
