

VOLUME I. CONGRESSIONAL.

ORDER AND DIGNITY AGAIN IN THE FOREGROUND.

The Senate Occupied Principally in the Passage of Bills--The House Takes Up and Passes the Pacific Railroads Funding Bill with Only Two Negative Votes--Set Speech by Butler in Opposition to Consideration Without Reference, in Which He Throws a Hitz Brick at the Presidential Fraud--The Florida Controversy Not Yet Received in Washington as Far as Known.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Senator Morrill, from the committee on finance reported adversely on the Senate bill to encourage and protect the shipping interest and to revive American commerce. He stated that the bill should have originated in the House, and therefore moved that the committee be discharged from its further consideration. So ordered.

Senator Davis, of Louisiana, introduced a bill to provide for ocean mail steamship service between the United States and Brazil. He referred.

Senator Morrill, from the committee on finance, reported back several Senate bills and moved that the committee be discharged from their further consideration, similar bills having already been acted upon by the Senate. So ordered.

Senator Windom, from the conference committee on the House bill authorizing the secretary of the treasury to employ temporary clerks and matrons for the same, also making an appropriation for detecting trespasses on the public lands, submitted a report and explanation thereof. He said the two items on which the second committee of conference disagreed, were first $30,000 for collectors of internal revenue, and secondly, an appropriation of $20,000 for the same.

Mr. Knott, chairman of the judiciary committee, said that during the last Congress he gave much time to consideration of the subject, and had then been favorably and substantially the same as the pending bill. He therefore favored the passage of the bill as it came from the Senate.

Mr. Steger, another member of the judiciary committee, declared himself in favor of the passage of the bill without delay.

Mr. Hartridge, another member of the judiciary committee, stated that although he was in favor of the bill and expected to vote for it, he thought a bill of such magnitude and importance should take the usual course and be referred to the judiciary committee.

Mr. Cox, another member of the judiciary committee, stated that he was in favor of the bill and expected to vote for it, but he thought it would be better to refer it to the committee on the ground that it was a bill of such magnitude and importance that it should take the usual course and be referred to the judiciary committee.

Mr. Phillips opposed reference of the bill, and advocated its immediate passage. He spoke in support of the bill, and stated that it was not a bill of such magnitude and importance that it should take the usual course and be referred to the committee.

Mr. Knott moved to take a recess until 7:30 P. M. Mr. McPherson asked if the bankrupt bill would come up as unfinished business in the morning. The speaker replied that it would.

The House then took a recess until 7:30 P. M., the evening session for debate only.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Gen. Finley, who contests the seat of Bisbee, of the second district of Florida, says the revelations made by McLin and Dennis support his claim to a seat. The confessions have not yet reached the city.

Regarding the alleged confessions of McLin and Dennis of election frauds in Florida in 1876, Montgomery says that the confessions were made or had been made. He and others were unable to determine under the conditions of the confessions, and would upon the receipt of the confessions, and would upon the receipt of the confessions, and would upon the receipt of the confessions.

Mr. Butler remarked that the bill has been discussed for weeks in the Senate, but it had not been discussed in the House. He had no objection to its passage, but he thought it would be better to refer it to the committee on the ground that it was a bill of such magnitude and importance that it should take the usual course and be referred to the committee.

Mr. Hartridge moved to take a recess until 7:30 P. M. Mr. McPherson asked if the bankrupt bill would come up as unfinished business in the morning. The speaker replied that it would.

The House then took a recess until 7:30 P. M., the evening session for debate only.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—The President has nominated Gen. Le. Smith, of Louisiana, collector of customs at New Orleans.

Subscriptions to the new loan to-day were $242,000. The commission of General Smith, appointed clerk of the treasury as paymaster in the army, was signed by the President this morning.

Mr. Knott moved to take a recess until 7:30 P. M. Mr. McPherson asked if the bankrupt bill would come up as unfinished business in the morning. The speaker replied that it would.

The House then took a recess until 7:30 P. M., the evening session for debate only.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—At Lewiston, Me., Tuesday afternoon, Willie Gege, ten years old, son of Henry George, of that place, was playing in a wheat bin in the warehouse of the Erie railroad, when he was opened to load a car, and he was drawn in to the vortex and buried under 400 bushels of wheat and taken out dead.

Death of an Old and Respected Citizen of Chicago. CHICAGO, April 24.—Dr. C. V. Dyer, an old resident died suddenly of paralysis, aged 71. He was a noted abolitionist, and great friend of President Lincoln, who appointed him judge of the international court for the suppression of slave trade, which convened during Lincoln's administration at Lyons, Africa.

Barred in a Coal Mine. POTTSVILLE, Pa., April 24.—Wm. Heffner and Jonas Krell, working in a drift colliery near Minersville, yesterday, were buried by an immense fall of coal and slate. After a search of several hours Heffner was found dead. The position of Krell was not discovered till evening, when renewed efforts were made to recover his body.

Mourning for President Olin. CHICAGO, April 24.—The building and offices of the Western Union Telegraph Company are today draped in mourning out of respect to the late President, Wm. Olin, and a genuine sorrow is manifested on all sides by the telegraphers, who feel that in him they have lost a warm friend and benefactor.

Erie Railroad Sold on Foreclosure Suit. NEW YORK, April 24.—The Erie railroad was sold to-day on a foreclosure suit by the Farmers' Loan and Trust company. The road was purchased for six million dollars by Gov. E. D. Morgan, David A. Wells and J. J. Lander, who are trustees for the stockholders.

Buy a Railroad into Chicago. CHICAGO, April 24.—The Chicago & Southern railroad, which is the only opening for the Grand Trunk railroad into this city, was bought this morning in the United States court by Henry A. Rust, in the interest of the latter corporation. Price, $1,650,000.

Died at Sea—Special Resumption. SAN FRANCISCO, April 24.—Count Ladislav Tarnowski, passenger on the steamer City of Tokio, died at sea the 19th inst.

At the post office to-day special payments were practically resumed, a number of money orders being paid in gold.

Story Off for Europe. NEW YORK, April 24.—W. F. Lester, of the Chicago Times, arrived here last night, and will sail for Europe Saturday, in the steamship Britanni.

NETTLED NATIONS.

LITTLE IF ANY HEADWAY MADE IN PEACE NEGOTIATIONS.

The "Thunderer" Hoped of Favorable Results--The Russian Press, on the Contrary, See Nothing Hopeful--Germany Called Upon to Find a Means to Force England to Show Her Hand--The Present Uncertainty Firing Out All Parties Terrible State of Affairs in Bulgaria--Muslims and Christians Engaged in a War of Extermination--Popular Subscriptions in Russia to a Cruiser Flotilla--Miscellaneous.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 24.—The Grand Duke Nicholas has informed the Porte and the Greek patriarch that a number of Russian officers and men will attend divine service at Constantinople Sunday. The grand duke requests that a number of the Greek churches in the capital may be available so the soldiers can be distributed among them.

MOSCOW, April 24.—A public meeting was held to-day for collecting subscriptions for a cruiser flotilla. It was resolved that the government of each province should fit out one cruiser.

BERLIN, April 24.—Prince Bismarck was taken ill to-day at Friedruchshagen with erysipelas in the loins. His usual physician has been summoned from Wiesbaden.

The preliminary inquiry against Bishop, the Englishman charged with endeavoring to obtain plans of fortresses, etc., has been concluded. The evidence obtained is sufficient for his indictment for treason. The British government has declared that it will not interfere with the trial.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 25.—In a violent gale on the Black Sea a Turkish corvette has been lost off Kilia, and ninety men drowned.

BERLIN, April 24.—Prince Bismarck was taken ill to-day at Friedruchshagen with erysipelas in the loins. His usual physician has been summoned from Wiesbaden.

The preliminary inquiry against Bishop, the Englishman charged with endeavoring to obtain plans of fortresses, etc., has been concluded. The evidence obtained is sufficient for his indictment for treason. The British government has declared that it will not interfere with the trial.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 25.—In a violent gale on the Black Sea a Turkish corvette has been lost off Kilia, and ninety men drowned.

BERLIN, April 24.—Prince Bismarck was taken ill to-day at Friedruchshagen with erysipelas in the loins. His usual physician has been summoned from Wiesbaden.

The preliminary inquiry against Bishop, the Englishman charged with endeavoring to obtain plans of fortresses, etc., has been concluded. The evidence obtained is sufficient for his indictment for treason. The British government has declared that it will not interfere with the trial.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 25.—In a violent gale on the Black Sea a Turkish corvette has been lost off Kilia, and ninety men drowned.

BERLIN, April 24.—Prince Bismarck was taken ill to-day at Friedruchshagen with erysipelas in the loins. His usual physician has been summoned from Wiesbaden.

The preliminary inquiry against Bishop, the Englishman charged with endeavoring to obtain plans of fortresses, etc., has been concluded. The evidence obtained is sufficient for his indictment for treason. The British government has declared that it will not interfere with the trial.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 25.—In a violent gale on the Black Sea a Turkish corvette has been lost off Kilia, and ninety men drowned.

BERLIN, April 24.—Prince Bismarck was taken ill to-day at Friedruchshagen with erysipelas in the loins. His usual physician has been summoned from Wiesbaden.

The preliminary inquiry against Bishop, the Englishman charged with endeavoring to obtain plans of fortresses, etc., has been concluded. The evidence obtained is sufficient for his indictment for treason. The British government has declared that it will not interfere with the trial.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 25.—In a violent gale on the Black Sea a Turkish corvette has been lost off Kilia, and ninety men drowned.

BERLIN, April 24.—Prince Bismarck was taken ill to-day at Friedruchshagen with erysipelas in the loins. His usual physician has been summoned from Wiesbaden.

The preliminary inquiry against Bishop, the Englishman charged with endeavoring to obtain plans of fortresses, etc., has been concluded. The evidence obtained is sufficient for his indictment for treason. The British government has declared that it will not interfere with the trial.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 25.—In a violent gale on the Black Sea a Turkish corvette has been lost off Kilia, and ninety men drowned.

BERLIN, April 24.—Prince Bismarck was taken ill to-day at Friedruchshagen with erysipelas in the loins. His usual physician has been summoned from Wiesbaden.

The preliminary inquiry against Bishop, the Englishman charged with endeavoring to obtain plans of fortresses, etc., has been concluded. The evidence obtained is sufficient for his indictment for treason. The British government has declared that it will not interfere with the trial.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 25.—In a violent gale on the Black Sea a Turkish corvette has been lost off Kilia, and ninety men drowned.

BERLIN, April 24.—Prince Bismarck was taken ill to-day at Friedruchshagen with erysipelas in the loins. His usual physician has been summoned from Wiesbaden.

The preliminary inquiry against Bishop, the Englishman charged with endeavoring to obtain plans of fortresses, etc., has been concluded. The evidence obtained is sufficient for his indictment for treason. The British government has declared that it will not interfere with the trial.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 25.—In a violent gale on the Black Sea a Turkish corvette has been lost off Kilia, and ninety men drowned.

BERLIN, April 24.—Prince Bismarck was taken ill to-day at Friedruchshagen with erysipelas in the loins. His usual physician has been summoned from Wiesbaden.

The preliminary inquiry against Bishop, the Englishman charged with endeavoring to obtain plans of fortresses, etc., has been concluded. The evidence obtained is sufficient for his indictment for treason. The British government has declared that it will not interfere with the trial.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 25.—In a violent gale on the Black Sea a Turkish corvette has been lost off Kilia, and ninety men drowned.

BERLIN, April 24.—Prince Bismarck was taken ill to-day at Friedruchshagen with erysipelas in the loins. His usual physician has been summoned from Wiesbaden.

The preliminary inquiry against Bishop, the Englishman charged with endeavoring to obtain plans of fortresses, etc., has been concluded. The evidence obtained is sufficient for his indictment for treason. The British government has declared that it will not interfere with the trial.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 25.—In a violent gale on the Black Sea a Turkish corvette has been lost off Kilia, and ninety men drowned.

BERLIN, April 24.—Prince Bismarck was taken ill to-day at Friedruchshagen with erysipelas in the loins. His usual physician has been summoned from Wiesbaden.

The preliminary inquiry against Bishop, the Englishman charged with endeavoring to obtain plans of fortresses, etc., has been concluded. The evidence obtained is sufficient for his indictment for treason. The British government has declared that it will not interfere with the trial.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 25.—In a violent gale on the Black Sea a Turkish corvette has been lost off Kilia, and ninety men drowned.

BERLIN, April 24.—Prince Bismarck was taken ill to-day at Friedruchshagen with erysipelas in the loins. His usual physician has been summoned from Wiesbaden.

The preliminary inquiry against Bishop, the Englishman charged with endeavoring to obtain plans of fortresses, etc., has been concluded. The evidence obtained is sufficient for his indictment for treason. The British government has declared that it will not interfere with the trial.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 25.—In a violent gale on the Black Sea a Turkish corvette has been lost off Kilia, and ninety men drowned.

BERLIN, April 24.—Prince Bismarck was taken ill to-day at Friedruchshagen with erysipelas in the loins. His usual physician has been summoned from Wiesbaden.

The preliminary inquiry against Bishop, the Englishman charged with endeavoring to obtain plans of fortresses, etc., has been concluded. The evidence obtained is sufficient for his indictment for treason. The British government has declared that it will not interfere with the trial.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 25.—In a violent gale on the Black Sea a Turkish corvette has been lost off Kilia, and ninety men drowned.

BERLIN, April 24.—Prince Bismarck was taken ill to-day at Friedruchshagen with erysipelas in the loins. His usual physician has been summoned from Wiesbaden.

The preliminary inquiry against Bishop, the Englishman charged with endeavoring to obtain plans of fortresses, etc., has been concluded. The evidence obtained is sufficient for his indictment for treason. The British government has declared that it will not interfere with the trial.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 25.—In a violent gale on the Black Sea a Turkish corvette has been lost off Kilia, and ninety men drowned.

BERLIN, April 24.—Prince Bismarck was taken ill to-day at Friedruchshagen with erysipelas in the loins. His usual physician has been summoned from Wiesbaden.

The preliminary inquiry against Bishop, the Englishman charged with endeavoring to obtain plans of fortresses, etc., has been concluded. The evidence obtained is sufficient for his indictment for treason. The British government has declared that it will not interfere with the trial.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 25.—In a violent gale on the Black Sea a Turkish corvette has been lost off Kilia, and ninety men drowned.

BERLIN, April 24.—Prince Bismarck was taken ill to-day at Friedruchshagen with erysipelas in the loins. His usual physician has been summoned from Wiesbaden.

RUTHERFORD B. HAYES.

He Visits Philadelphia, and There Not Being a Circus or Other Attraction, He is Flatteringly Lionized.

PHILADELPHIA, April 24.—The city to-day is gay with flags and bunting, the public offices and many large business and private houses displaying the national colors with great profusion in honor of the four days visit of President Hayes, the visit being made in response to the urgent solicitation of the Union League, Commercial Exchange and other public and social organizations. At 10:50 o'clock this morning the locomotive gaily decked with flags and streamers, and which was attached the directors' car carrying various reception committees, moved out of the city and arrived at Wilmington at a quarter before 12 to meet the President and party.

At Wilmington a large number of citizens gathered, including the mayor of that city and Senator Saulsbury. Upon the arrival of the Presidential party their cars were attached to the main line, and the journey to this city was accomplished in the quick time of 29 minutes.

A large throng was congregated at the depot and vicinity in this city, and it required some 1500 feet of large force of police detailed to the scene to clear the ground. The journey to this city was accomplished in the quick time of 29 minutes.

The Presidential party was escorted to carriages. A barouche drawn by four horses was reserved for President Hayes, and in this vehicle, in company with Jas. L. Claghorn and Gen. Patterson, he was seated. The ladies of the party consisted of Mrs. Hayes, Mrs. Sherman, Miss Evans, Miss Platt, together with Secretaries Sherman, Evans and Schurz followed in carriages accompanied by members of the committee.

The entire line over which the Presidential party moved from the depot to the Continental hotel was thronged with people, and flags fluttered upon every side. The children of the street were especially gay, and the ladies of the party were seen to be delighted upon the balconies of the institution, and waved their handkerchiefs at the distinguished visitors.

The Union League club-house was decorated with flags and bunting and many members assembled on the porch. At different points the President was the recipient of marked attention and he recognized the cheers by raising his hat.

The Presidential party arrived at the hotel a few minutes after 2 o'clock, and were driven to the private entrance on Ninth street. The City Troops drew up in a line on the opposite of Ninth street while the party alighted.

A dense crowd of people had assembled, completely blocking up the street, and they cheered lustily. Loud calls were made for the President, and after leaving the carriage he appeared on the balcony over the entrance in company with Secretaries Sherman and Patterson, and Gen. Patterson.

After the cheering had subsided President Hayes stepped forward and said: I do not propose to make a speech this afternoon. I cordially thank you for your welcome, and as I have some of the administration with me, I take pleasure in introducing to you, first, Mr. Secretary Sherman.

Secretary Sherman stepped forward and was also received with cheers. He said, I always think that it is better to be silent when you have nothing to say, and therefore I can only thank you for your kind welcome to us.

The President then introduced Secretary Schurz, who said: I can only thank you for the honor which you have conferred upon me by your cordial welcome.

Gen. Patterson was then called forward, and said: I propose three cheers for President Hayes on his arrival in the city of Philadelphia, and raising his hat as a signal, three loud cheers were given by the multitude.

President Hayes then turned to the crowd and said: I am pleased to bid you good afternoon. Then the party retired from the balcony and were escorted to their rooms.

She tells him also that she has "always been his loving, dutiful wife," which hardly accords with an emphatic sentence in a letter to Boardman: "But I must perform my duty toward one I really dislike. Yes; shall I say it? Toward one I truly hate." The letters make it truly appear that jealousy was Newell's normal condition, but now and then she was overcome by fits of jealousy. Her friends those of whom he was most jealous. After he had permitted his jealous pangs to separate himself and wife, he urged her to go and see Boardman, whom he hoped would be spared to many more years of usefulness and happiness. Newell has close upon every one who calls upon me, and I tell you every place I go, and with whom.

What more can I do? You know perfectly well I went in company with Mr. Dix when I was presented at court, but at the same time I was with him, and Mr. D. was kind enough to be my escort.

She tells him also that she has "always been his loving, dutiful wife," which hardly accords with an emphatic sentence in a letter to Boardman: "But I must perform my duty toward one I really dislike. Yes; shall I say it? Toward one I truly hate." The letters make it truly appear that jealousy was Newell's normal condition, but now and then she was overcome by fits of jealousy. Her friends those of whom he was most jealous. After he had permitted his jealous pangs to separate himself and wife, he urged her to go and see Boardman, whom he hoped would be spared to many more years of usefulness and happiness. Newell has close upon every one who calls upon me, and I tell you every place I go, and with whom.

What more can I do? You know perfectly well I went in company with Mr. Dix when I was presented at court, but at the same time I was with him, and Mr. D. was kind enough to be my escort.

She tells him also that she has "always been his loving, dutiful wife," which hardly accords with an emphatic sentence in a letter to Boardman: "But I must perform my duty toward one I really dislike. Yes; shall I say it? Toward one I truly hate." The letters make it truly appear that jealousy was Newell's normal condition, but now and then she was overcome by fits of jealousy. Her friends those of whom he was most jealous. After he had permitted his jealous pangs to separate himself and wife, he urged her to go and see Boardman, whom he hoped would be spared to many more years of usefulness and happiness. Newell has close upon every one who calls upon me, and I tell you every place I go, and with whom.

What more can I do? You know perfectly well I went in company with Mr. Dix when I was presented at court, but at the same time I was with him, and Mr. D. was kind enough to be my escort.

She tells him also that she has "always been his loving, dutiful wife," which hardly accords with an emphatic sentence in a letter to Boardman: "But I must perform my duty toward one I really dislike. Yes; shall I say it? Toward one I truly hate." The letters make it truly appear that jealousy was Newell's normal condition, but now and then she was overcome by fits of jealousy. Her friends those of whom he was most jealous. After he had permitted his jealous pangs to separate himself and wife, he urged her to go and see Boardman, whom he hoped would be spared to many more years of usefulness and happiness. Newell has close upon every one who calls upon me, and I tell you every place I go, and with whom.

What more can I do? You know perfectly well I went in company with Mr. Dix when I was presented at court, but at the same time I was with him, and Mr. D. was kind enough to be my escort.

She tells him also that she has "always been his loving, dutiful wife," which hardly accords with an emphatic sentence in a letter to Boardman: "But I must perform my duty toward one I really dislike. Yes; shall I say it? Toward one I truly hate." The letters make it truly appear that jealousy was Newell's normal condition, but now and then she was overcome by fits of jealousy. Her friends those of whom he was most jealous. After he had permitted his jealous pangs to separate himself and wife, he urged her to go and see Boardman, whom he hoped would be spared to many more years of usefulness and happiness. Newell has close upon every one who calls upon me, and I tell you every place I go, and with whom.

What more can I do? You know perfectly well I went in company with Mr. Dix when I was presented at court, but at the same time I was with him, and Mr. D. was kind enough to be my escort.

She tells him also that she has "always been his loving, dutiful wife," which hardly accords with an emphatic sentence in a letter to Boardman: "But I must perform my duty toward one I really dislike. Yes; shall I say it? Toward one I truly hate." The letters make it truly appear that jealousy was Newell's normal condition, but now and then she was overcome by fits of jealousy. Her friends those of whom he was most jealous. After he had permitted his jealous pangs to separate himself and wife, he urged her to go and see Boardman, whom he hoped would be spared to many more years of usefulness and happiness. Newell has close upon every one who calls upon me, and I tell you every place I go, and with whom.

What more can I do? You know perfectly well I went in company with Mr. Dix when I was presented at court, but at the same time I was with him, and Mr. D. was kind enough to be my escort.

She tells him also that she has "always been his loving, dutiful wife," which hardly accords with an emphatic sentence in a letter to Boardman: "But I must perform my duty toward one I really dislike. Yes; shall I say it? Toward one I truly hate." The letters make it truly appear that jealousy was Newell's normal condition, but now and then she was overcome by fits of jealousy. Her friends those of whom he was most jealous. After he had permitted his jealous pangs to separate himself and wife, he urged her to go and see Boardman, whom he hoped would be spared to many more years of usefulness and happiness. Newell has close upon every one who calls upon me, and I tell you every place I go, and with whom.

What more can I do? You know perfectly well I went in company with Mr. Dix when I was presented at court, but at the same time I was with him, and Mr. D. was kind enough to be my escort.

She tells him also that she has "always been his loving, dutiful wife," which hardly accords with an emphatic sentence in a letter to Boardman: "But I must perform my duty toward one I really dislike. Yes; shall I say it? Toward one I truly hate." The letters make it truly appear that jealousy was Newell's normal condition, but now and then she was overcome by fits of jealousy. Her friends those of whom he was most jealous. After he had permitted his jealous pangs to separate himself and wife, he urged her to go and see Boardman, whom he hoped would be spared to many more years of usefulness and happiness. Newell has close upon every one who calls upon me, and I tell you every place I go, and with whom.

What more can I do? You know perfectly well I went in company with Mr. Dix when I was presented at court, but at the same time I was with him, and Mr. D. was kind enough to be my escort.

She tells him also that she has "always been his loving, dutiful wife," which hardly accords with an emphatic sentence in a letter to Boardman: "But I must perform my duty toward one I really dislike. Yes; shall I say it? Toward one I truly hate." The letters make it truly appear that jealousy was Newell's normal condition, but now and then she was overcome by fits of jealousy. Her friends those of whom he was most jealous. After he had permitted his jealous pangs to separate himself and wife, he urged her to go and see Boardman, whom he hoped would be spared to many more years of usefulness and happiness. Newell has close upon every one who calls upon me, and I tell you every place I go, and with whom.

What more can I do? You know perfectly well I went in company with Mr. Dix when I was presented at court, but at the same time I was with him, and Mr. D. was kind enough to be my escort.

She tells him also that she has "always been his loving, dutiful wife," which hardly accords with an emphatic sentence in a letter to Boardman: "But I must perform my duty toward one I really dislike. Yes; shall I say it? Toward one I truly hate." The letters make it truly appear that jealousy was Newell's normal condition, but now and then she was overcome by fits of jealousy. Her friends those of whom he was most jealous. After he had permitted his jealous pangs to separate himself and wife, he urged her to go and see Boardman, whom he hoped would be spared to many more years of usefulness and happiness. Newell has close upon every one who calls upon me, and I tell you every place I go, and with whom.

What more can I do? You know perfectly well I went in company with Mr. Dix when I was presented at court, but at the same time I was with him, and Mr. D. was kind enough to be my escort.

She tells him also that she has "always been his loving, dutiful wife," which hardly accords with an emphatic sentence in a letter to Boardman: "But I must perform my duty toward one I really dislike. Yes; shall I say it? Toward one I truly hate." The letters make it truly appear that jealousy was Newell's normal condition, but now and then she was overcome by fits of jealousy. Her friends those of whom he was most jealous. After he had permitted his jealous pangs to separate himself and wife, he urged her to go and see Boardman, whom he hoped would be spared to many more years of usefulness and happiness. Newell has close upon every one who calls upon me, and I tell you every place I go, and with whom.

What more can I do? You know perfectly well I went in company with Mr. Dix when I was presented at court, but at the same time I was with him, and Mr. D. was kind enough to be my escort.

She tells him also that she has "always been his loving, dutiful wife," which hardly accords with an emphatic sentence in a letter to Boardman: "But I must perform my duty toward one I really dislike. Yes; shall I say it? Toward one I truly hate." The letters make it truly appear that jealousy was Newell's normal condition, but now and then she was overcome by fits of jealousy. Her friends those of whom he was most jealous. After he had permitted his jealous pangs to separate himself and wife, he urged her to go and see Boardman, whom he hoped would be spared to many more years of usefulness and happiness. Newell has close upon every one who calls upon me, and I tell you every place I go, and with whom.

What more can I do? You know perfectly well I went in company with Mr. Dix when I was presented at court, but at the same time I was with him, and Mr. D. was kind enough to be my escort.

She tells him also that she has "always been his loving, dutiful wife," which hardly accords with an emphatic sentence in a letter to Boardman: "But I must perform my duty toward one I really dislike. Yes; shall I say it? Toward one I truly hate." The letters make it truly appear that jealousy was Newell's normal condition, but now and then she was overcome by fits of jealousy. Her friends those of whom he was most jealous. After he had permitted his jealous pangs to separate himself and wife, he urged her to go and see Boardman, whom he hoped would be spared to many more years of usefulness and happiness. Newell has close upon every one who calls upon me, and I tell you every place I go, and with whom.

What more can I do? You know perfectly well I went in company with Mr. Dix when I was presented at court, but at the same time I was with him, and Mr. D. was kind enough to be my escort.

She tells him also that she has "always been his loving, dutiful wife," which hardly accords with an emphatic sentence in a letter to Boardman: "But I must perform my duty toward one I really dislike. Yes; shall I say it? Toward one I truly hate." The letters make it truly appear that jealousy was Newell's normal condition, but now and then she was overcome by fits of jealousy. Her friends those of whom he was most jealous. After he had permitted his jealous pangs to separate himself and wife, he urged her to go and see Boardman, whom he hoped would be spared to many more years of usefulness and happiness. Newell has close upon every one who calls upon me, and I tell you every place I go, and with whom.

What more can I do? You know perfectly well I went in company with Mr. Dix when I was presented at court, but at the same time I was with him, and Mr. D. was kind enough to be my escort.

She tells him also that she has "always been his loving, dutiful wife," which hardly accords with an emphatic sentence in a letter to Boardman: "But I must perform my duty toward one I really dislike. Yes; shall I say it? Toward one I truly hate." The letters make it truly appear that jealousy was Newell's normal condition, but now and then she was overcome by fits of jealousy. Her friends those of whom he was most jealous. After he had permitted his jealous pangs to separate himself and wife, he urged her to go and see Boardman, whom he hoped would be spared to many more years of usefulness and happiness. Newell has close upon every one who calls upon me, and I tell you every place I go, and with whom.

What more can I do? You know perfectly well I went in company with Mr. Dix when I was presented at court, but at the same time I was with him, and Mr. D. was kind enough to be my escort.

She tells him also that she has "always been his loving, dutiful wife," which hardly accords with an emphatic sentence in a letter to Boardman: "But I must perform my duty toward one I really dislike. Yes; shall I say it? Toward one I truly hate." The letters make it truly appear that jealousy was Newell's normal condition, but now and then she was overcome by fits of jealousy. Her friends those of whom he was most jealous. After he had permitted his jealous pangs to separate himself and wife, he urged her to go and see Boardman, whom he hoped would be spared to many more years of usefulness and happiness. Newell has close upon every one who calls upon me, and I tell you every place I go, and with whom.

What more can I do? You know perfectly well I went in company with Mr. Dix when I was presented at court, but at the same time I was with him, and Mr. D. was kind enough to be my escort.

She