WISCONSIN NEWS.

The registration books of Milwaukee foot up over 18,000.

The new Lutheran church at Columbus is now ready for occupancy.

There are over 400 inmates in the Industrial school at Waupun.

A man in Madison fell into an excavation for a new building, and was considerably injured.

Several fires in Milwaukee recently indicate the presence of a gang of incendiaries in the city.

Will geese are flying southward over the State in immense numbers, indicating the rapid approach of cold weather.

A drunken driver in Racine contrived to have his team runaway, was thrown out, and had a broken arm as the result.

During the month of October, 159 deaths were recorded in Milwaukee, against 169 during the corresponding month last year.

An intoxicated youth, in endeavoring to navigate a wagon in the streets of Milwaukee, fell from the wagon and broke one of his legs.

The publication of the Catholic Indicator, at Milwaukee, its material and good will having been sold out, is to be succeeded by a new paper entitled the Catholic Citizen.

The citizens of Oshkosh have become alive to the fact that they must encourage manufactures in order to not only keep their present population, but to increase it as far as possible.

In Sheboygan county the total shipments of cheese this year foot up to 61,460 boxes. The excess of shipments thus far this season over the corresponding period last season is 35,500 boxes.

The residence of Henry Bolle, in the village of Bay View, was entirely destroyed by fire, and its contents, while the family were absent. The fire department reached the ground too late to save anything.

A farmer named Daniel Sligh, from Oak Creek, was seriously injured by his horse becoming frightened at Plankinton & Amos's packing yard, Milwaukee. He had several ribs broken by being crushed against a building.

Fraser Hall, at Oshkosh, had a narrow escape from destruction by fire on a late afternoon. Some inflammable material in the store room ignited, and had it not been for the prompt action of citizens the building would not have been saved.

An alarm of fire about 11 o'clock at night started the quiet citizens of Sheboygan. The dwelling house on Sixth street, which will be remembered by all old settlers as the "Sticks" house, was burned to the ground. So the old landmarks go, one by one.

Tim Jackson, a boy of about 12 years of age, living in Colburn, a few days since caught a favorite cat belonging to a neighbor, and, after cutting its feet off, roasted it over a slow fire till it died. A juvenile monster unfit to live outside of a cage.

On condition that the people of Vernon county issue bonds to the amount of $50,000 in aid of the canal, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway company will build and operate a line from Spirita to Viroqua, by the 1st of September, 1879.

The Central Wisconsin says: "Loggers are preparing for the woods. Three loaded teams and twelve men belonging to D. & F. McDonald, went up the river Thursday, the 28th. Mr. Daniel McDonald informs us that he will put in 3,000,000 feet of logs this winter."

A. W. Phelps, an old resident of Waupun, was last week married to a lady in Oniro. Mr. Phelps is 88 years of age, and his happy bride's age is about 50. She is said to have $5,000 worth of property. Mr. Phelps is possessed of about the same amount.

The farm house of John Montgomery, north of Aurora, was burned on Wednesday night, together with nearly all the contents. The cause of the fire is under investigation. The house was insured for $500 in the Continental. Origin of the fire unknown.

A beautiful girl, aged 23, Maria Theresa Raisky, of Milwaukee, who recently committed suicide, was reported to be four or five months gone in pregnancy. A post mortem examination at the age of four months, her mother being dead, discloses the fact that she was not pregnant at all. This puts at rest the cruel imputation.

The truth regarding the recent wall street rumor that the Chicago & North-western road had been negotiating $1,000,000 of its bonds in Germany, and that the bonds which were in the treasury for the purpose of building certain branches, and which are now built, have been sold in Amsterdam at ninety. One hundred and thirty thousand dollars of these bonds has been previously sold. They are all thirty 7 per cent. bonds.

Adaline Derber, who keeps the Wisconsin house on Tenth street, at Oshkosh, has commenced action in the circuit court against Gustav Thom, assessor, for slander. Mrs. Derber claims that the defendant accused her of poisoning her husband, recently dead, and fixes the amount of her damage at $2,000. Thom, on the other hand, denies each and every allegation, and asserts that the story of the woman is founded on mere hearsay and false rumor.

A correspondent of a Milwaukee paper, writing from Racine says: "It has become a noted fact that Racine is becoming a bad town, and can take precedence over any town of its size in the State for the number of young loafers and out-throats who inhabit it. Hardly a night passes but what some of the hoodlums pitch on some inoffensive old man and pound him half to death, just for the fun of the thing, and when such a thing is done it is most generally laid to 'tramp'."

Madison Journal: Dr. Phil Fox has performed a very nice and difficult surgical operation on a child of Prof. Nicodemus, who was suffering terribly from membranous croup. All ordinary remedies failed to relieve the little sufferer, and the case seemed avoidable. At last resort, Dr. Fox opened the windpipe and inserted a tube designed for such purpose, affording relief, and giving hope that the life of the child may be saved. The doctor gives his entire personal attention to the case, night and day, and will achieve a great triumph should he save the little sufferer's life.

Recently, St. Vincent's Catholic church at Oshkosh, was the scene of very interesting confirmation services. The edifice was completely packed with the friends of the 290 or more little ones who were consecrated. Archbishop Henn, of Milwaukee, took a conspicuous part in the ceremony and added dignity and interest to the occasion. He was assisted by Father O'Malley, of St. Peter's church, the pastor of St. Vincent's church and one or two visiting clergymen. The services began at 10 o'clock and lasted until noon. During the time the audience manifested the greatest interest in the services.

The Milwaukee Sentinel of Oct. 31 says: "Yesterday forenoon a reporter for the Sentinel accompanied the coroner and his friends to the rooms of Mr. Blakely, in the house of W. Gressin, 311 Fifth street, to ascertain her condition. She had swallowed cholera-lydiate—a dose sufficient to have killed twenty persons on appointment—and notwithstanding the fact that she was unconscious, and skillful treatment, commenced several hours after she had administered the poison, succeeded in restoring her to consciousness."

The life of a woman with a husband and several children, who is hardly worth saving. When restored to consciousness the "frail fair one" plaintively, if not frantically exclaimed she "would rather die than live without 'Dick'—and 'Dick' wasn't her husband either."

Six Richmonds in the Field. ST. LOUIS, Nov. 4.—To-morrow being a legal State holiday, all the city officers, courts and merchants count exchange, will be closed, and business measurably suspended. The day will be given up largely to the election, and the contest in the city will be sharp although very mixed. There are six tickets in the field, some Democratic, Republican, Greenback, Socialist, Workingmen's and Citizens, and the counting will be exceedingly slow and tiresome.

NASTY NEW ORLEANS.

Its Filthiness a Standing Invitation to Yellow Fever and All Other Malarial Diseases.

A committee appointed by the mayor of New Orleans to investigate as to the sanitary condition of the city has submitted a report which says:

The committee appointed to examine into a charge made in the New Orleans Times, in an editorial on the 18th of September, that 4,000 loads of kitchen garbage, which had been hauled to the dumping-grounds by the city engineers, had been scattered by the contractors and used to fill the streets in the front part of the city, examined several witnesses, and, to confirm their statements, proceeded to the dump on Washington, below Chestnut street, where they found three acres in extent by four feet deep, a mass of rotten and decayed—the accumulation of years of kitchen garbage, dead animals, and other foul substance. Hogs to the number of two or three were feeding away the surface and feeding and fattening off the impurities below, while the stench was of the most disagreeable kind, poisoning the milk of the dairies in the vicinity, and causing sickness in every house in view.

The evidence given and the appearance of the dump is proof sufficient that four thousand loads, within the year, have been carted away to fill private squares and raise the public roads between the river and the dumps. Your committee examined many witnesses as to the condition of the unpaved streets, and their testimony was of one character, that the kitchen garbage and the offal from the markets and other foul substances were first spread on the road, then a layer of street dirt, or probably the refuse of the day, was scattered over the work, and hauled them to the dump for burial. The council passed an ordinance allowing street dirt to help for a foundation for the sidewalks, but the ordinance was not obeyed, for the contractor was not allowed to pass the street. Your committee examined into this, and the testimony of the sanitary inspectors of First district was that several loads of manure from stables was put on to fill the street, and the language of the witness—the stench was foul when he carried it off, and still more so when he unloaded it at the monument. Your committee went to the nuisance wharf at the foot of John street, where the stench intolerable for squares around.

The night soil is passed in barrels in midday through a funnel sheet iron tube into a barge below, where the matter is carried into the middle of the river, and let off into the stream. The flat boat at the sugar refinery, Third district, used as a nuisance boat, is aground, and for a while the night soil was dumped over the levee on the water side, and a shallow covering of water to hide the nuisance from view, but the attention of the board of health was called to the matter and the evil was stopped, so that now only one nuisance boat is used when there should be four, in a city having ten miles of frontage on the river.

BRUTAL SANTA CRUZANS. Scenes of Wanton Cruelty on the Revolted Red Indian Island—Knee Against Rock.

A correspondent of the New York Herald, on the island of Santa Cruz, writes:

On my way through the country I stopped at Grove place, there to witness the remains of one of the most horrible acts of cruelty and barbarism ever known. On the second night the mob arrived at this estate and found about nineteen of the estate laborers. The latter attempted to save some things and refused to join the rioters. They were then shut up in an inclosure used for storing the baggage, upon which kerosene oil was poured, and the whole was set on fire. Three or four escaped, and now lie horribly maimed in the hospital. The charred bones of the remainder are silent witnesses of the truth of the story. This act of cruelty toward the poor people shows a little change there was for any who opposed them after their passions had been fully aroused.

The conduct of some of the white people toward the negroes would seem to indicate that human nature is much the same whatever the color of the skin, and that when once the worse passions are aroused, all the effects of our boasted civilization have given us no advantage over the savage. On my way to West End I met several bands of prisoners on their way to the military depot of soldiers or volunteers. The negroes were tied to carts, and though some of them were dragged along without the slightest consideration for their condition. Some were blinded from severe cuts inflicted by volunteers, who, in their search for the fugitives, have acted in many cases like fiends. Blows with their cutlasses and pistol shots were ruthlessly and indiscriminately made. One case of prisoners as they marched along, under escort of cruelty is reported which, but for the being well authenticated, would be impossible to believe. It is to be officially investigated, and so I withhold for the present the name of the guilty party. A manager on one of the estates was helped by one of the negro overseers for two days, the negro assisting in saving many things. The third night, when things were comparatively quiet, he was off, and on reappearing the next morning was taken to task by the manager for his absence. He explained that he had gone to see if any of his private property had been saved.

"You lie," was the reply from the manager. "You went off to steal; you are as bad as the others."

"Why, massa," the negro replied, "ain't I helped you and been with you all the time?"

"A torrent of abuse and the question, 'Why should I not put an ounce of lead in you?' was the manager's answer.

"No, massa, you don't dare do that, for I ain't no nothing."

"Don't dare!" cried the then infuriated manager. "Well, take that!" and snatching the action to the word he shot him through the head. A more cold blooded, diabolical murder could not be imagined.

THE MYSTERY OF MRS. NOONAN. A Remarkable Post-Mortem Discovery at Fort Ab Lincoln—A Sexual Imposition. (Fort Lincoln Correspondence Chicago Times.)

Quite a remarkable and singular bit of news spread over the garrison here on yesterday. There has been living and attached to one of the companies of the Seventh cavalry, as landress, a person who has gone under the name of Mrs. Noonan, who was married, in 1873, to a soldier of the same company of the Seventh cavalry, having been twice married before, the first time to a man named Nash, and the second time to a man named Custer, who was killed in the light with Custer, against Sitting Bull, two years ago.

"Mrs. Noonan" has, since 1873, done the laundry work of the company to which she was attached with the best of satisfaction, and in the garrison making all kinds of fine shirts for different ones. She also professed and acted the part of midwife, and, on several occasions, has gone as far as twenty-five miles from here to perform duties of that kind, and at times giving good satisfaction. Her house was as clean as a confection, and the walls were ornamented with some very beautiful pictures. In fact everything about the house, both in and outside, was very tastefully arranged. About two weeks ago she complained of being sick, and was attended by the post surgeon, Dr. Wolveston. She grew worse, however, from the first, and on yesterday morning, the 30th inst., at 5 o'clock, died. Before dying, however, on the 29th inst., she intimated to one of the visitors present that she desired to see the priest; that she had something of a grave to reveal before she died. Rev. Father Benedict, at Washington, was sent for, and came and heard her confession. She lived until the next morning, when she expired. The residence or quarters for the landresses of the regiment is a long double building, containing about twenty rooms, each occupied by from one to two landresses. Mrs. Noonan has always been looked upon by the other landresses of the building as being a "something" between a man and a woman, and had but few associates among them. To one of them she remained a few days before her death that she desired at her death to be buried with the clothes she had on. At her death, however, her body was taken in charge by some of the women of the garrison to prepare her decently for interment, and her husband went out with his regiment in the Black Hills. In doing so they discovered, to their surprise, that the woman they had known as Mrs. Noonan was not a woman but a man. The question is, how could a man live as long as Mrs. Noonan

EXTRAVAGANCE AT FUNERALS.

How can we afford to live? is a question that has long troubled the bulk of humanity.

How can we afford to die? is becoming a question of paramount importance. The modern funeral is a luxury which few, in these hard times, can afford to indulge in, but still it is regarded as indispensable in all well regulated families, and fashion must be followed, even at funerals. Before we have shrouded in the grim and silent tomb, do we ever reflect what an expensive duty we leave to our friends? Here is a brief computation of what it will cost to bury a man in these days in only moderate style:

Lot in cemetery.....$150 00

Coffin and shroud..... 50 00

Hearse..... 50 00

Ten carriages..... 50 00
