ST. PAUL, SUNDAY, NOV. 24, 1878.

They are talking about taking the next census already. We are glad to hear it. If they only commence in time we have no doubt it will be completed by the year 1890.

The Rev. D. D. Proper has been appointed Sunday school missionary for the Baptist church in Iowa. It seems to us that his is a very proper appointment, and if he conducts himself properly the people will be greatly benefited by his missionary labors.

There was $35,000 in the treasury of the Union League club, of Philadelphia, a few days ago. There isn't a cent now. The club also had a secretary named Whipple. It has no secretary now. Put the two facts together and guess what has become of the money and Mr. Whipple.

First blood for England. She has taken the fortress of Ali Musjid from the Afghan troops, and her army is marching forward. It might be well to bear in mind, however, that the mountains of Afghanistan afford splendid opportunities for traps, in which the largest army in the world could be almost annihilated by a vastly inferior force.

"Southern citizens of the Democratic persuasion seem never to tire of politics," says the New York Times. Do Northern citizens of the Republican persuasion ever tire of politics? Locality or political faith make but little difference in human nature. Love of political excitement is ineradicable in all parts of this glorious country of ours.

Cincinnati wants to achieve the distinction of being the great musical center of the country. Where once was heard only the last despairing squeal of a festive porker, the stirring notes of Theodore Thomas' brass band now resound, and Cincinnati's adoration. And yet some of the musical critics cannot appreciate the dulcet strains of old Bill Allen's fog-horn.

An army officer went to a Washington hotel the other day and ordered a suite of twelve rooms. The clerk fairly beamed upon him and ordered a bottle of the best champagne for his entertainment. When he discovered shortly afterwards that the man was crazy, he sadly divested himself of his diamond stud and went to visit his uncle to procure the necessary funds with which to pay for the wine.

A religious writer claims to have discovered in the Afghan race the lost tribes of Israel, and religious newspapers, proverbially glib, are endeavoring to demonstrate that such is really the fact. If our recollection serves us right the lost tribes have been found at least forty times in as many years; but the offender they are found the more completely they are lost. They absolutely refuse to stay found.

The Owl club in Chicago presented an elegant floral tribute to Miss Annie Louise Cary the other day as a testimonial of regard and appreciation for her honoring one of their "hoots" with her presence, and Miss Cary has responded with a letter of thanks which fairly overflows with gush and school-girlish pleasure. The members are immensely tickled over the letter, have published it in the papers, and propose to have it framed in gold, studded with diamonds, and hung on the walls of their reception room.

This "explanation" comes from Washington that there was nothing unusual in the order of Mr. Hayes to the district attorney at Indianapolis directing him to suspend proceedings in the case of Miller, the national bank defaulter—that such things are frequently done. If such is the case there is more shame in it, and the sooner the practice is stopped the better. It is a pernicious practice, wholly in violation of law, and ought to subject the offender to prompt and exemplary punishment.

This alleged lady who created something of a stir some time since by having an announcement published in the St. Louis papers that she would shortly be married to Mr. Tilden, has apparently an inordinate passion for notoriety. She attended a wedding at New York the other day at which Mr. Tilden was present, and sought an introduction to that gentleman, which was granted. The reporter who describes the scene says that Mr. Tilden was courteous but very much embarrassed, while the girl giggled in his face, and kept up her giggling all the evening, to the infinite merriment of the company. If that young lady (?) has a mother, and that mother has a slipper, the lady and the slipper ought to form an intimate acquaintance.

The old theory that the center of the earth is a mass of molten fire seems to derive partial confirmation from the result of the examination of the Sierra Nevada mines. It has been shown that while there is an abundance of silver ore on the twenty-two hundred feet level, the temperature is so high that men cannot live there, and the lower the shafts are sunk the greater the heat becomes. We would suggest that Brothers Beecher and Ingersoll be invited to make further explorations. The result may determine some disputed theological points.

The Senatorial families at Washington are agitated at the prospect of having to recognize the bride of Senator Bruce as their social equal. Etiquette prescribes that when the wife of a new Senator, or the new wife of an old Senator, goes to Washington, the wives of other Senators shall pay her a social visit. The high-toned ladies of the capital revolt at the idea of calling upon a colored lady, and it is reported have held a conference with a view of changing the social law. Such doings are simply contemptible. If report speaks truly Senator Bruce's bride is the peer of any of them in point of intelligence or personal beauty.

GNATS AND CAMELS.

Ye blind guides, which strain at a gnat, and swallow a camel.—MATTHEW XXIII:24. Seldom, during his career on earth, did Jesus resort to denunciation and satire in rebuke of the evil conduct of those around him. A mild reproof generally sufficed. But there were occasions when the hypocrisy and deceit of the Scribes and Pharisees provoked him to the use of the keenest denunciation and invective. The stress which they laid upon the observance of the forms of the divine law, while they transgressed its spirit in their every act, taxed his forbearance to the utmost, and he poured forth such a torrent of grand satire and keen reproof that has no equal in magnificence in literature. We fancy that the sentence we have quoted above might have an application to-day to some of those who profess to follow his teachings, for every day we witness examples of churches and church people visiting with the utmost rigor some trivial violation of ecclesiastical law, while they not only endure but foster some grievous fault of camel-like proportions.

A case in point has just been made public by the trial, before an ecclesiastical court at Chicago, of a widow named Anderson and her daughter for renting a plot of ground to be used for a beer-garden. The property comprised the entire possessions of the two ladies, and on the income derived from it they depended for support. The elder lady was approached by the man who afterwards became the lessee, who stated the purpose for which he desired to rent the property. She hesitated, and in her dilemma consulted her pastor. That gentleman expostulated with her, and finally they agreed to lay the matter before the church. The lady stated her case plainly, showing that herself and her daughter were in absolute want for lack of an income from the property. She offered to delay the consummation of the lease, and if any member of the church wanted the property, or would procure a tenant for her, she would lease it to them at a less rental than that offered. The church members took no action, and in order to provide a means of livelihood she was obliged to accept the offer made her. She and her daughter were arraigned before the church of which they were members, found guilty of violating its discipline, and expelled from membership.

We have no disposition to find fault with this action. The church has a right to make what rules it chooses and to enforce obedience to them. But the church should be impartial in its action. In this instance, the widow was the gnat. The camel appeared at the trial in the person of a rich and influential member of the same church, who acted as prosecuting attorney. He pursued the ladies with a vindictiveness that was worthy a better cause, enlarging upon the horrible enormity of the offense committed. One would think from his conduct that he, at least, was blameless; yet it has for years been notorious, both in and out of the church, that he owns a number of houses in a respectable part of the city, and has rented them all, at exorbitant rates, to women of the town for purposes of prostitution. A few months ago, when the grand jury was investigating the subject with a view to the indictment of persons who rented their houses for improper purposes, this plunk of propriety was a daily promener of the corridors of the court house, and used all his influence to have the prosecution stayed. Fortunately for him he succeeded, and is to-day a member in good standing in the church, while the widow and her daughter, for doing the only thing possible for a livelihood, are outcasts.

The city of Chicago contains many similar cases. Entire business blocks owned by prominent members of the several churches are rented exclusively to brazen women of ill repute, yet the church takes no action. One person, an ex-judge, whose name figures prominently in every church council, and who occupies a front pew in a fashionable church with never-failing regularity, owns two large buildings in the business part of the town, into the upper portions of which no man or woman who values reputation will dare to enter. The rooms are occupied by the most notorious and degraded street-walkers in the city. It is well known to the authorities that nearly two-thirds of the houses used for immoral purposes are owned by church members, and are rented to their occupants with a full knowledge of their character.

These instances are not cited in justification of the practice of overlooking slight offenses, but rather to call attention to more glaring ones that are committed by Pharisaic church members. The moral cowardice that induces the church in some instances to harbor men guilty of immoral practices because they are rich and influential, and to prosecute poor men and women guilty of slight indiscretions with all their vigor, is decidedly reprehensible, and calculated to bring the cause of religion into disrepute. It is with a view to a reform in this direction—to induce a braver and more consistent course among those who ought to be blameless—that the SUNDAY GLOBE speaks thus plainly. If wrong-doing is not denounced, it will never be obliterated. In its zeal for the welfare of the church, not in any spirit of captious fault-finding, the SUNDAY GLOBE declares that these things exist and must be reformed.

Base Ball Decision.

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—Judge Loomis, in the county court this morning, decided against Ross C. Barnes in his suit to recover from the Chicago base ball club $2,500, the full amount of his salary from March 15th to November 15th, 1876. He was unable to play during that period on account of sickness and the club management refused his demand for full compensation under the contract.

Death of an Old Settler.

LITTLE ROCK, Nov. 22.—Major Elias Buter, aged 76 years, died at Fort Smith, yesterday. He was one of the early settlers of the State, coming here in territorial times as an officer of the government.

IN OR OUT OF THE BOARD? That is the Question Which Agitates Insurance Men.—The Ring Broken.

The local board of underwriters, and by sympathy the State association, are in trouble. The trouble began when Mahlon D. Miller withdrew from both associations, assigning as a cause that he could write risks at a cheaper rate than within the board, and make money and do the fair thing by the people. Moreover that the board had not adhered to its own rules and regulations. This action brought about a considerable stir among insurance men. Combined action on the part of the other agents succeeded in inducing some of Miller's companies to withdraw from him, but the greater number stood by him in the emergency. Miller's example has been followed by another prominent insurance agent of this city. Yesterday, the local board had a meeting and Mr. Charles Passavant made certain propositions to the association, which were not entertained. He announced his determination to withdraw, and left the meeting. Another meeting was called in the afternoon to harmonize the differences. Mr. Passavant declined to participate, and declared his intention in no event to be bound by the action of the board in future. Such is the present status of the affair. The board is anxious to bridge over the chasm, and entertain hopes of effecting a reconciliation. The withdrawal of a member in this manner, however, that he cannot be reconciled. That his business interests will be best subserved out of the board.

Lively Horseflesh.

A team belonging to James King, of Dakota county, attached to a hay rack, took it into their heads to canter around and warn themselves while their master was shopping at Grote's, Bridge square. They started on a jump, rushed down Bench street to Cedar; turned short around crossing Third at a gallop, over Fourth and Fifth at a break-neck speed they reached Sixth, where they turned square around and headed for Wabashaw, reaching which they again led for the bridge, and finding themselves on the road for some time put on more speed, and in supreme contempt for the notice again fast driving they peeted over the bridge like a whirlwind, overturned the Eagle bakery wagon and scattering its contents; they rushed pell-mell into a buggy belonging to Stormer & Rode, throwing the horse and smashing up the buggy. Mr. Rode barely having time to jump out and save himself, and in so doing he well might follow the example of the lunatic, Bill King. The runaway team did not stay, however, to make an inventory of damages, but sped on up the hill at the same mad speed, and if they met with no serious mishaps were doubtless among the first before the Eagle bakery wagon was wheels downwards again and the scattered pretzels collected.

Closing the Gambling Houses.

The police made a raid last night on the gambling dens. The tiger was bawled in his lair and clubs proved trumps in the game. For some time complaints have been lodged against these institutions, and after the layout had been fully arranged the call was made. Charles Brown's place on Third street near the Merchants hotel, was raided. A racket crew was found and dispersed. After this, Grey's club rooms, on Jackson street, between Fifth and Sixth, was next visited. Here the indications were that the game had just ceased as the police came. This shop was also closed. Surmising that the other establishments had gotten wind of the turn taken on their line of business, no further raids were made to-night. Proceedings last night are only the forerunner of what's to follow. The intention is expressed to close up every market of this kind in the city.

MARIE ROZE AT SARATOGA.

Grand Ovation to the Beautiful Song Queen—A Magnificent Concert.

[Saratoga Correspondence New York Herald.] Saratoga has been on tiptoe of expectation for a week. This is a rare thing for Saratoga; so rapidly do great things follow each other in the flying hours of the bright summer days, that life here almost fulfills Emerson's wish, that each moment should be so filled that there is no time for no time for regretting the past nor anticipating the future. The great excitement of the evening was the performance of the great lyric artist who has called forth the applause and won the hearts of the American people was never before marked in the minds of all as one of those bright days in the future to which all so long look forward, and whose radiance gives light by which to walk even through darkness that may lie between. The appointed time at last arrived, and though threatening and even stormy in the early part of the evening, the people flocked into the great hall of the United States until it was fairly packed in every part. The storm delayed the opening of the concert, and it was not until 9 o'clock that Stubb's superb orchestra struck the grand overture to "Der Freischutz," and the hum of conversation faded away into the glow of expectation as the sweet strains filled the hall. The vast audience was evidently in good humor from the first. The excitement of the storm, whose last echoes were just dying away, had aroused everyone from the listless indifference which performers have generally to first evening. The siren's song of the singers added to their vigorous expressions of delight, inspired the performers to put forth their best efforts, and the result was one of the most delightful entertainments ever given anywhere.

What shall we say of Marie Roze? What words can convey any idea of those sweet, pure, rich, delicious tones which seemed to gush forth from an inexhaustible fountain of melody? What gleam of vision glided across the great column of music, forced higher and higher, at last broke into spray, and their seemed full of diamonds and pearls and opals and sapphires and lighted up by the singer's lustrous beauty. Or it was the waves of the ocean, breaking on the beach by some unseen but irresistible force, which first inspire awe by their power, and then delight by their brilliance, as the white crests are broken into glittering jewels on the sand. There is no tone in Marie Roze's voice that is not round and full and sweet, and filled with delicious music. She is always wonderful; the fire with which she delivered the thrilling "Marche" showed the possession of a power of genius with hardly greater clearness than the exquisite phrasing in the little ballad "When I've nothing else to do," given in response to a double encore. She is certainly one of the royal prima donnas of the day, and her rare personal beauty seems to be but the index, and outward sign as it were, of a soul within, which is in perfect harmony with all that is lovely and pure and true. She has fairly captured Saratoga, and we trust she will occupy the throne she has won here, through many, many seasons yet to come.

Mr. Carleton created a very favorable impression, and was heartily enjoyed each time he appeared. His voice is rich and pure and his presence and method are very pleasing to the ear. He deserves to be a favorite as he is. Mr. Hatch is also a fine singer. His voice is a graceful tenor of good compass, and his execution is unusually excellent. Senor Nunez gave much pleasure in his performance as a vocalist. Liszt's famous Hungarian Rhapsody being interpreted with especial vigor and skill. Colby, the king of scoundrels, maintained his well earned fame, and that he never been surpassed by any of his contemporaries. Marie Roze was accompanied by Stubb's orchestra, and we cannot give it higher praise than to say its performance was worthy of such a voice, and its tones were blended in one grand and melodious melody, with not one discord, not one harsh nor shrill note, but all so soft and rich that it seemed as though the spirit were for the time lifted above a prater.

It was in every respect grand and most delightful performance, and though Saratoga will have many such in the future as in the past, reasons will come and seasons will go, and still the same voice will be heard, and the same presence and method are very pleasing to the ear, while as for the sweet and beautiful singer to whom we are indebted for the feast, we know all the multitude will join us in endorsing the prophetic sentiment of Shakespeare as spoken by the fair Ophelia: "There's Rose-Mary, that's for remembrance."

Funeral of the Victims of the Mine Explosion.

FERRIS HADY, Nov. 24.—The funeral of six of the miners killed by the explosion in Handford Bros' coal shaft at Sullivan, Thursday evening, took place this afternoon, two of the eight corpses being sent to other localities for interment. The bodies of the two Handford's were placed in a hearse and the other four in a large wagon. Two thousand people were in the procession. Every business house in Sullivan was closed, with the exception of the Blue Ribbon club, of which five of the men had been members, marched in a body.

Fat Stock Exhibition in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Nov. 23.—The committee of the State board of agriculture to-night completed arrangements for a fat stock show, to be held in the exhibition building, December 2, 1878. Resolutions were adopted favoring the rescinding of the rule making any animal entered here ineligible at any future exhibition so far as it refers to steers 3 years old and under. Also favoring a change of rule so that ownership of steers has been established by their owners only thirty days prior to December 1st. Parties entering fat or breeding animals for exhibition only will pay entry fees and expense necessary for preparation of quarters.

STILLWATER NEWS.

Wheat 75, 67, 54 and 45 cents.

Sebastian Bloomer, same charge, paid $20 and costs.

John Tenny, for disturbing the peace, paid $10 and costs.

The Stillwater Mills last week shipped 1,893 barrels of flour.

Frank Swartz has purchased John Cummons' residence on Fourth street, Melson's field.

Richard McGary, whose funeral took place yesterday, leaves a wife and six children in rather straitened circumstances.

No business transacted at the meeting of the board of education Friday evening, but the members amused themselves telling jokes and stories.

Wm. Colburn, who was sentenced by Judge Crosby, Wednesday, to serve a term of one year and six months in State prison for larceny, was incarcerated yesterday.

The Stillwater & Taylors Falls road yesterday shipped 600 barrels of flour, seven car loads of lumber and two car loads of piling, and received four car loads of merchandise.

F. E. Loomis, the enterprising photographer, has secured the right of Washington county for the permanent carbon photograph. This photograph is more durable than any other, has a brilliant polish and will not fade.

Young Huron, who was scalded at Mc Kusiek & Anderson's mill last summer, and sent to his friends at Point Douglas, was returned to this city yesterday to be taken care of by the county. The county commissioners engaged a room in the Mower building and had him placed there to remain until he recovers. Although still very ill, he is on a fair way to recovery.

It is reported that two business buildings in Osceola were destroyed by fire Friday evening. One of the buildings was occupied by F. G. Mayo, general merchandise merchant, who saved about one-third of his stock, and the other by Fred Stummertell, harness maker, who saved the whole of his stock but lost his household goods, which were in the upper story.

A bank of clay fell on Martin Phister, an employe of the prison, yesterday forenoon, crushing him against a wheelbarrow, and causing a comminuted fracture of the femur of the left leg. The injured man never spoke after the accident, and died in twenty minutes. Although no examination was held, it is thought that he suffered internal injuries. Mr. Phister is a German by birth, and about 60 years of age, and he has a wife and one child residing in this city. The remains were taken to his home. The bank was about ten feet high, and the men had dug in at the bottom to a depth of a foot when the accident occurred.

State deputy C. C. Clendennin, of the Independent Order of Mutual Aid, is in the city with the intention of organizing a branch order in Stillwater. The order was organized in 1874 and the supreme lodge of the United States and the grand lodge are incorporated according to law. Under the act of incorporation the order offers and will pay to the widows or heirs of each deceased $2,000 as a death benefit. The initiation fee of charter members is not less than $5, and each assessment thereafter will be $1.25, and on the death of a member his widow or heirs will receive $2,000, also $1.25 of every assessment he has paid into the benefit fund retaining the first $2 paid into the benefit fund only. We publish the foregoing for the benefit of our readers, who can see Mr. Clendennin and examine into the merits of the organization themselves.

District Court.

[Before Judge Crosby.]

The jury in the case of The State vs. Mrs. Cummings, after remaining out till 11 p. m., agreed to disagree, standing seven for conviction and five for acquittal. The jury were then excused from further attendances till notified by the sheriff.

The jury having returned a verdict of guilty in the case of The State of Minnesota vs. James Boxwell, charged with bastardy, the court adjudged the defendant to be the father of the child, and sentenced him to pay $8 a month for his maintenance, and costs of the prosecution, and to furnish bonds to the amount of $500.00 for the faithful performance of his duties. The court adjourned till Tuesday, December 3d.

Watching a Fenian Cruiser.

HALIFAX, Nov. 23.—H. B. M. steamship Tirus, which left port four days ago, it is said for Jamaica, is cruising off the harbor, having been sent to sea, it is rumored, to watch a Fenian cruiser, which, it was reported, some time ago, would attempt the capture of the steamer Sarmatian and carry off the Marquis of Lorne and the Princess Louise.

SUNDAY GLOBE LETTERS.

Bishop Odenheimer, of New Jersey, still continues in poor health.

The Rev. S. A. Gardner has resigned the pastorate of the Universalist church in Peoria.

David was of short stature. Hence his remark: "I said in my haste tall men are liars." The Rev. Charles H. Webber, a Baptist pastor in Sauc, Me., has eloped with a young woman of his congregation.
