JOHN M'CULLOUGH.

His First Appearance Before a St. Paul Rarely has it been the pleasure of a St. Pau audience to witness a more complete dramatic performance than that given at the Opera House last evening, on which occasion Mr John McCullough appeared, for the first time here, in tragedy. The play cast for the evening was "Othello," with Mr. McCullough in the title role, Mr. Charles Barron as Iago, Miss Emma Stockman as Desdemona, Mr. John A. Lane as Cassio, and Mrs. Augusta Foster as Emelia. It is not too much to say that a more complete, dramatic representation was never Emelia. It is not too much to say that a more complete dramatic representation was never given on the stage of the Opera House. Mr. McCullough was not excellent, for that might express the qualities of a less finished artist. He was the ideal of Shakespeare as interpreted by the best critics, in the fullest degree.—a Moor in aspect and in nature, rich in love, terrible in jealousy, fearful in revenge. His every act and the every intonation of his voice throughout brought vividly to the minds of the audience the fierce passions that raged in his bosom, while in nothing was the harmony or symmetry of the play in the least disturbed. In an elocutionary sense Mr. Mc-Cullough did not seem to exert himself, yet in every modulation of his voice he conveyed a every modulation of his voice he conveyed every modulation of instruction consistency as meaning that to many close students of Shakespeare had hitherto been concealed, and the character of Othello, too commonly regarded as that of a brutal barbarian, shone forth as one of the most noble of the bard's creations—a man strong in passion, confiding and simple, honorable in his impulses, yet strenuous as to his own and his associates, per-sonal honor. Mr. McCullough's Othello was not the gross character that some actors have en-deavored to make it, but the true conception given over to remorse. It was a new, yet a cor-rect, conception of the true meaning of the Mr. Charles Barron as Iago was all that the part required. As the crafty plotter against the peace and happiness of the Moor he played his part well. Few interpreters of the role have met with such complete success in every particular. His rendition of the lines was masterly in its completeness, and even Booth might not blush to own humself in Barron's place. Miss Stockman made a very engaging Desdemona, and read her ines with consummate dramatic perception In the second and fourth acts they especially effective, and won deserved applause Mr. Lane was a surprise as Cassio. He discarded the stereotyped interpretation of the character, and gave it with a strict regard to the author's ideal. In the last act Mrs. Foste displayed fine dramatic power in her reproaches of Othello and her husband Iago, and won an enthusiastic round of applause. The minor parts were all well sustained. In fact it has rarely been the good fortune of a St. Paul au-dience to witness a dramatic entertainment so well sustained in all of its parts.

This evening Mr. McCullough will appear in of the Moorish general, at first given over to unquestioning love of the fair Desdemona, then racked with jealousy, once more fired with a desire for murderous revenge, and then Sheridan Knowles' heroic tragedy of "Virginius." This is his greatest creation, a drama thrilling in its intensity and absorbing in its interest. As an interpreter of the character, Mr. McCullough has no superior on the stage to-day, and no richer dramatic treat has ever been afforded to the citizens of St. Paul that the offer of an opportunity to witness Mr. Mc Cullough in this his greatest role.

PROTECTING THE FAMILY.

Charlie Adams' Mission and His Marriage Certificate.

Twice one are two, is the arithmetic of a cas of spontaneous affection rendered at police headquarters yesterday. The object of so much female multiplication is a weazened face, diminutive man named Chastie Adams. Adams was once upon a time a biscuit shooter, or hash handler, at the Sherman house. He has now attained to the exalted station of a Singer sew attained to the exatted station of a Singer sewing machine agent, so he says, and boards at Mrs. Peterson's, corner of Fourth and Rosabel streets. There he met Miss Revine, No. 1, 18 years old, serving in the capacity of "all work." Adams has a marriage license, which he has been carrying around in his pocket for several days or more, but there being no absolute necessity, he hasn't executed it. Miss Revine has a 14-year-old sister, who looms up in inches and figure fully up to the standard appearance of a maiden of 17 or 18 years of age. A few days ago she went away from the old folks, who reside at the corner of Fifth street and Broadway, and took up her residence with Charlie and her sister, who is accommodatingly waiting Charlie's pleasure to marry her. The and her suce, who is accommodatingly watering Charlie's pleasure to marry her. The mother sought out Officer Rouleau and got him to get her young daughter from out of the tender "circumventing" influences of Adams. The officer did as requested. But yesterday morning Adams went down to the old folks and included the girl to when the property of the morning Adams went down to the old folks and induced the girl to leave with him. The old mother came up to police headquarters and made report. As Adams has captured one of her children, she is afraid for her younger daughter. Adams and the child were both brought to the station, and there he became valuable in a brotherly kind of a way, about how the dear girl was abused, beaten, etc., and how he'd protect, share his last penny with her and her sister, whose marriage certificate he toted around. It was thought talkative Charlie had enough to protect and provide for sister No. 1, and that Mary Revine could find better and safer protection at the House of the Good and safer protection at the House of the Good Shepherd. An effort to this end will be made to rescue the girl from the kindliness of her brevet brother-in-law.

Goes to the House of the Good Shepherd. The Globe spoke, yesterday, of the arrest of a dizzy Minneapolis male and female for disorderly diffusiveness. They were arraigned in the municipal court yesterday. He gave his name as Andrew Ostein; and Andrew left the court room $11.75 poorer, and the city the same amount richer, than when he came in. She had herself docketed with the romantic appellation of Rose Leslie. But there were many present who recognized her as Matilda Hays, step-daughter of Joseph Lick, famous in the Lautenschlager murder case. Only a few days ago the Minneapolis reporter of the GLOBE announced her discovery in Minneapolis. Her brother residing here thus learned of her whereabouts, went up after her, and returned with her to his home. Saturday night she slipped out of the home provided for her and took to her evil ways again, in company with Ostern. She attempted to arouse sympathy by speaking of the dark looks which greeted her at her brother's house, etc. She's full of ten cent trash and the Old Harry. To be exorcised of both, she was committed to the House of the Good Shepherd. orderly diffusiveness. They were arraigned in erstwhile volunteer department such a grand old institution. With this end in view a number of the veterans assembled in Chief Strong's office last evening for the purpose of taking preliminary action, having in view the permanent organization of the St. Paul Fireman's Monument association.

The meeting was called to order by Chief R. O. Strong, who wielded the gavel as one to the manor born, while the following named veterans, whose early associations are inseparably linked with the history of the "merchine." were among those present: Ex-Chief Frank Brewer, J. C. Prendergast, Ald. Dreis, Joseph M. Geehan, John Lesh, George W. Freeman, and a gentleman from Chicago named Mr. Thomas Mahon.

A long and interesting discussion, interspersed with pleasant reminiscences, took place concerning the proper methods to be pursued

It was decided that the monument should be composed of granite, sufficiently wide at the base panels to contain the names, with suitable ornamentations, of the chiefs and ex-chiefs of the department, together with the names of those who were identified with the voluntee with instructions to report the same at the next regular meeting. The motion resulted in the selection of the following named gentlemen: Chief Strong, Ex-Chief Brewer, J. C. Pendergast, and G. W. Freeman.

It was moved and carried that the next meeting be held on next Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock, in the hall of the association over No. 1 engine house on St. Peter street. A committee on invitations consisting of all present was formed, the agreement being to invite all ex-members of the department and citizens interested in the movement to attend the meeterested in the movement to attend the meeting on Monday evening. Vincent and Miss Georgia Morrell made quite a hit in their new sketches and proved themselves to be artists of talented merit. Miss Edith Valentine, in her new song and dance, gained rounds of well merited applause. The Iferd sisters appeared in their new society sketch entitled "No." These ladies are, without a doubt, the finest sketch artists that have ever come to St. Paul. Miss Blanche Granger, the favorite, acquitted herself very nicely. Johnny Gerin, our German and Irish friend, is still retained and keeps the audience laughing at his Irish and German witicisms.
