Playing His Usual Game of "Buy" in Washington.

THE FACTS COMING TO LIGHT

Relative to the Offer of $5,000 to Springer for His Support.

A COPY OF THE DOCUMENT

Making the Corrupt Offer to the Chairman of the Election Committee.

THE MATTER WAXING WARM

And Springer Will Call for an Investigation To-Morrow.

[Special Telegram to the Globe.]

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The reigning sensation of the day in Washington is the exposure of the attempt to bribe the Springer, chairman of the committee on elections in the Donnelly-Washburn case. This is in accordance with what has been proven against Washburn that the general belief is that the offer to Springer was prompted and authorized by Washburn in person. The Washington Post today says:

At the next regular meeting of the house election committee on Tuesday of the coming week, Mr. Manning will make certain charges against Mr. Springer, the chairman of the committee and demand an investigation to sustain his allegations against Mr. Springer in the matter of the Donnelly-Washburn contested election case.

Mr. Manning will adduce three points, which he claims to have evidence documentary and otherwise to substantiate. When Washburn's case was first referred to the sub-committee, composed of Manning, Beltzhoover, Armfield, Kiefer and Weaver, and after sufficient evidence had been taken to prove the frauds of which Mr. Washburn is now known to be guilty, an informal meeting of the Democratic members of the full committee was held at the house of Mr. Springer, at which those present unanimously agreed to support the sub-committee on any action it might take. Upon this the sub-committee went ahead and heard witnesses and arguments on both sides, and when the case was closed submitted a report, recommending the seating of Washburn and the seating of Donnelly. With this result Mr. Springer professed himself to be in sympathy. His actions lately have shown that he has experienced a change of heart. It is the alleged facts which have led to this, that Mr. Manning is anxious shall be known. Mr. Manning charges in substance that Mr. Springer has acted with the greatest duplicity throughout; that he has deceived his Democratic associates in the committee, with regard to his position, and that his conduct has been based upon corrupt grounds.

Mr. Manning presents the following evidence of this. On the 5th day of March, Mr. Springer being then in New York, a letter was received at his house addressed to him, which his wife opened. It was in substance as follows:

WASHINGTON, March 7.—To Hon. Wm. M. Springer. Dear sir—I earnestly advise that you do all in your power to prevent the House from seating Washburn, of Minnesota, and putting Donnelly in his place. If you succeed in this, I am authorized to say that a present of $5,000 will be made to your wife.

Very respectfully,
J. C. TERREY, Recorder.

Mrs. Springer, upon reading this, became very indignant, and immediately sent for the Hon. George W. Julian, of Indiana, Donnelly's counsel, and showed the letter to him. He sent for Mr. Donnelly, and the three read it and commented upon it together. Donnelly upon leaving went to Messrs. Sawyer and Colerick of the committee and told them of the contents of the letter. As he was talking to them he received a message from Mrs. Springer requesting him to call immediately. He did so and she informed him that she had doubts as to the propriety of her action in showing the letter in the absence of Mr. Springer, and requested that both he and Mr. Julian say nothing about it until her husband's return. This Mr. Donnelly promised, and visited Sawyer and Colerick and made the same request of them. Mr. Springer returned on the 9th and Mr. Donnelly immediately waited upon him, and after mentioning the fact of his having seen the letter referred to, he told Springer that he would be happy to aid him, as far as possible, to discover the author. He thought it was either Charles Johnson, Mr. Washburn's private secretary or the notorious Bill King, of Minnesota. Mr. Springer requested Donnelly to oblige him by saying nothing about the letter at all, and said, "I would not for $70,000 have it known that I have read such a letter."

"But Julian knows it," urged Donnelly. "Well, then," added Springer, "tell Julian that I shall hold him responsible if it gets into print. He will be to blame and I will take care to pay him for it."

This last remark being repeated to Julian, he became indignant and went to Springer and demanded an explanation, whereupon Springer denied that he had made any statement.

Mr. Manning, in due time, heard of the letter and daily expected that Mr. Springer would bring the matter to the attention of the committee, but this he did not do and has not done.

Mr. Manning now charges that nothing but a corrupt construction can be placed upon such conduct.

In addition, he alleges that the fact of the letter being anonymous and its general tenor show that Mr. Springer was not entirely unaware of the identity of its author, in short that the letter was sent in pursuance of an agreement. These and other facts are alleged by Mr. Manning, who considers that they warrant an investigation, and he addressed a letter to Mr. Springer Thursday, in which he formulated charges as above stated, and announced to him the course he proposed to take.

Mr. Manning being called upon, substantiated all of the foregoing. If an investigation into Mr. Springer's conduct is ordered by the committee or the house, it is expected that some startling revelations of attempts by Washburn's friends to bribe other members of the house will be brought out.

Mr. Springer stated that the article in the New York Tribune, yesterday, purporting to be a description of the scene in the elections committee, on Thursday, in which Mr. Manning violently denounced him, was entirely unfounded.

THE GLOBE HOROSCOPE.

As it Casts its Light on the Chicago Markets.

[Special Telegram to the Globe.]

CHICAGO, April 3.—Foreign markets heavy and lower on both spot and cargoes. Our market opened five-eighths lower than last evening's closing. There was an active demand, however, but mainly from local shorts. Trade was large and the market ruled very steady at $1.12% and $1.12%. Later New York improved and prices here advanced to $1.13%. At this offering were liberal and the break to the close was like shot running off a shingle. May, $1.13; June, $1.12; July about $1.06%. There has been a heap of buyers of the June options, but the class of buyers make the boys suspect a nigger in the fence, for they are known to be largely long of May. Bets are made by bidders of hundreds that June will advance seven cents before there is a decline of five cents with free takers by the bears and more wanted on this basis.

Sunshine and the favorable reports here and abroad of growing crops markedly demoralized. I think they will get little encouragement for better prices as long as this state of affairs exists.

Corn dull and listless. The demand at the national market is not so strong as it was. The straits are open, and a number of clearances have been taken out to-day. Closing May 36%, June 36% to 36%.

Provisions very dull, and no game to-day. The receipts of hogs, 10,000, are good for Saturday, the way they have been coming. The closing was a shade higher, but there was anxiety to load up. May $10.60, June $10.72% to $10.75. Lard steady, $7.07% May, June $7.17%. Hibs 3d 45 June.

INDIAN FIGHT NEAR KEOGH.

Capt. Hamilton Corrales a Party of Hostile Sioux Near Fort Keogh—Sergeant Johnson of the Second Cavalry Killed.

[Special Telegram to the Globe.]

BISMARCK, April 3.—A Fort Keogh special to the Tribune says that Capt. Hamilton's command of cavalry and mounted infantry, after a sharp long chase, came up with the hostile Sioux party which recently raided into the Crow country, and which had lost its extra pieces in a previous skirmish and had a hot running contest in which First Sergeant Johnson, of the Second Cavalry, was killed, and two other cavalrymen were laid out.

At last accounts Hamilton had the hostile party surrounded in a ravine near Fort Keogh, and Col. Davidson, commanding the district in Gen. Miles' absence, had sent out from Custer a cavalry company with a field piece to assist him. Hamilton felt sure of being able to hold the savages and, with his reinforcements, will be able to compel their surrender or exterminate them.

The cure—yes even the relief—of the trouble resisted all the efforts of friends, and the mother used St. Jacobs Oil, and with the best result. The child is once more lively and well, and what three physicians could not accomplish, has been gained by one bottle of St. Jacobs Oil.

HEAR TALK DAY IN THE HOUSE OF CONGRESS.

THE HOUSE.

FORTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

(Second Session.)

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The house met this morning, Mr. Carlisle in the chair, for debate only, and immediately went into committee of the whole on the state of the Union.

Mr. Covert addressed the committee on the subject of the revision of the tariff, and argued especially in favor of a revision of the duty on iron nails, and in favor of placing chrome ore on the free list.

Mr. Joyce spoke in support of the bill providing for the appointment of a committee on the subject of the alcoholic liquor traffic, and said the use of intoxicating drinks by the people of the country in two years cost them enough to pay the whole public debt.

Mr. Willis advocated an appropriation for a public building at Louisville.

Mr. Taylor introduced the committee in support of a bill to pension Mexican veterans.

Mr. Davis, of Missouri, advocated the passage of a bill to open up mail service and direct trade between the States of the Mississippi Valley and Europe.

Mr. Barry argued in support of a bill regulating the immigration of Chinese.

Mr. Page endorsed the speech of his colleague.

Mr. Sparks spoke in relation to the question of internal commerce, arguing that it was in the power of Congress to fix the tariff or rates to be charged by interstate railroads for the transport of freight and passengers, and the approval of the bill adopted by the majority of the committee on commerce upon the subject, but stated that the Reagan substitute seemed eminently satisfactory, though it was not as comprehensive or broad as, in his opinion, it should be.

Mr. Hawk replied to a speech made some time ago by Mr. House, in which that gentleman had opened the Tilden campaign and reiterated the cry of fraud. The speaker expressed the sentiment of the people of Tennessee. If he had expressed that of his party his speech would stand as a lasting monument to the vilified and militant hate of that party.

The country was told there had been no loyalty in the South during the war and it had been told that the Copperheads of the North were the most venomous serpents in the world. He stated that there had been many loyal men in the South, and that that section had furnished the federal army with nearly half a million of men.

It seemed that this service was to be forgotten, and the Tilden campaign was based on the policy that friendship to the Union was to be regarded as a badge of political infamy and social dishonor. His colleague (House) had attacked the president, and he would attempt to defend the president, for he could not defend a defense. For his colleague to assert that President Hayes had been inaugurated by fraud was equivalent to making an admission that the Democracy had been deceived enough in 1871 to force a war without cause, but too cowardly to do so in 1877, when it said that a President had been counted in by unconditional fraud. How had the mighty fallen!

The Democracy had been deceived enough in 1871 to force a war without cause, but too cowardly to do so in 1877, when it said that a President had been counted in by unconditional fraud. How had the mighty fallen!

caused by certain negroes resisting arrest; when such affairs got into the hands of men not having the interest of the State at heart the better chances could not control them. This explained such riot.

A. S. Alexander, one of the colored men referred to by the last witness as having gone to Kansas and returned to Louisiana, testified to Mr. Voorhees that he had mules, wagons, cattle and $750 when he went to Kansas. He went because he had heard so much about Kansas being a fine country. It did not suit him at all. He was one of a party of little and big, eighty head, who went to Montgomery county. The negroes on the plantation had sent a delegate and supported him and forwarded money to buy land, but when they reached there the agent would not give any account of the money, though he had been keeping glowing accounts of the country to the negroes on the plantation. Witness' mother-in-law died from the effects and he got disgusted. The witness had been cheated in Louisiana by his employers, and only got a barrel of flour for a year's work. He had made $750 in a year on Foster's plantation. When he applied for work in Kansas the whites said, "Oh, man, it's all we can do to make a living for ourselves."

Wash Walter, another of the emigrants who returned to Foster's plantation from Kansas, corroborated Alexander's story. His trip to Kansas cost him $300 and Alexander's trip cost him $500.

Janus Rios, colored, of Caddo parish, testified to Mr. Voorhees that he had five or six hundred acres of land and a large amount of cattle and implements. He cultivated cotton, hiring men, but utilizing his children's help. He was a slave until emancipation and has accumulated this property since then. He and his neighbors were almost always well off and he thought any industries and prudent man could do as well. He valued his property at $8,000 or $10,000. He believed the interests were the same as those of the people among whom he lived, and sought to harmonize his views with theirs. There were public school facilities in his neighborhood, but he and his fellows preferred to employ private teachers. Witness voted the Democratic ticket for the reason that his white neighbors did. If the rest of negroes should do so there would be no trouble. Adjourned.

Palmer or Congressman Morrison, of Illinois, for the second place on the ticket.
