ST. PAUL, MONDAY, APRIL 5, 1880.

BLAINE seems to be ahead of all competi tors in Iowa. He made good use of his time during his visit to that State last year, and the probabilities are that he will have the full delegation of Hawkeyes at his back at Chicago in June.

One Presidential boom has been nipped in the bud. John Swinton, who was mentioned as the probable candidate of the Socialist party, writes to inform his admiring friends that he is inelligible on account of having been born on foreign soil. The followers of the notorious Kearney will therefore have to look elsewhere for Presidential timber. We would suggest that the Rev. Mayor Kalloch. of San Francisco, might be an available can-

It will with the critic on this point. be found that when the convention meets that the party in New York will be practinominee, no matter who he may be.

Vessels are now lying in the port of Chicago loaded with 2,575,000 bushels of corn, 189,000 bushels of wheat, 77,000 bushels of oats, 78,000 bushels of rye, and 29,000 bushels of flax seed. As the straits are now practically open, this vast amount of grain before the close of the present week. There any obligation to do so. This announceare vessels with a carrying capacity of over a million bushels still unloaded in the port many perturbed souls who have supposed that named, all of which will obtain charters defense of Washburnism was essential to within a few days.

It is very evident from advices received up to date from Missouri that Grant will have a large majority in the State convention shortly to be held, and will be able to secure the editor announces that he "suspects" this a solid delegation of thirty votes from that "unjustifiable outrage" "has always been him, is getting to be pretty well understood on State. This number, together with those already elected and instructed for him, will give him over two hundred votes that can be depended on to vote for him first, last and all the time. Less than half of the States have made their selections, however, and he can confidently expect large reinforcements in Some Democratic newspapers are objecting to the candidacy of Gov. Seymour on account of his age. He is not yet seventy years old, just about the age of Lord Beaconsfield when he last assumed the reins of power in Great Britain, and no one can claim that his administration has lacked vigor, or that he has in any way lost his mental powers. Gov. Seymour is fully able to administer affairs of state with ability, and would run like a quarter-horse in all parts of the Union, distancing every competitor. There is little doubt but he will accept the nomination if tendered him.

THE GLOBE, as at present advised, does not believe that Mr. Springer entertained the corrupt proposition sent him by some of the Washburn gang, but he certainly makes a very lame excuse for his change of heart. He says when he expected to vote for seating Donnelly he had not heard Washburne's side of the case as presented by Gen. Kiefer. This is thin. Kiefer presented no testimony All the testimony taken was printed months ago. When he stated he should vote to unseat Washburn and seat Donnelly the evidence was before him and neither Manning's or Kiefer's digest had been presented to the committee. He will have to invent some other reason if he hopes to give a plausible excuse for his flop.

A WELCOME INVESTIGATION.

The investigation which Mr. Springer will ask and doubtless secure to-morrow, is one which he should have sought immediately upon the receipt of the bribe giver's proposition to pay $5,000 for his vote. That was Springer's mistake. The GLOBE is loth to believe that any pecuniary consideration influenced Springer's change of heart, but his conduct in desiring the existence of the offer to be kept private gives color to the charge, however groundless it may be. It is time that it should be understood that it is dangerous to make corrupt propositions to public men even in an covert manner. If an the political saint. investigation had been ordered day after Springer received the proffered bribe it would have been much easier to trace the authority than at present. Of course no reasonable person has any doubt of the source which inspired the bribe. The evidence taken in this district shows that Washburn relied on bribery to secure his election and his own party are on record as declaring that he bought his nomination. That he should attempt to pursue the same tactics in retaining his seat is not surprising. The burglar who invades a building for the pur- difficulty. poses of plunder may have no intention to commit murder and still he may do so to escape detection, and committed the first murder he may kill the policeman who pursues, to still further stop. The first downward step, he is forced onward beyond his original intention. He must conceal his original scoundrelism by resorting to still greater. He almost ceases to be a free moral agent. In fact we might, with propriety, say that he becomes a very free immoral agent.

While the public will have no doubt of the inspiration of the attempted bribe, a positive conviction would prove an awful warning for those who might be inclined to engage in Washburnism. It is to be hoped the committee will still be able to probe the matter to the bottom.

If a sub-committee could be sent to Minnesota, a mine of scoundrelism could be developed which would make present developments seem insignificant. All that is necessary is power and means to compel witnesses to be present and the meat will be produced.

MODEL DEFENSE OF WASHBURNISM. The most unique vindication of Mr. Bill Washburn which we have met appears in the columns of our esteemed cotemporary, the Rochester Post. Most of the Republican papers fall to abusing Donnelly, fire a few heavy shots at the Democracy on general principles and wind up with a shout about 3,000 majority. That, they consider, settles it.

The Post approaches the subject with a philosophical, "they all do it" sort of an air and finds a great deal of comfort in the developments. It announces that no one could be elected in this district "without a resort to club, Wednesday, June 30th, have been ansome means that Geo. William Curtis and political saints of his sort would disapprove of." We presume that this is intended to indicate that "political saints" are fools enough to favor political honesty. Our critic having conceded that the "political saints" do not reside in the Third Minnesota District, confesses his disappointment. He says "one would expect to find some revelations of unusual skullduggery in the report of the committee, but they will be disappointed." The editor of the Post displays a familiarity with this district which almost leads us to suppose that he has resided in Minneapolis. He is disappointed, not because the report failed to expose "skulduggery" but it was simply the "usual" kind of "skulduggery," such as buying up an election, etc. Nothing short regular Democratic convention at Syracuse in of some rascality more monstrous than choosing a delegation to Cincinnati. They | Washburn's would be regarded by our coappreciate the fact that it will be dangerous temporary as "unusual" for the Republican to oppose the party in an election of such | party, and the Globe is constrained to agree

He approaches the details with commendable resolution. "The voting for Washburn cally a unit in support of the Cincinnati of a couple of camps of lumbermen is shown." The editor concedes that this was an "entirely unjustifiable outrage." He is working too straight, from the shoulder to assume that the Republicans of the Washburn stripe repudiate this "unjustifiable outrage,"but he cautiously declares that "no Republican is under obligation to defend it." That is excellent; the Republicans do defend will probably be en route for the seaboard political outrages, but they are not under ment will undoubtedly be a great relief to party loyalty. Our Republican friends. however, should not be led into any hasty repudiation of rascality by the authoritative announcement that they are under no obligation to defend it, for in the next breath practiced up there." In other words they not only "all do it" but have always done it. | thing but favorable comment with which is This is a strong point for Washburn.

The next point in this remarkable vindication is a settler. The buying up of men by the wholesale is conceded, but astonishing as it might seem to a political saint they were "presumably unscrupulous fellows," and as if that was not sufficient defence they went cheap. "Cheap bummers" who only demanded a "cheap price" and rendered "cheap services," is the way our champion of Washburnism explains that there was no corruption about it. The Post was doubtless again the victim of disappointment when it found that the market price of voters in the Third Minnesota district is not exorbitant, and hence it finds an excuse for Washburn's bribery on the ground that they were "cheap bummers" and sold themselves at a "cheap price." Regulating the standard of morality by the price paid for the scoundrelism is certainly worthy of Washburnism.

The only other feature presented is that these "unjustifiable outrages" which Republicans defend without being under any obligation to, were perpetrated by the Republican committee and not by Washburn in person. The Post concedes that there is a "single instance" where it is asserted Washburn did the bribing personally, but the fellow he bought is denounced as a "dead beat." Of course, this excuses Washburn if the fellow he bought was a "dead beat," and if he bought him "cheap" it is rather a virtue than otherwise.

After making so clear a defense of Washburnism, we are surprised that the Post should fall back on the committee as an excuse for Washburn personally. As a matter of fact, the working portion of the committee consisted of Charley Johnson and such other clerks as Washburn hired. Charley Johnson was sent out through the district to buy the nomination away from Dr. Stewart, and, having succeeded in that, Washburn had him appointed secretary of the committee. The committee headquarters were removed from St. Paul to Minneapolis in order to be near the source of supplies, and the skulduggery, which we are assured by our esteemed contemporary is not "unusual" in the Republican party, followed. Washburn ought to head the Post article with a wood-cut of himself, and circulate it broadcast as a personal vindication of a HORSE AND TRACK.

Dr. Mintzer Sight-Seeing Among the Thoroughbreds of Kentucky-Chicago Jockey Club Board of Trade Stakes Handicap-Jim Keene's English Stable-Miscellaneous Notes.

AMONG THE THOROUGHBREDS OF KENTUCKY. A letter dated Lexington, Ky., March 29, brings the information that Dr. W. L. Mintzer is in that section for the purpose of picking up some thoroughbreds and a trotting stallion to bring to Minnesota, of which he expects to seoure at least one car load. The Doctor is an old horseman, but his Kentucky visit seems to be furnishing him a genuine surprise. He says it is nothing but horse, horse, wherever he goes. At Lexington he saw some ninety head in training, and the country is full of tracks where horses are being trained for run ning or trotting, or broken for saddle purposes His greatest surprise, however, was when he was shown a three year old stallion who could turn a mile track in a square trot in 2:25. The animal was sired by George Wilkes, and the Doctor was given the privilege of becoming his owner upon the payment of $10,000. The Doctor describes him as a fine formed bay, and, in fact, the best horse, to his eye, he ever saw, but he remarks that he would not be justified in buying him for Minnesota, as he would get but lit tle, if any, better patronage than second rate sires, an opinion that is justified by the experience of R. Barden, C. A. DeGraff, Willi Baker and other enterprising breeders. But the Doctor should recollect that Minnesota is growing in intelligenbe as well as in popula-

WEIGHTS FOR THE BOARD OF TRADE HANDICAP The weights for the Board of Trade Handicap stakes, to be run on the first day of the second meeting of the Chicago Jockey and Trotting nounced. They are arranged upon the light or descending scale, as opposed to the heavy or ascending scale in the English handicaps. The idea of the British handicapper is to penalize a fast horse by weights proportioned to his per-formances, thereby bringing him down to the level of the slower horses, and, of course, making a slow race. The Chicago plan is exactly the opposite. Weight for age is assumed as top-weight, and the imposts are graded down ward from that point in proportion to the ecognized capabilities of the contestants, thus giving the recognized leader his head at his ordinary impost, while the others are put on ar equality with him as far as possible by lighter of course, securing faster races than Under this handicapping for the Board of

THE ENGLISHMAN'S IDEA OF FAIR PLAY. The sharp practice of the stewards of the Liverpool cup race by which Lorillard's Parole was defrauded of his victory of beating both the handicapper and the horses pitted against this side of the water, and is leading to any coupled reminiscences of the past, where similar tactics were resorted to in connecof the Cincinnati Enquirer, writing from Levington, Ky., says of the feeling in that great horse and racing center:

I found the same state of opinion in Lexington at Paris in regard to the indisposition of Englishmen toward American borses. The Live Stock Record attempts to prove, with a success that cannot be doubted so far as present advices in regard to the Liverpool Cup race throw light upon the subject, that Parole and Strathblane, the second horse in the race as placed by the judges, were running side by side, and in by the judges, were running side by side, and in identically the same relative position in regard to by the judges, were running side by side, and in identically the same relative position in regard to Advance; that, consequently, if Parole fouled, Stratbblane fuoled, and should have been visited with the same punishment. Kentuckians feel peculiarly sensitive on this point, taken in connection with the remarkable handicapping, because the best of the American horses in England, with the exception of Parole, are Kentucky bred. The yremember the persecution which followed Mr. Ten Broeck's horse Umpire in 1880, in the shape of continually reappearing protest against the horso's age, in spite of the fact that the colt was examined in the first part of his career by the best veternary surgeons of England, and pronounced by them to be of the age which Mr. Ten Broeck claimed for him. The last appearance of the charge resulted in a public apology by its maker, who acknowledged that he had had no grounds whatever for his action. Count La Grange's great horse Gladiateur, the Derby winner of 1865, was the object of a jealousy which took the same form and led to the same result. The Englishman is fond of fair play, but more so of victory. shman is fond of fair play, but more so of victory.

St. Charles Times-Dem. I

We know of no Democrat of any prominence who would justify the unseating of a Republican Congressman who had been fairly and honestly elected. Such an act was never committed by the Democratic party and there is no just reason for believing that such an unwarranted act ever will be committed by them. Donnelly, however, believing that he had been deprived of his election by bribery, corruption and intimidation contrary to law, sought to secure his alleged rights throught the proper and lawful mode of procedure in such cases, as he had a right to do. He instituted a contest under the forms of law, and proceeded to take testimony in the case at the proper time and in the proper manner. The testimony showed the charges of bribery, corruption, intimidation and illegal voting in the interests of Washburn to be true, which in extent and effect was so damnable as to put to the blush the methods of Louisiana, and deterred his opponent from making a bad matter worse by any attempt at rebuttal, hoping, no doubt, to cheek it through by blowing the fog-horn of the party placed in the mouth of every little slalwart who had more wind to spare than he had brains to exercise. At least the method adopted proves this to have been the policy of Washburn.

[Swift County Courier.] Public Examiner Knox seems to have got into hot water in his report of the examination of the auditor and treasurer's offices of Ramsey county. He censures Auditor Davis in the report to an extent that the auditor could not stand and so the latter arises to remark that the report of the examiner is unjust, and in as much as the Dispatch, a Republican newspaper—in fact the Republican newspaper of St. Paul-takes sides with the auditor and against the examiner, it looks as though spite or partisanship much to do with the getting up of Knox's report. The Republicans nominated for mayor, Dr. G. W. Wood. It seems that the whole fight hangs upon the office of chief of police, and it was rumored here that Hon. G. W. Batchelder, the Democratic nominee for mayor, had pledged support to the present chief, Dunham, acting upon which the sorehead Republicans nominated Dr. Wood. It seems evident that Tilden's bar'l has been opened here. Mr. Batchelder absolutely denies having pledged to any one. Batchelder will be elected, however. I the fight.

THE SHERMAN-MEDILL WAR.

The Secretary's Next Friend Declares it is All True About Joseph.

[Cincinnati Enquirer.] The quarrel between Secretary Sherman and Mr. Joseph Medill, editor of the Chicago Trib. une, having reached the danger point, an Enquirer reporter yesterday sought out Hon. Warner M. Bateman in hopes that he would be able to make peace by a word of explanation. What Mr. Bateman had to say rather widens the breach between two eminent gentlemen who should dwell together in unity. Mr. Bateman, in a speech delivered at Cummins-ville recently, stated in effect that Mr. Medill's hostility to Secretary Sherman was due to the fact that Medill had made a personal appear to Sherman to change his policy of resumption, concluding with a threat that if he did not do so, he (Medill) would begin an attack on him Sherman) that would ruin him. Mr. Medill denies that any such interview between him and Secretary Sherman ever took place. A Washington telegram to the Philadelphia Press etting forth these facts was handed to Mr. Bate man, with the request that he would give the

Enquirer any further information regarding

Mr. Bateman replied to this effect:
"When I learned that Mr. Medill was carry-the controversy of which he might be posses

ing on a bitter warfare against Secretary man to gratify a personal spite, and out of a spirit of pure revenge, then I said the first opportunity that presented itself I would give the facts to the public. The facts are these: Mr. Medill called on Secretary Sherman at the treasury department in Washington, and endeavored to induce him to change or modify his policy of resumption. Mr. Medill stated that the passage of the resumption act would ruin business, increase bankruptcy and break up every national bank in the country. He stated further that he himself was bank in the country. He stated further that he himself was involved, and he knew that resumption would bankrupt him. Mr. Sherman replied that he was there to perform his duty as he saw it. It was not in power to change the resumption act, if he desired so to do, and if it was passed into a law he could only see that its provisions were carried out. Mr. Medill then changed his tactics, and threatened the secretary. He said if his demands were not complied with in regard to the resumption act he would begin and attack upon him in his newspaper, that he would eventually ruin him. Mr. Sherman, in reply to these threats, repeated that he intended to do his duty. Mr. Medill then returned to Chicago, and since that time he has carried on a bitter and vindictive warfare against Sherman

'When did this interview between Mr. Medill and Secretary Sherman take place?" "About one year before the passage of the resumption act. When did the Tribune's attacks begin?"

"Immediately after Mr. Medill's return to Chicago, and they have been kept up in one way and another ever since."
"But, Mr. Bateman," said the reporter, "Mr. Medill says this alleged interview never occurred, and that he never attempted to dissuade Secretary Sherman from carrying out the provisions of the resumption act, on the other hand, Secretary Sherman says the interview did occur, and that Medill labored with him and threatened hlm. Do you know that Sherman's statement is correct?"

"I know that it is absolutely correct. It is not a question of veracity between Mr. Sher-man and Mr. Medill; the conversation was heard by others. This Mr. Medill did not know, and he is probably ignorant of it yet. It is a fact, however, that other gentlemen heard what was said on both sides. Mr. Medill is hard of hearing, and, like most people afflicted in that way, he talks louder than is necessary; and in this case he had a larger audience than he expected he had." "Who are the persons who overheard the conversation?"

"I will not give their names at present When it is important that the names should be given I will give them. Just now I will not." "You are certain that such an interview took

"I am positive of it, and I know that what Secretary Sherman's friends have said about it is correct in every particular.' In connection with the above Mr. Bateman wished to correct a statement attributed to him that Mr. Medill's hostility grew out of the refusal of Mr. Sherman to make some appointment for him. "I stated to the reporter, said Mr. Bateman, "that Mr. Medill had made

ing the resumption act, and the reporter under stood that it was an application for an appoint

* AMUSEMENTS.

METROPOLITAN THEATRE This evening a grand double bill is announced at this popular amusement resort, and it is seldom that a more attractive programme has been presented in this city. The evening's entertainment commences with the ever popular picture of Irish life in days with the ever popular picture of Irish life in days gone by, entitled "Ireland as it Was." This play abounds in features that command the attention and elicit the commendation of all classes of theater-goers. When placed on the stage in the excellent manner that characterizes all the productions of the Metropolitan company, none can fail to be delighted with it. The public have long wished to witness another performance of Mr. Murray's great specialty, entitled "Solon Shingle," and now he has consented to satisfy them this evening. "Solon Shingle," as rendered "Solon Shingle," and now he has consented to satisfy them this evening. "Solon Shingle," as rendered by Mr. Murray, is the same eccentric old Yankee farmer that John E. Owens and others present to the admiring gaze of a fun loving public, and yet his personation is in many respects very different and by many considered superior to all others. There is something entirely original in every new performance and the audience is almost constantly kept in a roar of laughter. Don't miss this last opportunity.

At the Academy of Music, this evening, Bartley Campbell's great Galley Slave company make their first appearance and will doubtless receive the warm first appearance and will doubtiess receive the warm reception justly due them. INSIDE HISTORY.

How Evarts Took Mr. Haves' Proclamation [Washington Special, April 1.]

A bit of inside diplomatic history has leaked out, which sheds a deal of light upon the relations which exist between the President and his secretary of State, and the reasons which induced the latter to take the very unusual course of sending a special message of his own to Congress, as a sort of addenda or attach-ment to the President's message upon the inter-oceanic canal question.

It appears that when the question of the intrappears that when the question of the in-ter-opeanic canal first began to attract public attention, and as it became evident that the country was pretty decidedly opposed to al-lowing any foreign government to build a ship canal, and had a weakness for the time-honored policy known as the "Monroe doc-trine," Sir Edward Thornton, the British minister here, became a good deal agitated upon the subject, and was exceeding anxious to head off any such official announcement of the posi-tion of this country upon that question as was made by the President in his message, and as made by the President in his message, and as embodied in the resolution now pending before the special House committee on the canal. Naturally he went first to Secretary Evarts, who, as he knew very well, held views antagoon this question, and asked him what probability there was that this government would take any official action in the matter. Secretary Evarts made light of the British minister's fears, and assured him over and over again upon divers occasions that the whole thing was merely a passing cloud, and that it would never arrive at the dignity of Congressional action, much less be made the subject of special attention in the message from the President. The secretary stuck to this text until he finally learned officially that a message was to be sent in upon the subject. Thornton learned of it about the same time and again hied him to Evarts in a more perturbed state than before. The secretary again sought to comfort him and assuming that the usual custom would be adhered to, and that the secretary of state would be allowed to write this, as he does most messages of the President, assured Minister Thornton that he need have no fears about it; that he (Evarts) would have the writing of the message, and he would see to it that there should be nothing in it at all obnoxious to the British minister and his government. It should be of persons pretending to be friends came up from behind and tapped him on the shoulder, merely a mass of words and general platitudes, and should say nothing that amounted to any thing. This interesting out-giving of diplomatic secrets on the part of the secretary of state was made at a little private dinner party at the English minister's house. About ten days later the President treated his secretary of state to a little surprise party by reading him the message which the President himself had prepared upon the inter-oceanic canal question. upon the inter-oceanic canal question. The amazement, mortification, chagrin and anger of Secretary Evarts can be better imagined than described. He used his utmost efforts to persuade the President to change his mind and allow the secretary to send in a different mes-sage, but the President was obdurate, and the secretary found himself badly left. He was obliged to inform Thornton of the situation of obliged to inform Thornton of the situation of affairs and get out of his dilemma with that gentleman as best he could. The only concession which the President would grant to his secretary was permission for the latter to send in a message of his own with that which the President himself had written. It was a terrible come down for the secretary who has a feeling of appreciations content for the schiltring of supercilious contempt for the abilities of most of his official associates, including the President himself, but it was the best that could be done, and the secretary decided to take the course he did in order to give a sort of

has existed for some time between the Presi-dent and Secretary Evarts has not been narrow.
