ST. PAUL, FRIDAY, JUNE 10, 1881.

This is an off year in politics, and it is by no means a dead year thing that Charles Foster will be elected governor of Ohio. Allen G. Thurman would give him a lively tussle.

SCHUYLER COLFAX has been heard from on the Conkling-Garfield business. But Colfax's opinions are of no interest to anybody, and what is the use of mentioning the fact that he has any?

A cable dispatch says that the number of outrages in Ireland is increasing, but it does not say whether these outrages are being perpetrated by the peasants or by the police and military. It is more than probable that the latter agencies are the guilty parties, for without outrages by the peasants would be peaceable enough to suit even the British government.

The Republicans of Ohio re-nominated Foster for governor, but they did not renominate Hickenlooper for lieutenant governor. What has Hickenlooper done or failed to do to merit this slight? He was one of the chief contributors to the campaign fund last fall, and did good work on the stump. Hickenlooper has a right to demand a vindication, and he ought to have it.

SENATOR LOGAN, of Illinois, was one of those who went to President Hayes and told him something ought to be done about the star route contracts. Carl Schurz, secretary of the interior, was another who advised an investigation. The result of the investigation, and yet Senator Logan and Secretary Schurz have been insisting all along that Hayes' administration was the cleanest with which the country has been favored for half a century. This is a sort of consistency that does not consist.

The military and police in Ireland are reported to be disgusted at being ordered to go from one part of the island to another to serve as targets for the people. If a man hires out to a master that requires such service, however, he has no right to complain if a stray bullet or bullet goes through his head.

GEN. SHERMAN denounces Jeff Davis for falsehood in his lately published book on "The Rise and Fall of the Confederacy," and asks why he did not make his statements as to his brutality at Atlanta in 1864. Probably Davis knew that his statements would have no effect, and waited till the heat of the combat between the States had cooled. He makes out a pretty good case against Gen. Sherman, however, which the latter will find it hard matter to dispute.

SOME idiotic newspaper correspondents at Washington and Albany are asserting that Conkling intends, if defeated in his present contest for a return to the Senate from New York, to become the Democratic candidate for President in 1884. It takes two to make a bargain, and while the Democrats will, no doubt, be thankful to Mr. Conkling for whatever assistance he may render them in the next Presidential campaign, it is not at all likely that they will adopt him, the most implacable foe the party has ever had, as their standard bearer. It is Conkling's business to tear down; the Democrats will build upon the ruins.

For several years past—ever since the crusade—the people of Ohio have been agitated on the subject of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors. The late Republican State convention was forced to take some action on the subject and consequently resolved:

That the public interests require that the general assembly should submit to a vote of the people such amendments to the constitution of the State relative to the manufacture, sale and use of intoxicating liquors as shall appear to be wise and proper.

This is what Capt. Cutter would call "an opinion as is an opinion." It simply asks the legislature to pass a law asking the people to leave the question precisely where it is at present. Only this and nothing more.

PLATT. The scripture—or some other book—moveth us in diverse ways and sundry places to exhort every tub to stand upon its own bottom. Whether it is the bible or any other work that contains the bible is immaterial, as long as the advice is good, which this unquestionably is. Men are in this age and generation, when intelligence is so widely diffused, ought to be capable of acting upon their own responsibility—upon their own appreciation of right and wrong, and the other matter of general concern. Especially should this be the case with those chosen to fill high official stations. They are elected on the presumption that they are competent to judge not only what will be best for the people, but what the people most desire, and if they fail in either of these respects, they lose the esteem of their constituents and of the country at large.

The contempt which ex-Senator Platt has been treated ever since his election to the Senate, and more particularly since his resignation of that office jointly with Mr. Conkling, is easily attributed to the fact that he was a tub of rather small dimensions in his own opinion, and could not stand on his own bottom. As a business man he has been successful in a high degree; as a politician he has relied almost entirely upon others for direction as to his course. Early in his career as a politician, he took Conkling as his guiding star, and has not since sought to disengage Mr. Conkling's political sagacity. He has proved himself a good broad comprehension and usually a good judgment. But he is not infallible, as

THE COURTS. District Court. [Before Judge Young.] Watson & Bartholow vs. N. R. Thompson, still on trial. The evidence adduced yesterday was certainly damaging to the cause of the defense. Mr. Morse had been in charge of one of the departments of Mr. Harwood's store, and had been entrusted with the exclusive charge of all purchases made for his department. This was virtually his prerogative. But during the month of September last, Mr. Harwood had been obliged to figure in this particular part of the business. He told Morse to order at once seventy-five dozen white shirts. Morse had interfered in any manner with what they already had even too large a stock on hand. A few days subsequent Mr. Harwood was again treated with the extreme order for rubber goods was sent, and in the season of the year when there was actually little demand for them, Mr. Harwood had the goods ordered acting was ordered. These goods could not be sold until the next summer. Mr. Morse also testified that Mr. Harwood had never before interfered in any manner with his one occasion, and further, that he had on his own part gone into the counting-room of the store and secured Mr. Harwood upon the subject. Mr. Harwood at once made him to step aside from him, when he privately told him that he did not wish anyone to know any thing relating to this matter, and that the reason for the procedure was simply because he anticipated a rise in freight tariff and in the price of the goods.

Woman's Wisdom. "She insists that it is more important, that her family shall be kept in full health, than that she should have all the fashionable dresses and styles of the times. She therefore sees to it, that each member of her family is supplied with enough Hop Bitters, at the first appearance of any ailment, to keep the system in perfect health, to prevent a fit of sickness with its attendant expense, care and anxiety. All women should exercise their wisdom in this way."—New Haven Palladium.
