Politics in Wisconsin.

[Special Telegram to the Globe.] EAU CLAIRE, Wis., Sept. 26.—The Democrats of this section are beginning to take more interest in political matters. The Remore interest in political matters. The Republican state ticket is very unpopular, and there is now a good prospect that thousands of Scandinavians will break away from that party. There is a strong feeling in this part of the state for the nomination of Hon. Mons Anderson, of La Crosse, for governor on the Democratic ticket. It is believed that he would carry this congressional district by a handsome majority, though it usually gives 5,000 or more the other way.

The Best Remedy for Chapped Hands Is Hegeman's Camphor Ice. It should be rubbed upon the part affected. The warmth of the skin will soften it sufficiently, under ordinary circumstances, but in extreme cold weather it may be necessary to warm it by the fire. If the hands are badly chapped, apply every night, and protect the hands by wearing an old pair of kid gloves. Hegeman's is the best and most popular of all the Campber Ices made. Hegeman's Camphor Ice is also a ture for sore lips, chapped face, and sunburn. It is compounded with glycerine, which reniers it more emolient than any other Camphor Ice, and will be found a most soothing application to the face after shaving.

Be sure to ask for Hegeman's (formerly made by Hegeman's Co., New York, and now made by the Metropolitan Med. Co., of New Haven, Conn...) and do not be put off with any other compound which may become rancid and do you more harm than good. No man, since the days of Washington, in his public career, more clearly exemplified the moral grandeur of the really truly great American statesman, than did James A. Garfield. As a gladiator in the political arena, he was just, kind, magnaminous. As a patriot in the field, he was true to the union, to the flag, to principles. As a man, honest, sincere, pure. As President, impregnable to the assaults of corruption, incorruptible, moving on that high plain of statesmanship to which the people bowed with reverence, and love, and admiration, and sublime faith, and cherished hopes. And then, in the hallowed mellowness of his matured life, surrounded with loving friends and a devoted and endeared family circle; proud in the consciousness of having wronged no man; walking God's free earth ily circle; proud in the consciousness of having wronged no man; walking God's free earth "the noblest Roman of them all," in a moment of innocent enjoyment, he is struck down by the bullet of the assassin, and this great nation of 50,000,000 of people, sway too and fro, as the tidings came ticking over the wires, "The president is shot!" How tremulously human hearts beat! How lips quivered! How voices faltered ere words were uttered! How anx faltered ere words were uttered! How anxiously people gathered in groups, and in whispered tones discussed the probabilities of the great and good man's death! Human energies were paralyzed. The globe itself appeared to stop on its axis: tears seemed to gush from the sixty all patters were from the sky; all nature wept.

And then, for days, and weeks, and months, how patiently the people of all sects, of all denominations, of all political creeds, of all colors, waited and hoped and prayed that James A. Garfield might live. The great human heart became a thermometer of hope human heart became a thermometer of hope and fear. The morning's dawn brought sunshine; the evening's shadow darkness and despair. And all this time, lying upon his couch, so calm, so pleasant and resigned, so n oble, so heroic, so grand, was James A. Gar-FIELD, passing slowly, but surely passing into the shadow of death.

Neither ancient nor modern history can record a scene more sublimely touching or inexpressibly heroic, than that of our martyred president as he layed upon his bed of sickness, tortured with pain, racked with fever, the great American nation bending over and carefully watching his emaciated form, as day after day it threw off its materiality and began putting on the habiliaments of a higher and a nobler life—nothing, I say, in history has a parallel to this impressive scene during the last earthly days of James A. Garfield, who, amid it all was serene, hopeful, patient, trustful: not afraid to die, not anxious to live. Neither ancient nor modern history can trustful; not afraid to die, not anxious to live, only so far as he might serve the interests of the nation

What a scene! There, in the capital of this what a scene: There, in the expiration this great nation, with the "theavens hung with black," with one living president, two expresidents, one vice president and a dead president, the living comminging with 50,000,000 of people, meurning over the loss of their behalf of the scene of the sc loved chieftain, with every nation of the world bowed in grief at the silent feet of the dead and lamented GARFIELD! The muffled drums, the measured tread of many feet, the flowing tears, the aching hearts, the silent lips, all speak of the last end, of the last act, of the last great statesman in American history!

Noble President! Unsullied Patriot! Undaunted Hero! Farewell! I can but throw a small spring of exercise upon the casket that small sprig of evergreen upon the casket that contains thy pulsiess form, and as I do so, it is in the name and in behalf of the great American people, who will revere thy me to the end of their lives, because thou wer their friend, their counsellor, their hope—the highest type of a TRUE MAN! Yours,

IN MEMORIAM.

Resolutions of respect to the memory of the late Chief Magistrate of the nation—James A. Garfield, passed by the Common Council of the City of St. Paul, Sept. 20, 1881.

By the Common Council of the city of st. Paul.

The shadow of the terrible calamity which befell this nation when its chief magistrate, James A. Garfield, was stricken down by a reckless assassin has deepened into death.

The long suspense is ended, and ended in sadness.

The people are bowed in grief. Hoping against their fears no longer, the universal sympathy is turned back in tears,
Be it resolved,
First—That in the death of James A. Gar-rise—That in the death of sames A. Gar-field we mourn another martyred President, eminent for the purity of his personal char-acter, distinguished for the services which he has rendered the republic, and beloved for the patient heroism with which he met his

the patient heroism with which he met his pathetic fate.

Second—That in testimony of our grief at the nation's affliction and our respect for the illustrious dead, we drape the Council Chamber for sixty days, and cause the bells of the city to be tolled at the hour which shall be appointed for the funeral.

Third—That these resolutions be spread upon our minutes and published in the daily papers of St. Paul. Adopted.

Approved Sept. 22, 1881.
