

RELIGIOUS WORK.

Dr. Dana's Eloquent Discourse at Plymouth Church—Dedicatorial Services at Dayton Avenue Presbyterian Church.

The sermon yesterday morning of Dr. Dana, pastor of Plymouth church, perhaps it is not too much to say, was one of exceptional practicalness, touching and tender in its admulatory precepts; searching and pointed in its inculcation of a sense of personal responsibilities growing out of the various relations of life; and affluent in its presentation of encouragement to cope manfully with life's disabilities, and to struggle against despondency and melancholy, by witnessing the glare and halo of success surrounding others; while one's self plods on in comparative obscurity and neglect. His text was taken from Matthew xv:18. The call of Jesus as he walked by the sea of Galilee to the two brothers; Simon called Peter, and Andrew, whom he introduced into a new life and into a new field of activity. And though Peter became one of the great historic characters of the new testament, while Andrew kept comparatively in the background, who can say that the humbler mission of the latter was not as acceptable in the sight of God as the more conspicuous action of his more prominent brother. So forgetfulness in Christian life is a trait whose value is beyond all estimate; and the Lord just as much appreciates the lowly doer as he does the more conspicuous work of the one who receives the world's popular acclaim. In the solemn procession that were the remains of our late lamented president to the tomb, was a silent mourner, unknown to fame, but whose early ministrations helped to lay the foundation of the character and success of the deceased statesman. It was his elder brother, Thomas Garfield. Without his ready aid and encouragement, James might never have reached his high attainments; and in the divine records, the one may be as conspicuous for what the world would call his minor usefulness as the other for his greater scope. And then with that encouraging satisfaction may tired mothers struggle on with their work in rearing their offspring to fill places of usefulness and honor in the world. What did not James A. Garfield owe to his devoted mother? She was, indeed, the sculptor of the great character whose tragic death filled the nation with tears and the world with sorrow. She was the candlestick, so to speak, on which was set a great light, and without that candlestick the illuminating rays of the great light would not have lit the world with light. Will not that humble support be recognized, as of equal value with the light itself in making up the value, efficiency and usefulness of human endeavor? The Roman mother, who labored with an encouragement more than to her jewels, than may the mother of James A. Garfield, justly point to hers. The stately granite pillar that points heavenward has for its foundation beneath the ground the impregnable granite block, as the noble superstructure rises, yet, without this foundation stone, though hidden from the sight of men, the grand monument could not stand. Thus the obscure is as essential and important as the conspicuous, and though not in the light of men, yet, in the light of the divine balance, the one is esteemed as of equal value with the other. The preacher then earnestly exhorted the humble toiler in earth's laborious duties, not to despond—not to yield to discouragement as his labors were in vain. The greatest influence to bless the world often springs from the obscure. Be not weary, then, in well doing. Though earthly fame may not come, heavenly blessings will. Raise up a well spent Christian in works of beneficence, and the reward will at length come in the many mansions which the Saviour has gone to prepare for his own. Let the employer stretch out the hand of cordial greeting to the toiling employee, feeling that they are equals in all but present position. A word of encouragement may thus fire a great soul to endeavors that may yet command the world's applause. The one working at, our side may be a silent hero, destined to great renown, as the years accumulate. Be not sparing then in personal endeavors. Encourage the despondent, nor yield to blighting, destructive feelings of despair. If, however, fame or wealth come in the way of well doing, accept all with gratitude to the All-Giver. If these things are withheld, still press onward and upward, assured, at last, of a more enduring substance. This is but a meager sketch of one of the gifted preacher's most happy efforts, delivered in the presence of a few brief heads. The discourse bristled at every point with practical suggestions, and was calculated to inflame the soul to greater ardor of devotion and trust, and to encourage the sad and down hearted, and to fill the minds of the hearers with thoughts and topics for valuable reflection.

Dayton Avenue Presbyterian Church. A union meeting of the Presbyterian churches of St. Paul was held at the Dayton Avenue Presbyterian church, to celebrate and commemorate the completion of the improvements and enlargement of the church buildings. The services were in the nature of dedication services. Rev. Dr. Lyon, home missionary, made the prayer of invocation. Rev. Mr. Edmunds, pastor of the church, read the fourteenth psalm. Rev. Dr. Conn, of the First Presbyterian church, led in prayer; after which Mr. W. J. Wilson read the report of the trustees, giving an account of the commencement, progress and completion of the improvements. The cost was slightly under $4,000, and provision for the whole amount has been made. The audience room is large, and it was well filled with a very large audience, drawn from the other churches of the city; and an absorbing interest seemed to pervade the attentive assembly. Rev. D. B. Broad of the House of Hope, preached the discourse. Text: Psalm 69:9; For the zeal of thy house hath eaten me up. John 2:17. Mr. Broad portrayed the absorbing zeal of David for God's house; and dwelt much more fully on the zeal of the savior for the house of his Father, the temple at Jerusalem. In the course of his sermon he deprecated the use of the sanctuary for secular purposes or entertainment. Mr. Broad preached without manuscript, and his reading, utterances, and quotations added strength, force and beauty to his discourse, which was one of exceeding interest, and of instructive value. Mr. Broad made the concluding prayer, and the congregation was dismissed by the benediction, by Rev. Dr. Lyon. The singing was congregational, and all that such an occasion could require. "And they kicked up a devil of a row just then." It was yesterday afternoon, and the scene was located in the saloon known as the Snelling house, on the corner of Fort and Forbes streets. A number of men who could have passed the Sabbath day in a more reputable manner, gathered in the saloon in the afternoon and the usual result followed. A dispute arose over a game of cards, a row came next, and when they were ejected from the saloon the party revenged themselves by throwing beer kegs and other missiles through the windows, completely demolishing the front of the saloon. The rioting party then separated, but as they are all known, they will no doubt give an account of the occurrence to Judge Burr this morning. Stage Robbery—Sentenced for Life. GALVESTON, Tex., Nov. 27.—The News San Antonio special says: The stage between San Antonio and Corpus Christi, was robbed last night three miles from Oakville, by two men. The only passenger, Frank Honey, of Echo, Tex., was released of a small amount of money. The mail filled of everything valuable and the stage allowed to proceed. The News Wellpoint special says the jury in the case of the State vs. Mrs. Hester for the murder of her husband by administering strychnine, returned a verdict of murder in the first degree and assessed the punishment, the penitentiary for life. Dr. Ball, her accomplice, or perhaps abettor in the crime, was acquitted and sentenced to life in the recent term of court, but escaped. Knit Skirts, something new for St. Paul, at Lindeke, Ladd & Co's. Lead and iron pipe pumps at Kenny & Hunder's.

CITY GLOBULES.

About every one in the city who owned or could hire a horse, drove out to Kiltendale yesterday, and all of them took "his aisle"—Oh! we forgot.

Nearly all the ice has disappeared from the river, and were Col. Hewitt alive, the regular annual first of December steamboat excursion would be a grand success. Yesterday was Sunday, but workmen took advantage of the warm, delightful weather, to advance the work upon a number of the new buildings now in course of erection.

Sergeant Walsh escorted an impecunious and demoralized tramp to the lockup yesterday afternoon. It is safe to say he will board as the expense of the county for the next few days. Gen. Shields won the overcoat at the orphan's fair as the most popular policeman, not fireman, as was stated yesterday morning. The vote stood. Shields 1,513, Rouleau 431, Murphy 319.

One of the most exciting contests at the orphan's fair Saturday evening, was that for the hobby horse to the best little boy, won by Harry Hanft, the bright little son of policeman Wm. M. Hanft. The automatic horse, employed on Gilliland's six-story block, on the corner of Jackson and Fourth street, performed his work on a Sunday, even as well as if he had to be hanged on a Monday for doing it.

Another saloon row took place on lower Seventh street between six and seven o'clock last evening, the effect of an over supply of bad whisky. A broken window or two and a scandalized neighborhood was about all there was to the matter. "Six days shall thou labor" and on the seventh get drunk, appears to be the modern practice, if it is not entirely in accord with the revised edition of the original text. A couple of festive teutons came to grief on the corner of Third and Wabasha streets between 7 and 8 o'clock last evening. They had been indulging freely, and in turning the corner their buggy was upset. Officer Bahe was fortunately on hand and he managed to stop the runaway horse just in time to save one of the men at least from perhaps fatal injuries. The names of the parties could not be obtained. Officer Moriarity yesterday afternoon noticing two or three well known sharps doing the agreeable to a countryman full of booze, in a matter of precaution took the countryman into custody and locked him up for the night. Upon searching him at the station house, he was found to have $39 in money on his person, which would without doubt found its way into the pockets of the sharps. Had not the officer made the arrest as he did.

Rev. Father Shanley at the various masses yesterday, requested the members of the parish who had children at the Catholic schools to have them vaccinated at once. He would require, he said, from every child a doctor's certificate—a doctor in good practice, that he is a matter of precaution took the countryman into custody and locked him up for the night. Upon searching him at the station house, he was found to have $39 in money on his person, which would without doubt found its way into the pockets of the sharps. Had not the officer made the arrest as he did.

Mr. A. T. C. Pierson is in receipt of a Cleveland, O., paper, sent him by Maj. McClrath, formerly chief of police of St. Paul, but now an agent of the United States treasury department, with headquarters at Boston, Mass., giving an account of the funeral on the 19th, of a brother at Cleveland, in which six surviving brothers including the major were the pall-bearers. This was the first death in the family of eleven children, seven boys and four girls, all in physique of the same stalwart order as the major.

PERSONAL.

F. B. Kellogg, Esq., of Rochester, was among the arrivals in the city yesterday. W. A. Kindred, Esq., of Fargo, was among the arrivals at the Merchants, yesterday morning. Frank Mayo and a number of his famous company have apartments at the Merchants Hotel. John Raymond, of Fargo, United States marshal of Dakota Territory, is at the Metropolitan. Mr. C. W. Harmon, late of the Sioux county Herald, Orange City, Iowa, is in the city. Mr. Harmon anticipates re-entering the newspaper field soon, at some point in Dakota. John M. Martin, Esq., was the first man to register his name at the Metropolitan Hotel as having come from Ada, Norman county. The Globe welcomes the residents of the new county of Norman. Major A. Diven, superintendent of the La France fire engine manufacturing company, and present mayor of the city of Elms, N. Y., will reach St. Paul to-day to look after the interests of their machine in the competitive trial to commence to-morrow.
