DETROIT, Minn., July 12 .- Hell reigneth The Lord be praised. If the religious sentiments of these phrases seem to be mixed I car assure you that it corresponds to the political situation in the Fifth district.

As I have told you from the start two con ventions were inevitable, and the only question was how the split would occur. The conventian was called to meet at Bowman's opera house at 1 p. m. At 11 o'clock I visited the hall and found the Kindred men in possession. As 12 o'clock approached they began to send out for lunches,

INTENDING TO CAMP THERE.

There were all sorts of reports about a ticket being issued and some were printed and circulated, but signed by no one. While this was going on the district committee was in session at the American house. The Nelson men on the committee offered a preamble and resolutions, with the list of delegates they proposed to recognize.

Col. Johnson, chairman of the committee, refused to entertain them, on the ground that it was not the province of the committee to decide. They then wanted to depose Johnson, and five of the committee voted to elect A. Barto, of Stearns, chairman of the committee. The other four members of the committee were not present. As the hour of 1 o'clock approached the anti-Kindred forces gathered at the Nelson tent, at one end of the town and at 12:55 came marching in a body to the hall. There were a good many of the Kindred delegates outside of the hall also, and as the crowd surged up the stairway

THE JAM WAS IMMENSE.

At the door of the hall were representatives of both factions, who would only admit those they knew to be delegates. As there were more outsiders than delegates, the crowd outside was biggest, and but for the sheriff and a force of thirty deputies the doors would have succumbed to the pressure.

About 1:15 Col. Johnson and Mr. Barto worked their way through the crowd and came on the stage together. Col. Johnson said they decided to have the hall cleared, and that he and Mr. Barto would then issue tickets to delegates and get things in order. Mr. Barto supplemented this request and held a pack of tickets in his hand, which, he said, were ready to issue.

THEN THE FUN BEGAN. C. B. Sleeper, a Kindred man from Brainerd jumped upon a chair and stated that Gilman and Graves had withdrawn in favor of Nelson but that they would get tickets for their friends and that they would unfairly pack the Barto replied that they proposed to give Kindred 100, Nelson 100, and Gilmen and Graves twenty-six each. Col. Johnson then came to the front and made a neat little speech. He said he was there as chairman of the committee to call the convention to order. The canvas had been one of the hottest ever known in the state and it was for them to say whether they should act in harmony and orderly. The Republican party of the state and of the United States demanded harmony. "I call on you," he said, "to be true to the party and if necessary take the dark horse for the sake of the party. I believe in the principles of the Republican party and you should stand by them. I call for the nomination of a temporary chairman.

Up to this point the crowd had quietly listened to Col. Johnson, and Barto had been quietly standing a few feet away. By the time Johnson had uttered his concluding word some one on the Kindred side nominated E. G. Holmes, of Detroit, for temporary ehairman.

About then it seemed to appear to Barto that he had better go ahead and shouted: "I eall for a nomination of temporary chair.

Then there was fun alive. A Nelson man nominated S. G. Comstock of Brainerd, for temporary chairman.

Johnson put his motion for Holmes and the Kindred men yelled a thundering "aye." He called the negative, but the Nelson men were so busy electing Comstock that they did not respond.

"I declare E. G. Holmes elected temporary chairman," shouted Col. Johnson, and Holmes bounded on the platform as though he had been shot from a cannon.
"I declare S. G. Comstock elected temporary chairman," shouted Barto, and Co leaped to the front and stood

SHOULDER TO SHOULDER BY HOLMES. Sleeper moved a committee of seven on cre dentials and Holmes put the motion and named his committee. A Nelson man moved a committee on credentials also, and Comstock gave the motion and appointed his committee. All this time both sides were yelling like mad, reporters were standing on chairs and tables, delegates were leaping upon the platform, standing on chairs, gesticulating and speaking, and to say it was pandemonium let loose feebly describes it.

Suddenly ex-Sheriff Mertz, of Brainerd, who had mounted the platform. had mounted the platform,

SEIZED COMSTOCK BY THE COLLAR. and commenced pulling him back saying

"You have no business here."

Quicker than I can write it, thirty or forty excited men jumped upon the stage, the reporters' table was shoved back and overturned, and one long table on which the re turned, and one long table on which the re-porters roosted came down with a crash, add-ing to the noise and confusion. It looked for a few minutes as though there might be a free fight. It was everybody's yelling race, and everybody did their duty. The sheriff and posse, ten or twelve men, (he had thirty in the hall) finally managed to prevent a bat-tle on the platform and there was a brief lull in the din.

to Barto's statement.

Barto said that five out of nine of the convention were present and elected him, because Col. Johnson refused to recognize the resolution I referred to. He then went into an argument to prove that they had the right to depose Johnson. Col. Johnson said he was elected chairman of the congressional convention by the state central committee, and that his position was above and beyond conthat his position was above and beyond con-trol of the convention. "Gov. Barto is the

The secretary of the state central committee, Capt. Castle, is here and I will call on him to state how I was appointed."

Capt. Castle stepped to the front and said he was not a party to the controversy, but in reply to the appeal made to him he would say that Col. Jonnson was expressly elected chairman by the state central committee. [Wild applause by the Kindred men.]

Barto said that when the committee was appointed it had the right to act.

Dato sait that when the committee was appointed it had the right to act.

Col. Johnson in reply said he had decided upon making a ruling which would have given the convention to Nelson if he had not been interfered with by the committee. He would read the ruling, and he did so as follows: "This ruling recognizes the party machinery and may work injustice in some counties, but it leaves the burden of proof on the bolters, and if any injustice is done it can and will be rectified, by the committee on credentials. In this decision I believe I have the support of the Republican party of the state and shall have the support of every fair-minded man of the convention. As it is a notorious fact that there ention. recognize Mr. Holmes as temporary chairman of this convention and no one else, and unless he was carried out on a shutter he would stay there until Mr. Holmes was recognized. He then preceded to read the call. When he had nearly concluded the reading it seemed to dawn on Barto that he was getting left, and he commenced to read the call. Yells of nd other cries, prevented a word that Barto uttered being heard: Half a dozen delegates on both sides commenced making speeches, and confusion was worse confounded again.

In the midst of this Col. Johnson shouted "Clear the stage of all except the committee and reporters. I have hired this hall and will have it cleared. If order is not preserved the sheriff and his posse will be on hand again."

vention adjourn to the tent on the prairie." Comstock gave the motion and his side yelled and he declared it carried. Comstock then started to go, but some one made a sug gestion to him, and he caught the cue and he said that he would not leave unless he was put out. This was, of course, an afterthought, for he had shouled in his loudest tones that the convention had adjourned, and now he wanted to be led out by an officer, to make it appear he was forced out of the hall.

A deputy sheriff accommodated him, and arm in arm they walked to the door.

A strong force had been guarding the door, both inside and out, to keep out four or five hundred outsiders who were in attendance, and it was quite difficult to get the door epen so the bolters could leave.

As they started to go Col. Johnson shouted, "This is the regular convention and all those in favor of a regular and square nomination will please remain. Those who wish to go away without making a nomination can, of course, exercise their pleasure." and he declared it carried. Comstock then course, exercise their pleasure."

THUNDERING GORDON EJECTED. At this juncture Thundering Gordon, who lives at Minneapolis, outside of the district, mounted a chair and called upon the Nelson, Graves and Gilman men to leave turbing the convention, he not only not being a delegate, but from outside of the district. He was marched out of the hall by a police-man and his voice has not since been heard in

The Nelson gang then rapidly retired, leav-ing the Kindred faction quietly in possession of the hall.

The next business was naming of candidates for congress, and C. B. Sleeper of Brainerd, amid the wildest cheering, nominated C. F. Kindred. His speech was eloquent and greatly applauded.

The call of counties was made and sixtyfour votes were cast, all for Kindred.

were appointed to wait on Kindred and inform him of his nomination. They soon returned and his presence called a louder outburst of applause than any previous effort of the day in that direction. It was some moments before quiet was restored and he the spoke as follows: KINDRED'S SPEECH.

Mr. Chairman and Gentleman of the Convention-At the risk of being critic zed for such an unusual statement for a candidate to make I will say that I not only hoped for this nomination but endeavored to secure it, and believing as I do that the people sympathize with me, I am pleased beyond expression at your me, I am pleased beyond expression at your ratification of their wishes to-day. The position of representing this great district in congress is worthy of any man's ambition, and every honest effort to secure it is not only honorable but commendable. I am not surprised at the number of names that have been suggested in connection with the office, but when we consider what an empire it embraces, the marvel is that so few candidates have contended for it. It contains nearly two-thirds of the whole area of Minnesote, and in natural resource surpasses any other district in the Kindred men to forty for the field, with at least two counted for Kindred whom Gilman believed he could control. This would have left it thirty-six to forty---two for the field, and I sincerely believe that this would have been the fresult had they not bolted the convention. I believe that the Republican party of the state and nation will ratify the doings of this convention--that party which is looked up to with hope and longing by the down trodden and oppressed of all lands--aparty whose principles are destined to revolutionize the world, hastening the day when all nations and all people shall be able to join in the grand hallelujah anthem sung by angel choristers on the plains of Bethlets 2,000 years ago, and in which I believe we all can join when we have elected our candidates in November, "Glory to God in the highest, peace on earth and good will toward men."

Col. Johnson was repeatedly interrupted by applause, and at the end of his speech it was fairly deafening.

The committee on credentials then reported the following list of delegates entitled to seats in the convention:

It is to be hoped that the factions which have striven so hard to encompass our defeat will soon unite with us in bringing peace and harmony to every home in the district and secure for the grand party with which we are identified a majority so handsome that we can justly claim to be the banner district in the state.

As I came down stairs with the bolters I found brother-in-law Benedict on the sidewalk, houting "The convention has adjourned to the tent. All that are in favor of Gilman, Nelson and Graves come on."

I immediately took his arm, and this noble pair led the bolters to their prairie room. Ar-riving at the Nelson tent the bolters congregated in squads to discuss the situation. The Kindred men, having so overwhelmingly gottes the bulge on their regularity, they appear very solemn, and commenced hunting pre texts to excuse their bolt. "We were put ou by the sheriff," said Benedict."

A very little youth, with kid gloves and pinfeather mustache, who evidently had not lared to enter the hall, exclaimed, "There

"Where?" shouted half a dozen. "In the hall," responded the scared chunk of yeal, with a self-satisfied smile at the supposed importance of his news. "Did you see it?" said one.

"No, but they say so." This was a settler. I presume the cowardly little bovine is still shocking people with the frightful story that "there was a revolver out." I heard him repeat it to three little knots of bolters.

Then some one else said: "They called to

Then some one else said: "They called to Kindred down on the street to send up more men, as they were going to need some, and he said he would de it."

"I heard him," said another.

"Where is the Pioneer Press reperter?" shouted a third. "Come here, reporter, and take the man's statement. He heard them call to Kindred for men."

"We must stay here," said the decapitated president of the Duluth land office. "Come and get all the statements of the men who heard that, in writing." And so they went on to try to find some excuse for the bolt, appearing to overlook the fact that they had made the bolt deliberately, by trying to depose the chairman of the district committee, and that the presence of 100 or 1,000 men in the hall had no bearing on the regularity question, because the Nelson men elected a chairman at the outset without giving any one a chance to vote.

while this apologetic gasconade was going on, the Nelson committee on credentials were engaged in making out their list.

Mr. Nelson finally called the bolters to order in the Nelson tent and proceeded to make a statement of the case. He recited what had occured in the hall which they had left and to explain the trouble in the committee. He said that the majority had preferred a plan which Col. Johnson, the charmer, had refus ed to recognize and he then proceeded to read the document as follows:

WHEREAS, The contest for delegates to the BREAT MTIONS Resolved, By the Republicans of the Fifth ongressional district, in delegate convention seembled in Detroit, Minn., this 19th day of assembled in Detroit, Minn., this 12th day of July, A. D. 1883:

First—That the principles of the grand Republican party of these United States are held sacred by us, and that in that party now, as in the days of peril and civil war, the people put their trust and confidence, which shall never be betrayed; that this great party, founded upon the equal rights of man, carried the nation safely through the perils of the most terrible civil war in the history of the civilized world and preserved the life of this great nation and the rights and liberties of man; that it liberated four millions of men from slavery and consolidated and encouraged the lovers of liberty throughout the civilized world.

Second—That as it was our power and re-consolidated and encouraged the lovers of liberty throughout the civilized world.

Second—That as it was our power and reliance in war, so it is is our hope and reliance in peace, and under its administration this nation has arrived at a high degree of power, civilization and the advancement of man in arts, in science, in free thought and speech, and a just and proper appreciation of liberty under our republican form of government.

Third—That we heartily endorse the principles of civil service reform so ably and nobly inaugurated by our lamented president, Garfield, and pledge to President Arthur our hearty support of all just measures designed to promote the welfare of our nation.

Fourth—That we believe that the tariff question should receive the careful consideration of our legislators, and our tariff be se adjusted as to relieve the producing and agricultural interests of all unjust or unnecessary burdens.

Resolved, That we are in hearty sympathy and accord with all honest efforts to ennoble labor, and believe that it is the province of legislators and duty to so regulate the relations between capital and labor that the laboring man may be placed on an equality with capital, have equal favor and be relieved of all uninat and oppressive burdens.

capital, have equal favor and be relieved of all unjust and oppressive burdens.

Fith—That we are heartily in favor of a reciprocity treaty, whereby free trade may be had between the province of Canada and these United States.

United States.

Sixth—That we deeply deplore the excitement and bitterness which has been engendered in this district by the unprecedented contest for the nomination of a candidate for congress, and we ask fair minded men of all parties to join with us in allaying that excitement, bitterness and in electing the nominee of this convention, whose sole desire is to promote the welfare of the nation, the state and the people of this district.

Seventh—That we should be recreant to our

Seventh—That we should be recreant to our trast as the delegates of the Republican party of this district, if we failed to denounce the fraud, chicanery, corruption and violence openly and boldly practiced by Mr. Kindred in his desperate attempt to control the action of this convention and nominate himself.

Eighth—That the strumpet of corruption has walked openly by day in our midst in the political contest for the nomination at this convention. Men have been bought like sheep in the shambles. It is not for ourselves that we protest against such practices, but in the name of justice, in the name of the grand old party which we in part represent, we solemnly protest against the use of money to corrupt men at the primaries, to purchase delegates and to corrupt.

Ninth—We must hold C. F. Kindred responsible for introducing in to this district delegates and to corrupt.

Ninth—We must hold C. F. Kindred responsible for introducing in to this district the corrupt and reprehesible methods of the worst elements of other political parties in the slums and sink holes of the great cities.

Tenth—Let every honest man raise his voice and use his ballot in protest against the man who has openly proclaimed that he had money enough to buy a seat in congress from the voters of this district; who has spent thousands of dollars in his attempt to override the well known wishes of the Republicans of the Fifth district, and by fraud and violence, and under his own supervision and direction, filled the hall where this convention was to assembled with a multitude of partisans (not delegates) and bulies and shoulder hitters, who, in pursuance of his plans by open violence, under his personal direction, ejected the officers of this convention from the hall when this convention was called to order. We appeal to all honest men of whatever party to denounce and forever stamp out such practices, fatal alike to the sacred principles of our government, our party and the rights of the legal electors of this district; and we call upon all fair-minded men to witness the fairness and recritude of our conduct under the greates. provocation, and to join with us in redeeming the politics of this congressional district from practices of corruption, fraud and violence by electing the candidate of this convention to a seat in congress. Let us not establish the precedent that a poor didate of this convention to a seat in congress. Let us not establish the precedent that a poor man may not aspire to a high position that a rich man may covet. Nominations being in order Mr. Stevenson, of Polk, nominated Nelson; Barto nominated Gilman, and Cash recited a little poetry for Graves. The informal ballot resulted as follows: Nelson, 44; Gilman, 10; Graves, 7. The formal ballot was: Nelson, 44; Gilman, 8;

The formal ballot was: Nelson, 44; Gilman, 8; Graves, 7.
Nelson's nomination was made unanimous amid applause.

Mr. Nelson soon appeared and said he was grateful for the nomination. He appreciated it the more highly because he stood as the exponent of a principle which was that the office of congressman of the Fifth district was not to be put up to the highest bidder. The work begun to-day would have to be vigorously continued until November. He would do all in his power to sustain the party and in the language or Lincoln, "I will endeavor to do the right as God gives the power to see the right." right."
Gilman was next called upon and after enlogizing Nelson branched off on the corruption question. He stated that he had personal knowledge of attempts made to buy votes for Kindred. He was a poor man himself and he did not want Gilman then called for Albert Scheffer, of Gilman then called for Albert Scheffer, of St. Paul, who responded in a humorous manner which brought down the house. He said they accused Nelson of being an infidel, but in politics he thought the color of a man's hair and his religion should not fall into the controversy. He had brought up twenty-five solid votes from St Paul and was preparing to move into the district, thinking the lightning might strike him, but he was mistaken.—He was pleased with the nomination and was like the Irishman who said one man was as good as the other and a d—d sight better, and he thought one nomines here to-day was a damned sight better than the other. Nelson had stood by some of his friends and he felt grateful for it. He would stand by him.

Comstock wound up the speeches by thanking God for such Norwegians as Nelson, and he prayed for more. No one had asked Kindred to be a candidate. He had forced himself on the people, whils Nelson had repeatedly been asked to serve them, and they wanted him to do so now.

After authorising the chairman to appoint a district committee of nine, the convention of course, some allowance must be made for the inconvenience of the tent, there being no seats or tables, but there might have been a great deal more enthusiasm. As it was, it was a dull affair.

The Kindred men have been parading the streets with their bands and making the town lively all evening. Every one except the Nelson partisans openly concede that Kindred is the regular nominee and some of the Nelson men admit privately that he is. There never was a better case of regularities made out in any political convention in the United States than that for Kindred. The Nelson men know they are the bolters and feel crestfallen.

The ladies of Detroit opened a hall here to day to give meals for the banefit of the Cemetery association. After the nomination, Kindred thought it was hardly fair to put Nelson in an unfinished cemetery, and he generously gave them $100.

I feel a little cosmopolitan self, having eaten supper last night with the Congregational church and to-night I took tea with the cemetery. I guess I will come up and attend the funeral in November.

This summer vacation of thirty-six hours This summer vacation of thirty-six hours at Detroit has been better than a trip to the White mountains. If they carry out the double headed programme of Gilman in the legislature and county offices, I think I will go into the picnic business and reside in the Fifth district all summer.

London, July 12.—The Times this morning says, it is contemplated to call out 7,000 of he army reserve to take the places of the untrained men belonging to the regiments prepared to proceed to Egypt.

The Times in a leading article this morning says: Musuruo Pasha, Turkish ambassador, had an interview yesterday with Earl Granville ad demanded that the bombardment of Alexandria be countermanded. Earl Granville replied that circumstances compelled the British government to take decisive action, and that its decision could not be revoked. We do not hesitate to say that the effect of England's determination has been to produce a most favorable impression on public opinion, and the judgment of European statesmen, representative of the powers, has already expressed satisfaction at the government's action. There is therefore no ground whatever for the assertion that the action of Eugland is judged by Europe as high handed or unnecessary. If the porte refuses to intervene in Egypt, we shall gladly welcome the assistance of France, and the signs are not wanting that De Freycinet has shown timidity little to his countrymen's taste. Gambetta's speech yesterday in one of the bureaus of the chamber in the course of which he said the most serious feature was that England and France after after having acted together in Alexandria in presenting the ultimatum had parted company, and that if the separation proved definite, never would France have been in a more serious position.

A correspondent writing about yesterday's bombardment, says: The gunboats played active parts, creeping close to the forts and silencing several guns. The Inflexible made splendid practice. The Temeratre was ashore some time but floated subsequently. The gun-boat Condor ran within 1,200 yards of Marabout fort, a single shot from which would have sunk her and therefore the signal was given to cease firing. She had silenced the three great guns in the fort. Admiral Seymour signaled "Geldon Condor." The Superb has two holes in her side. Another corresponden and satisfaction shone in the faces of the sailors. The wind and sun were both in the enemy's favor. It was some time before the smoke shifted enough to afford a glimpse of the shore, as nothing could be seen from the top to signal the directions of the shells and the accuracy of the firing improved. No news from the town of Alexandria. WOOLWICH, Eng., July 13.—The war news has given encouragement to recruiting. Young men are coming forward in consider-

Young men are coming forward in considerable numbers. A correspondent at Alexandria describing yesterday's bembardment particularly mentions the deadly effect of the electric broadsides from the ships which attacked the Phoras and Ras El Tin forts. The Infexible being furthest westward was able to shell the merzs fort with one turret and Ras el-Ten forts with the other. After all the enemy's guns were allenced, the men-of-war continued shelling the fortifications and useds hrapnel, probably at the retreating soldiers. treating soldiers.

Lowdon, July 12.—A dispatch from Suez says: No merchant vessels have entered the canal for the last forty eight hours. All ships, including the Indian mail stesmers, remain on the roadstead. The whole European population is affoat. The british consul, in pursuance of Admiral Seymour's instructions, has hauled down the flag and gone aboard a gunboat.

Lendon, July 12.—A correspondent on board the Helicon sends the following: The loss of Egyptians must be dreadful. A number of shells repeatedly struck the works just about where the guns were and threw up vast volumes of yellow dust. It was often thought the guns must be demolished, but they appeared uninjured when the smoke had cleared. The funnel of the Superb is pierced and the plate below the foremost glacis is torn away. One of the boats of the Infexible is useless and the other badiy damaged. One of the boats of the Inflexible is useless and the other badly damaged. The Inflexible bore the full brunt of the fire of the west end of the Ras-Ei-Tin fort for three and a half hours. One shell has shot clear through her main mast and another through ker funnel. The harem adjoining Ras Ei-Tin and adjacent rifle tower continued to burn ell night.

ENGLISH INJURIES.

THE ENCAMPMENT. A Quiet Day in Camp, Entirened by Nu-

There was very little of interest transpiring at the enbampment yesterday. The camp was visited by a number of citizens from different portions of the state, and this, together with the visit of the Chicago knights was about all that broke the monotony of camp life during most of the day. The boys have settled down to the regular routine of military camp life, and go through their daily duties like little men, or rather like soldiers.

The two battalions had brigade drill last evening for the first time, and made a fine display.

A little military discipline was enacted

A little military discipline was enacted yesterday, in which a private of company B, Second battalion, was the victim. It seems he refused to accompany the company into camp and yesterday he visited the camp with a couple of lady friends. Upon making his appearance he was arrested and placed in the guard house, and after being held some time was hooted out of camp with orders not to return.
