THE SOCIAL WORLD.

Life in the society world during the past week has been one of continual round of pleasure. There have been sleighing parties (limited), opera parties until you couldn't rest, tea parties, dinner parties, reception and wedding parties, and any amount of excursion parties, for even your society bells and beaus cannot resist the cheap fare.

To particularize, there has been no doings especially brilliant or dazzling. That is, nothing significant enough to induce the modern Adonis to brush the cobwebs from his claw hammer coat and parade this luxury at well assembled, for the reason, perhaps, that there was nothing of this kind on the tapis. That there has been lots of good, solid enjoyment in a quiet way, will be seen by the list of doings as recorded below. ### THE McNAMARA CASE.

Defendant is Discharged on the Rape Accusation—Held as to the Charge of Larceny.

The case of the State vs. James McNamara, charged with rape on the person of Alice Knudson, was called for hearing in municipal court at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Mr. John W. Willis appeared for the state and Messrs. E. G. Rogers and F. R. Hollinshead for the defendant. Mr. Willis stated that he had taken the case to accommodate Mr. Egan, and asked for a continuance. Mr. Rogers addressed the court. He called attention to what he termed the absurd circumstances connected with the charge; counsel stated that he had carefully examined the evidence, and that there was not a scintilla to sustain the charge. He thought the case should be dismissed.

The case then proceeded to trial. Alice Knudson, the complainant, a brunette nineteen years of age, was the first witness. She testified as follows: Came to St. Paul from Waseca last May; went to work at Montgomery's restaurant and then at the Clarendon hotel; was in St. Paul Tuesday, Nov. 21; saw defendant about 6 o'clock in the evening of that day; met him on the corner of Third and Wabashaw streets; he was alone; he asked witness where she was going to stop that night; she replied that she had no place to stop; witness walked up street with him; they passed over to Fifth street to a small building; defendant got in through the window he got in first and pulled her in after him by the arms; he then made indecent proposals to her; he offered her $20; he then took liberties with her; this was when she cried; another man came in and asked for the room rent; witness was in the bed crying; the other man said he would give her $10 more; then they went to her pocket-book to get a $50 bill changed. Witness got up and ran out of the room; after she got out she found that her money had been taken. Witness then described what took place in the room.

On being cross-examined by Mr. Rogers, witness testified to having asked defendant a vulgar question when they were walking up street.

On reaching the house on Fifth street he tried the door which was locked; he then raised the window and went in; he then took witness by the arms and helped her in; he told witness not to be afraid, that he would not hurt her; after they were in the room he offered her $20, which she refused. Her hat and veil fell off; witness went to bed; she was afraid and cried. After while another man came in the room; he offered witness $10; she said you mustn't kill me; he told her to get out as fast as she could; witness asked defendant if she could stay all night; that was when they were on the way, as she supposed, to the rear of the house.

When asked what he meant when the indecent proposal was made she said she did not. After leaving the house witness walked a short distance with the defendant; she did not go to the American house with him; he ran away; witness had gone to the room once before with defendant early in the evening; on that occasion there were present two women and a man; one of the women said, speaking of defendant, "what are you doing with my husband," witness replied, "I am his fellow."

T. Wilson, keeper of the American house, was next sworn and testified to a statement made by the complainant the night of the alleged offense.

Dr. Stewart was the next witness. He testified to having examined the complainant; witness had found no injuries whatever and nothing that would at all substantiate the charge of rape. Mr. Rogers then called attention to the contradictory character of the girl's story and the evidence as submitted, and on motion of counsel the case was dismissed.

The larceny case was continued to the 29th inst., and defendant was released on bail of $250.
