THE Presidential party spent the Sabbath at Green River, Wyoming, the highest point crossed by the Union Pacific road, and at the summit of the Black Hills, where a monument has recently been erected to Oakes Ames.

A REPRESENTATIVE of the GLOBE, who has just returned from an extended tour along the line of the Sioux City division of the Omaha road, reports crop prospects throughout Southern Minnesota as booming. Farmers, business men and people generally are rejoicing over the outlook. Prosperous times will be the southern Minnesota bounty for 1883.

CHARACTERISTIC MISREPRESENTA-

TION.
The Pennsylvania Democrats in conventio assembled were not very enthusiastic in reference to their governor. On the other hand, references to him were coldly received and criticisms upon him warmly applauded. The platform is about what might be expected. It took in the tariff plank of the Ohio platform, and as that has had the approval of Watterson, it looks as though it might prove the compromise between free trade and Randalism.

So spoke a bourbon Republican paper, one of the large class of party organs that are supposed to be telling the truth themselves or allowing it to be told. Almost the entire Republican press of the country has spoken the same way of the Pennsylvania convention. One journal, however, is an honorable exception. The Republican Evening Post, of New York City, edited by Mark: "He gave man his work," cratic convention ever held in the state. It is a popular assembly. Very few of the members are old political war horses."

It is pleasant to put this morceau of testimony against the churlish misrepresentation standing at the head of this article. The fact is, the convention contained one hundred more delegates than at any previous convention, it contained in its membership the best thought of the state and the highest class of citizenship. Consequently their orderly and business-like dispatch of the work to be performed, all in the spirit of the utmost harmony, and with abundant enthusiasm.

It so happens that this is the first time in a quarter of a century when all the state offices but one are filled by Democrats, men of unquestioned capacity, who are providing the state with goed, honest government, so marked by contrast with the McLean-bossism and ring-rule that has so long dominated that it seems entirely probable that the victory won last year may be continued.

That references to Gov. Pattison were coldly received and criticism upon him applauded is wholly false, and that statement is made to produce an influence outside of the state. The simple fact is, the convention was demonstrative in its warm endorsement of Gov. Pattison's adminisendorsement of Gov. Pattison's endorsement of Gov. frequently interrupted by cheering, which was very prolonged upon any reference to Gov. Pattison.

This is a fair, and not overdrawn sketch of the convention. It may be added that the candidates nominated. the two offices to be filledtreasurer and auditor state, are gentlemen of blameless public and private record, and with an aggressive campaign can be elected. The Democrats deserve success. They are entitled to a repetition of the victory of a year ago. The old political tyranny under which the

The Chicago News gave Presinent Arthur a welcome by publishing, on the day of his arrival in that city, a couple of pages of letters from senators, congressmen and other prominent citizens giving their yiews of the present administration. The Minnesota budget is reproduced elsewhere in this issue of the GLOBE, and contains some unique features.

The most elaborate Minnesota endorsement comes from the postmaster at Winona, who, naturally, sees a great deal of ability and wisdom in the president. The briefest is from the Hon. Milo White. Windom's representative from the First district who, doubtless from the stand-point of inner self-consciousness, pronounces "Arthur's administration eminently wise and statesmanlike." When one statesman thus endorses another, it is praise indeed. The most peculiar reply is from the son of Hon. E. F. Drake, of this city. Mr. Drake has been absent in Europe for nearly a year, but has, probably, written letters home once or twice a week relative to the President, and hence is able son to present his views, and his absence from the country causes no serious or general hiatus in national politicts. Knute Nelson's monthly salary drafts from Washington since the 4th of last March, place him in a mellow frame of mind, relative to the administration. Senator Sabin thinks Arthur may yet unite both wings of the Republican party, but he does not express whether the wings" referred to the live Sabin wing and the defunct Windom wing, in Minnesota, or some other "wings." Mr. Wakefield thinks that Arthur is serving his party acceptably. Senator McMillan and Representatives Strait and Washburn appear to have gone a fishing, and as none of their sens (or sisters, cousins and aunts) volunteer replies, we are left in utter darkness as to their views of the man who makes Getting outside of Minnesota we find Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, the post mortem assassin of Byron, endorsing Mr. Guiteau by declaring that "we have great reason to be thankful to Divine Providence for this administration of President Arthur." It seems a little sacrilegous to allude to Guiteau as "Divine Providence," but as she allows Mr. Stowe to sign the letter jointly with her, some allowance must be made. Harriet Beecher generally plays a lone hand, and uniting with her husband in doing something may have mystified her as to the propriety of assassination and rendered her a little uncertain as to the exact identity of "Divine Providence."

Charley Farwell, of Chicago, plumply favors Arthur's "re-nomination," while Flannagan, of Texas, who made the celebrated, "what are we here for except to get the offices" speech at Chicago, "suggests the propriety of continuing the service of a safe, pure administration." Evidently Flannagan's speech bore fruit and he has been provided for.

Gen. Hawley, of Connecticut, is absent in Europe, but his wife kindly stands sponsor for his views by proxy, as in the other European case already cited.

Congressman Price, of Wisconsin, about the only one who has the manliness to respond without a little slobbering praise, and his answer has so good a point that we reproduce it;

Dear Sir: In my judgment President Arthur should have said at the commencement of his presidential term: "I have no policy to carry out as I was not elected to carry out any specific policy. I am by accident made president. I am simply the executor of the last will and tes nt of James A. Garfield. You, gentle of the cabinet, please retain your places and assist me in discharging this trust." Apart from this mistake I can see more in his adr tion to commend than disapprove of,

Woodland Park Baptist Church. This newly organized church, on St. An thony hill, held its first preaching meeting yesterday afternoon, in the Dayton avenue Presbyterian church. An intelligent congregation of goodly size was present. The Rev. C. H. Hobart, pastor of the First Baptist church, in Aurora, Illinois, officia ted. He was accompanied in the pulpit by the Rev. Mr Riddell, pastor of the First Baptist churchain "Lower Town," who made the opening prayer, praying fervently for the success, usefulness and prosperity of the new church, and that it might always exhibit the true graces of the spirit. and prove to be a vine planted by the hand of the Lord. After reading the 4th chapter of Nehemiah, where is depicted the success of the Jews, under the leadership of Nehemiah, in rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem in spite of the bitter hostilities of Sarballat, governor of the Samaritans, "for the people had a mind to work," he took for his text a part of the 34th verse of the 13th chapter of the con text reading: "For the Son of man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work." The discourse forcibly illustrated the value, the necessity and honorable character of work, in all the departments of life, and especially in the career of the Christain. To every Christain there is a place for work, and work assigned for him to do, and eyery follower of the Lord, if so minded, can find his proper place for labor in the divine vineyard, and whether rich or

Early and Remarkable Lake Wrecks. To the Editor of the Globe:

In your issue of yesterday was published a dispatch from Racine detailing the circumstances of the recovery of a portion of the safe of the steamer Superior, wrecked on Lake Superior many years ago, and in which there is given a history of the vessel, stating among other things that she was built in 1822. There was no steamer afloat on the great lakes at that time, neither were there any built in 1822 at any place on the lakes. The first steamboat built for the navigation of the lakes was the Walk-in-the-Water, at Black Rock, in the year 1818. She made several trips between Buffalo and Detroit season, and was wrecked near Buffalo same fall, being a total loss. Then there was no lake steamer built until the year 1825, when the Superior was put in commission. This was not the boat lost on Lake Superior, however, as that vessel was built at Perrysburg, Ohio, in 1846. The writer was one of her passengers on her maiden trip from Detroit to the island of Mackinaw, July, 1846. On the opening of the St. Mary's Falls canal, June, 1855, she was placed on the route from Detroit to Lake Superior posts, and was lost in the fall of the following year, 1856, while on her passage to the mining district with a cargo of supplies. She had a large amount of specie, mostly gold coin, in her safe, being in transit to companies to mining paid to employes. She was driven ashore by a fierce northwester at the Picture rocks, on the south shore of the lake, and all on board perished. At the point where she stranded the shore was all rocks, being about eighty feet perpendicular from the water's edge. Included in the cargo of the steamer were some beef cattle, and after the storm had subsided some settlers occupying the shore near that point discovered an ox on a shelving rock, where he had been thrown by the waves, about half way up the preci-pice. When discovered the animal was complacently feeding on a bundle of hay that the waves had kindly deposited there for his convenience. A purchase was pro-vided by the settlers and the animal rescued from his imprisonment, seemingly none the worse from his experience with the storm and waves. The ox repaid his rescuers by several years' service in hauling wood to the steamboat docks at Grand Island, Lake Superior. The animal was the only survivor of the ill-fated steamer

Mr. Goodrum stated he resided in Jacksonville last winter, when the professor was there, and that he knew him well, and continued with animation: "Dr. Dexter has certainly cured many people in Florida. He cured invalids whom practicing physicians had given up as hopeless. I can testify to this of my personal knowledge. Some were afflicted with rheumatism, others with deafness, bronchial trouble. Dr. Dexter offered $1,000 for any case which he could not cure, but I never knew of a case in which he failed. He had the opposition of everybody at first, but came out victorious. a wife and little girl and boy, started with a number of friends to enjoy a basket picnic with Scandia lodge, Knights of Pythias, at White Bear lake. Mr. Thomley carried the basket filled with edibles, and his wife was in charge of the urchins. They had got scarcely a block from the domestic threshold when a casualty overtook the family resulting in the death of the wife and little five-year-old daughter and almost if not quite dethroning the reason of the husband and father. The railroad employes and yardmen were switching cars and just as the ill fated family were about to cross the track were making what is known as a fly switch or kicking a car into a switch. The little girl unhappily ran up the track. The mother, seeing the danger, sprang to the rescae. The locomotive flew up the track unhitched and then started in the opposite direction, sending a lone and in her frantic endeavor to rescue it the mother and child were both run over by the freight car. The mother was killed, the body being mangled in a most shocking manner, and the little girl had both legs severed. Almost insane with grief and horror the husband gather ed together the pieces of the remains of the wife and wrapped them up in a shawl. The body was taken to Warner's undertaking rooms and the little girl was taken to Dr. Ames' office, where she died two hours after Mr. Thomley is a saloon keeper at the
