Terement House Cigar Making; a Test. Case-English Forger Arrested-Frauds

in City Financial Bureaus. New York, Oct. 1.- David A. Haul, 375 East Eighth street, was arrested to-day, charged with violating a new law in manufacturing cigars in a tenement. This was the first case under the new law, which went into effect to-day, and will be carried to a higher coart and a test case made of it.

Edward Lobell alias James Faulkner, Monarch, on an application of the British consul, charged with forging, in Bristol, Eng., a check for £280. Of this sum £230 in gold was found with him. He was arraigned before a U.S. commissioner and sent to jail to await examination. The grand jury to-day handed in a presentment in regard to the bureau of water rents and bureau of arreas and assess-ments, in both of which frauds have recently been discovered. The system of keeping the accounts is pronounced faulty and inadequate, and the immediate adoption of an improved system is recom-mended. It is also recommended that a mended. ## NYM CRINKLE'S NOTION

As Set Forth in a Philosophic Con. trast of Actor and Pugilist.

Poetic, Refined and "Pulpy" Frank Bangs Compared With the Unadulterated Masculinity of Sullivan.

Nym Crinkle in New York World. I have somewhere read of a race of savages who had developed their sensibilities to such an extent that they could not tolerate the sight of blood, and one of their philosophers explained to the European missionary the horror and disgust which they felt for our rude forms of criminal execution. They had mproved very much on hanging and decapitation, and when they wished to punish an offender they stripped him naked, took him out into the desert and tied him to a stake in the withering sun, after placing food and water just out of his reach. Here he was left to roast and to starve slowly, while the black, poisonous ants consumed his This was considered a great and refined Modern sensibility of the magnificent kind acts on this savage line. It abolishes violence but enhances cruelty. If we had any means of actually measuring the force and extent of cruelty as we measur less subtle energies, I think it would be found that the dove-eyed coquette, who is equally compounded of sensitiveness and heartiness, inflicts more suffering than the brawny but magnanimous gladiator.

Your Tearle and your Bangs are fair representatives of a sentiment that will not look passively upon prize fights. It shudders at mashed noses and closed eyes and gaping But it is wholly obvious to the elemental virtue there is in old-time contempt for phys ical suffering. One must perforce feel a sort of admiration for the victim who "comes up smiling" in spite of a smashed nose and closed eye.

For in that endurance and defiance is a quality that advancing civilization is robbing

No one can read back without being amaze at the fortitude with which our progenitors "took punishment." When they believed a thing, fire could not burn it out of them. When they undertook a thing, physical pain never daunted them.

In getting rid of physical violence, which vas perhaps a good thing to do, have we got rid of our capacity to endure it-which may be an unfortunate thing to do? In refusing, according to the sentimental code, to smash noses and close eyes, may we not have fallen into worse habits—of smashing reputations and closing up careers?

an accepted doctrine that the hero in our days is not the man who defends truth in armor, but the man who believes in her, in his closet, and that "wind" and "bottom" are best shown in not reading what your enemy says about you in print.

Mr. Frank Bangs, I do not believe would out any man's head in chancery and "fib" away his feathers with savage glee. He is assentially refined, sensitive, polished. His superb masculinity was never degraded to the level of physical violence. He is a living exponent of the poetry, the chivalry, the romance of that gentle and winsome thing we call the drama.

And he is gentle and winsome, bimself. He is, moreover, of our day and generation. I believe he is a great actor. His Mark Antony was a decorous combination of the Farnese Hercules and the Gannymede of Jove. When he delivered the oration it reminded you of a statue of granite with a mu a weak spot in his breast his antagonist will find it out and five or ten thousand implacable judges will recognize it in a minute.

Don't you think there is a certain basis of onesty in this work?
This is what Oscar Wilde meant when he came back from California and reported that the finest picture of manliness he had seen in America was a brawny miner with a sledge driving a spike. He went about among the aloons and clubs inspecting the magnificent fellows who lean against pillars, with their thumbs in their waistcoats, and yawn—but he never again felt quite satisfied with them.

So it was with me. After I saw Sullivar polish off the Maori (by the way that word is properly pronounced Mow-ry), I somewhat lost my faith in Bangs. It seemed to me that my idol was made o ice cream and had stood too long in a warm

A base and sickening admiration of the frank barbarism of the past crept over me as I compared it with the stall-fed muscularity of the present. A fearful doubt grew up in my soul of the solidity of the current Mark Antonys, and an apprehension seized me that some day the hairdresser would cut one of them and he would collapse with a squeak like a rubber balloon.

"I tried to shake off this agnosticism. said to myself, this is rank heathenism; brace up, old fellow, and keep abreast of the times! After all, this is an age of parachutes, not of pyramids. The real thing is vulgar; what we want, even in muscles, is the ideal thing. It's the pulp of appearance, not the sinew of sincerity, that wins.

I turn from the Mark Antony, posing there in his role of injured innocence, to my robust friend, John L. Sullivan, who has nothing but honest muscles and square animal proves to offer, and who comes and punches with singleness of purpose, and goes away with consciousness of having done his whole duty, and I no longer wonder that 20,000 people crowd to look upon the coarse, simple sincerity, and lift their 20,000 voices to appland that old-fashioned fleshy thing that is hard and wholesome and unsophisticated and ter bly honest in doing what it has to do.

There is at least no doubt about his strength was arrested on board the steamer Lydia or his accomplishment; and after all I sup-Monarch, on an application of the British pose it is a great luxury to the world to get some of the qualities or masculinity unadul-terated, even if they are not the highest qualities. He Didn't Care.

Arkansaw Traveler.

The Arkansas man has many ways of getting his name into print, and when all other means fail the mad-dog resort is taken up. The gentleman who wants his name to appear in the local paper calls on the editor and says: "Killed the biggest mad dog this morning you ever saw. Better make a local to that effect, as it might serve as a warning to the second of the second to the people of the neighborhood. You

PERILS OF WATERED WHISKY.

Au Ex-Confederate Surgeon's Experience During War's Privation's. Washington Cor. Philadelphia Record. "Speaking of privations in the rebellion," said an ex-Confederate surgeon standing by, "reminds me of the scarcity of the elixir of life in the southern army. Whisky was life in the southern army. Whisky was scarcer than corn, and that's saying a great deal. Everybody wanted it. Very few people had it, and as a general rule what they had was mighty bad. Usually the surgeon had whatever spirits there were in camp, and so I had my daily drink right through the war, with a few memorable exceptions. But it was not always the best whisky. Once I remember I got some liquor, but I had nothing to put it in except an old barrel that had been used for vinegar. Now they made vine gar out of anything that came handy during the war. The vinegar had been made out of chemicals. There was little or no fruit juice in it. At the bottom of the barrel was a very curious chemical deposit of a composite character that I could make little or nothing of. I risked the whisky, though, and it really wasn't hurt; but there was just this about it: If you put water with it it turned white and frothed right up in your face. So I told everybody that the liquor was weak and that it ought to be drunk out of a tin cup. Almost every-body was too glad to get it to be particular about the conditions. But one day Col. Jack Dade, a Virginian, came to camp as a visitor. Of course he came to see me. 'Any liquor?' he asked. 'Yes,' said I; 'but it's mighty weak, and we have nothing but tin cups. 'Well,' he said, 'I can stand the tin cups, and 'Well,' he said, 'I can stand the tin cups, and the whisky, too, I guess.' So I drew him a cupful. 'Here, John,' he said to my nigger, who was standing grinning by, 'bring me some water.' 'Why, colonel,' I expostulated, 'you are not going to put water in weak whisky, are you? 'Certaiuly,' he said; 'I always put water in any liquor,' and the boy, who had darted off full of laughter as soon as the colonel spoke, was back with a cup of water before I could say another word. Of course that nigger knew as well as I did what was coming, but the more I trembled the more he grinned. The colonel poured the water in, and the confounded liquor turned as white as my face and frothed like beer. 'Great beavens!' said the colonel, pale as a sheet, 'he's tried to poison me.' And he rushed from the tent in a paroxysm of terror that gave me no opportunity to explain. I don't believe that he accepted my explana-tion, save in form, when I did get a chance at him." The M. S. The principal shops of the railroad company between Brainerd and the Pacific Ocean are now being built here. They will give employment to probably 1000 men. Pine timber is plenty in the surrounding country, and various sawnills in the immediate vicinity of the town furnish work for hosts of employes. The valleys of the Yellowstone, Shields and Smith rivers are vast and very rich in agricultural resources, and are well settled. Their trade is entirely tributary to Livingston, while magnificent cattle ranches are well settled. Their trade is entirely tributary to Livingston, while magnificent cattle ranches abound in every direction; vast mines of true bituminous coal, which can be coked for 1½ cents per ton; also rich iron mines are within two to four miles from town, and are being worked. The gold placer mines of Emigrant Gulch, Bear Crevice, Mill Creek, and Eight-Mile Creek, are all in the Yellowstone Valley just south of Livingston, directly tributary to it, and are being actively worked. That wonderfully rich quartz country, silver and gold, known as the Clark's Fork District, is south of town, and Livingston. country, silver and gold, known as the Clark's Fork District, is south of town, and Livingston is the headquarters and outfitting point. Immense deposits of limestone, sandstone, clay and fine brick clay, are but two miles distant, and the manufacture of lime is already an important industry, this being the first point after leaving Duluth on the east, 1,000 miles, where lime rock is found. There are some 200 buildings in course of construction. The Park Addition on which the new $17,000 school house is expected to be built is the most desirable residence property in town, while the Palace Addition contains the cheapest business property offered for sale—the tendency of business and business improvements being largely in that direction. town, while the Palace Addition contains the cheapest business property offered for sale—the tendency of business and business improvements being largely in that direction. There are two banks, the First National and a private bank; two newspapers, one daily and one weekly. A smelt ing and reduction company is also in process of formation, to be located here. There are many chances for business enterprises of various kinds. Like all new countries, the opportunities for profitable employment are very good and workmen as well as men of capital will find plenty of chances in and around the town. Livingston is less than a year old, yet it is probably the second largest city in Montana: It is not surprising when one considers that agriculture alone has made Fargo; the Northern Pacific company's railroad shops, Brainerd; summer visitors, Saratogs, lumber, Eau Claire; silver and gold mines, Denver; cattle Kansas City; iron and coal, Pittsburg; that a combination of all of these factors as is found here should, within the next five years make this point a city of at least 50,000 people. The prediction may seem a wild one, but we have yet to see or know anyone who, a few years age, was accused of being wild then in their predictions, who predicted one-half of what has actually occurred in the Northern Pacific country. We sold lots in Fargo a few years age for $100 each that would sell to-day for $1000; acres at Jamestwn for $15 per acre (cost 48 cents) that to-day sell for $1,500, and are built on. We have acres to-day in Fargo which cost 48's cents that are now in town lots selling at the rate of $1,250 per acre. So lots at Livingston which we new offer at from $25 to $250 will, inside of 3 years, sell at from $25 to $250 will, inside of 3 years, sell at from $500 to $10,600 apiece.
