Execution at Nevada, M. T.

EDITOR POST:—Your correspondent having for a score of years, been a close observer of the march and progress of civilization westward—the marvellous rapidity of our settlements on the shores of the Pacific, and mountain territories—so extensive that the boundaries thereof are comparatively but little known, has been often surprised that so long a period has been suffered to elapse, since the settlement of Montana, without some effort being put forth for the introduction of a printing press—so powerful in its influence upon the social, moral and political character of the masses, and so essential to the development of the resources of all new countries.
