

Quartz in Edgerton County.

EDITOR POST: The question of "What will become of Helena, the center and metropolis of Montana, after the placer and gulch mines in its environs are exhausted," is daily asked by a certain set of "croakers," and answered by other as useless members of any community, by saying that "She'll fizzle, play out, or be given over to the Chinamen," who by the way are getting too numerous here now. But we don't believe in this doctrine of laying our hands in our lap waiting for some new camp to be discovered, for the wealth hidden in the immediate vicinity of Helena in the quartz veins, will convince the skeptic that bright days are in store for Edgerton county at no distant day.

We paid the nearest and oldest mines a visit lately, and give our observations, not what we have heard, but what we have seen. Three and one-half miles from Helena, up Orofino, on a good road to the head of this gulch, we find ourselves in Owyhee Park, where in February, 1864, James W. Whitlatch, formerly of Nevada, and Eli S. Wibley, of Illinois, discovered the first indications of rich gold bearing quartz. After three weeks of steady search they struck a rich ledge in soft granite, and called it the "Union." The same day, some distance west, they also discovered what they believed to be another rich ledge, and called it the "Owyhee," which since has proven to be the "Union." These enterprising prospectors commenced opening on both places, being encouraged by the richness of the quartz, and never ceased their toil until their means were exhausted. In the fall of 1865, Mr. W. sold to Professor J. T. Hodge, Agent for the National Mining and Exploring Company, of New York, 123 feet on No. 2, west on the Union, No. 1, west on the Owyhee, and No. 2, east on the Dr. Bigger's, for $5,000, and immediately started for New York to procure machinery. Being unable to accomplish his object he sold the discovery claim on "Owyhee" (200 feet) for $10,000, to the same company, returned to Montana to further improve and develop his mines, especially the "Union." Descending the incline shaft on the discovery of the Union on well constructed ladders, to a depth of 40 feet, at an angle of 45 degrees—at this point the ledge takes an easier dip, and we descend without assistance on the smooth lower wall to the depth of 90 feet, where a vertical shaft intersects, which latter was sunk for hoisting and ventilation purposes. At this junction drifts have been run east and west, 100 feet, and 75 feet, respectively, in length. The ledge on this incline to the full depth of the works, 191 feet, has averaged three feet of ore, but in the drifts it varies, showing in places as much as six feet, and suddenly narrowing down to 10 inches; but these narrow places do not extend over 10 feet in length. Both well defined wall rocks are soft granite of greenish color, and present a smooth clay-coated surface. The ore is a whitish quartz, with but little iron pyrites, and traces of copper and galena.

Retracing our steps from the western drift, we descend the incline to a depth of 191 feet, where the ledge resumes a dip of 45 degrees. All the ore taken from this shaft and drifts is awaiting the completion of Messrs. Postlewait & Co.'s 24 stamp mill, of which we shall speak anon. The ore probably will average from $30 to $40, although on examination large quantities of beautiful specimens, showing free gold, can be found on the dump piles.

We reascend the incline, and on striking terra firma again, were thoroughly convinced that the prospects of the Union were fully equal to the expectations of the owner and to any other ledge in the Territory, which we have examined. But the shaft we descended is not the only improvement on this ledge. On No. 2, west, the property of the National Mining and Exploring Company of New York, an incline following the ledge 193 feet, intersects with a vertical shaft at a depth of 100 feet, whence a drift runs west 123 feet—the ledge in this drift averages four feet, and the principal part of the work on this claim was done under the supervision of Professor Hodge, agent of the company. On the east end of No. 3, west, we found another shaft following the dip of the ledge 80 feet, and showing an average width of ledge of four feet, of the best prospecting ore on the whole ledge. On the west end of the same claim, another incline follows the crevice 146 feet, which here only averages three feet, to that depth, but shows indications on the bottom of widening out. The next claim, No. 4, west, formerly held as discovery claim of the "Owyhee," is owned now by the N. M. & Ex. Co. of N. Y., has an incline shaft 120 feet deep. A tunnel strikes the ledge at a depth of sixty feet and follows it the whole length of the claim. The width of the ore varies in this claim from two to five feet, but gives indications of yielding not less than $40 per ton. A railway runs from the tunnel direct to the NAT. MIN. AND EX. CO.'S MILL. On Orofino Gulch, which, under the management of Prof. J. T. Hodge, will prosper and remunerate the enterprising members of the company by good returns for their investment. Under the gentlemanly guidance of the Professor, we examined the whole machinery, and the mill being in operation we had a good opportunity of noticing the smoothness with which the 15-horse power engine worked, and the compactness of the wood-work, on which no perceptible jar is noticeable during the heavy 9-inch fall of the ten 630 lb stamps. On one end of and above the battery, at a convenient distance from it, a "Gate-Crusher" breaks the quartz to the size of beans. This crusher has sufficient capacity of furnishing rock for at least twenty-four stamps. An excavation is now being made for another 8-horse power engine in this mill, to which two cranes, each seven feet in diameter, four of Eaton's celebrated amalgamators and a Douglas crusher will be added. The whole structure of this mill, its neatness, in all minute details, casts great credit upon Mr. S. Cameron, under whose personal supervision the machinery and wood-work was put up. Surrounding the mill are well constructed and airy stable and barn for the horses, a substantial dwelling and boarding house for the employees, and 900 cords of wood piled up for immediate use. The Professor has now on hand 1,200 tons of ore, and is continually taking out more. We look forward with certainly to a good clean up the first time the mill stops. We return to THE MINES. No. 2, E., on the Union, which was erroneously held as discovery of the Dr. Bigger's, we found but little work done, but the quartz is uniform with the other claims. Mr. Whitlatch has now in Owyhee Park about 800 tons of fair ore. Having examined the most noticeable ledges near Owyhee Park, we cross the same and descend Eagle Bird gulch to where it merges into Grizzly gulch. On this point Messrs. Postlewait & Co., are erecting a 24-stamp steam mill. Knowing the energetic character of Mr. Chas. Hendrie, one of the owners of the mill, who himself directs the work, another will soon be added to the number in this county that will demonstrate the richness of the Whitlatch property. We cross Grizzly gulch and ascend the western slope of the divide; on the summit we find excavations over a space of probably two acres, which on first sight would be thought to be placer diggings, but is the celebrated "Park Lode." The peculiarity of this ledge is, that at a depth of thirty feet it lies almost horizontal, averages about eighteen inches of paying ore, and has yielded from $30 to $50 in the old Sultana Mill. About 1,200 tons of ore are ready to be hauled to the mill. We bid farewell for awhile to the Park, descended the eastern slope of the hill, following the meandering course of Nelson gulch, and paid a hasty visit to the Worden Mill, where we had the pleasure of forming the agreeable acquaintance of Capt. Demarest, the superintendent of the mill. In our next we will give a description of its beautiful machinery, and the mines whence the ore for the voracious jaws of the crushers in this mill is taken.

—The famous Indian "Council Tree," in Mt. Morris, Livingston county, New York, beneath which the original possessors of the soil gathered in council, and which has been carefully cherished as an interesting relic, was lately blown down during a storm. It measured twenty-three feet in circumference. —There is a small girl in the employ of the Wolcottville manufacturing company, whose wonderful arithmetical powers are not generally known. The company manufacture 1,200,000 percussion caps per day, or 2,000 a minute, and this little girl counts them and puts them in boxes, each containing just 100 caps, and never makes a mistake in counting. She counted 2,005 caps, and put them in twenty boxes, in one minute. —A singular and most distressing scene took place in a graveyard at Edwardsville, Ill., where, during the funeral ceremonies over the body of a child of Mr. John Gaffney, the mourners and attendants were attacked by a swarm of bumble bees. The irate insects lit upon the uncovered heads and faces of those present, who were mostly all stung in a terrible manner. The ladies screamed, and a retreat was absolutely necessary before the ceremony was concluded. One of the ladies stung is confined to her bed from the effects of the virus.

—The World's Berlin correspondent states that nearly every German prince has at least a hundred thousand dollars invested in American securities, and the King of Hanover, who has been notified that he cannot return to his throne, has half a million in our loans. So there is little danger of their actual starvation if they do become private citizens.
