

BRUTE SPORT.

The Fight between Gallagher and Davis—its almost Fatal Termination—A Picture of the Concluding Scene. The reporter of the Cleveland Herald gives the following account of the final round and sickening termination of the brutal combat on Fighting Island between Davis and Gallagher, of that city: "Fifty-fifth—'Time!' says the time-keeper. 'Time!' hoarsely bawl fifty seconds who are deeply interested in the proceedings. 'Time,' is repeated by the seconds, and the men come forth; Gallagher without a scratch, confident of victory—fresh as a new young horse, with a great encouragement from his seconds and outsiders—but how is it with Mr. Davis? He is blind in one eye, his hands are barked and swollen, his head looks like that of an immense bull dog after a terrific fight, and his legs, though some will not agree with this statement, were so groggy he could scarcely retain his feet after a little exertion. But he came like a thunderbolt from his corner, with murder stamped upon his face; with the spirit of a demon or maniac raging in his bosom; with froth and blood streaming from his mouth and the fire of revenge flashing from his eye. Blinded by his own blood, and recklessly indifferent about his own safety, he approached the boy, a fearful picture of wrath adorning his ghastly cuts and bloody mug. Gallagher shrunk back from the demon-like spectacle and backed from the scratch to his corner, but escape was impossible. Davis did not stop, or even hesitate on the scratch, but, with clenched fists, strode on, caught Gallagher in the corner and dealt him a blow with the right upon the left under jaw and neck, on the jugular vein, dropping him senseless and apparently lifeless upon the turf. The blood and brutality of the other forty four rounds combined could scarcely have created the sensation occasioned by this blow. 'He is dead!' 'You have killed him!' 'Ain't this a terrible affair!' and similar sentiments passed the pale lips of those who had some misgivings about going to prize fights. 'I never want to see another!' was a common remark, and more than one 'respectable' man who had gone thither to 'see the fight,' began anxiously to consider what kind of a figure he would cut when pleading to an indictment as an accessory, aiding and abetting in a murder. We know of some such who promptly determined not to leave the island with the crowd on the steamer, but to escape in some other way, hoping thereby to avoid detection and arrest. Their relief may be imagined when Gallagher revived. A physician who chanced to be there, whether professionally or accidentally, we know not, took charge of the body and used the necessary resuscitating remedies, bringing the dead to life in fifteen minutes. Signs of life were weak, but the beating of the heart—were visible soon after the fall, but until the man was able to move his own limbs—fifteen minutes later—the death alarm did not leave the crowd. Davis, meanwhile, was being clothed and taken to the boat. When Gallagher recovered the use of his speech he uttered a few incoherent cries, such as 'Where am I?' 'What an I?' 'Who am I?' 'Who is fighting?' 'What is this?' 'How did I come here?' The ring had been removed and all were ready to remark long before he was able to be moved. After recovering his senses sufficiently to faintly comprehend the situation, his ambitious and proud pugilistic spirit was broken because 'an accident' had thrown the victory into the hands of another, and he cried like a child over the unfortunate result. Having gone into the ring to 'whip the man or die in the ring,' and being confident of an easy victory towards the close, it is not remarkable that he found relief for an overburdened spirit in a flood of tears.

A New Territory—Colorado to be Split in Two. The new, and as we believe, ephemeral town of Cheyenne has ambitions. It would become a Capital and in order to effect this must have a Territory. It is situated about two miles north of the north line of Colorado, too near the southern edge of Wyoming to become the capital of that Territory according to its present boundaries. The voters of Cheyenne have held an election and chosen a delegate to Congress. This delegate will use all diligence in getting a degree of latitude cut from the northern part of Colorado and attached to Wyoming. In this effort the Cheyenne delegate will be aided by General Dodge, Chief Engineer of the U. P. R. R., who is a member of Congress from Iowa. It may also be expected that the whole influence of the U. P. R. R. Co., will be given to effect this desired purpose, as Cheyenne is one of their railroad towns and such a division of our Territory would tend in time to give their particular road no small share of our trade. As will readily be seen Colorado cannot bear such a division, and it is also plainly perceptible that we have opponents of no mean abilities to contend with. In order to prevent this disastrous measure, let our delegate in Congress and the people of Colorado be warned in season.—Colorado Miner. From Poverty to Wealth. The Decatur, Ill., Chronicle has the following: Many a princely fortune is wrought out by romancers and sensation writers now-a-days, but the following is not of that character. We have the authority of one who is perfectly reliable for making the statement. About a year ago a Frenchman of great wealth died in his native country. His fortune was mostly in gold at the time of his death, and was computed at $6,000,000. Some years ago a brother of the deceased came over to the new world and married. When the war broke out he enrolled his name in Uncle Sam's big book and went forth to battle for union and liberty, and finally yielded up his life for his country's weal. At the time of his death he was possessed of but little of the world's goods, so that his widow—Mrs. Abigail Hill, of Warren county, Illinois—was left to toil on alone under very adverse circumstances. And so she has lived and grappled with want, till recently she received intelligence of the death of her rich brother-in-law, whereby she comes into possession of $1,200,000, "all in gold," she being one of the five heirs to the $6,000,000. MINERAL PRODUCT.—From the commencement of the Christian Era to the discovery of America, it is estimated that gold had been taken from the surface and mined to the amount of $3,800,000,000; from that date to the close of 1842, $2,800,000,000; to 1860, Russia adds $740,000,000, and California and Australia $2,000,000,000 more. The annual average product of gold at the commencement of the Christian Era is estimated at $8,000,000; at the discovery of America, this product had diminished to $100,000; in 1600 it had increased to $2,000,000; in 1700, to $5,000,000; in 1800, to $15,000,000; in 1843, to $34,000,000; in 1850, to $38,000,000; in 1853, to $236,000,000; there was a subsequent falling off so that in 1860 the product was only $210,000,000. The average annual loss by the wear of coin is estimated at one tenth of one per cent. The loss by consumption in the arts and by fire and shipwreck is calculated at from one million to three millions per year. It is not claimed that these estimates are entirely correct; they are approximately so, no doubt.—Journal of Mining. Marriage of a Louisville Belle. Fifteen years ago, says the Louisville Democrat, "Belle Key" was the toast of the West. She was there reigning star, the queenly beauty, made up of loveliness alone. "Of all her admirers she seemed the paragon." Steamboats and stage coaches were named after her. She was courted and feted, and finally married James W. Hewitt, a native of this city, but then a resident of New Orleans. In the war Mr. H. became a Major of the 2d Kentucky (Confederate) and while Colonel was killed at the battle of Chickamauga. His widow has since been sojourning abroad. We have now the following intelligence concerning the lady from the Paris correspondent of the Baltimore Gazette: "More recently the beautiful Mrs. Hewitt of Louisiana, has given her hand to a Polish gentleman, a citizen of New York, temporarily residing in Paris. The marriage was celebrated in the American embassy, and afterwards at the Chapel Marbeur, from whence the bridal party, with their friends adjourned to dejeuner, at their handsome new apartments in the Champs Elysees. THE RIVER.—The Mountaineer arrived yesterday from Fort Randall. From a passenger who came down on her from Sioux City, and who left the Huntsville at that point, we glean some particulars of the latter's trip. The Huntsville met the Amelia Poe eighteen miles above New Fort Sully; lay all day at Farm Island with Lady Grace on account of high winds; Amaranth lay up two miles below; met Deer Lodge at Fort Thompson. The Huntsville has on 160 passengers and $175,000 in treasure. She has the Gallatin's trip. She will probably be down in a day or two. The Mountaineer reports that the Zephyr and Imperial will hardly get down this season. The latter is drawing 27 inches of water and there is only sixteen inches below her.—St. Joe Union, Oct. 10. It is not often that the New York Tribune relaxes its dignity sufficiently to indulge in a pleasantry, much less in a pun; when it does, however, it is sure to get off something neat. Its description of a recent visit of the Arab jugglers and acrobats to the office of that paper is equal to Fitz Smythe's happiest hits. It says: The Arabs visited the Tribune press room and office on Wednesday. They proposed to stand on their hands and let the hollows of their feet be used as ink stands for the rest of the day was declined with thanks. Having ascended to the top-most floor, they gravely nodded their turbans and departed for other climbs.—Dramatic Chronicle.
