STEAMBOAT FIRE AT ST, LOUIS.

The following is the account of the recent steamboat fire at St. Louis, as published in the Democrat of March 30. The total loss is estimated at over $500,-000. Beside the Montana boats mentioned below, two others, the Armenia press. and Jennie Lewis, were totally destroyed:

"At 8 o'clock last night the ringing of bells on the steamboats at the wharf gave notice of a fire among the shipping. Flames were observed issuing from the after part of the Ben Johnson, lying at the foot of Washington avenue. The fire spread with great rapidity, and from aft of the boilers it soon burst into the cabin, enveloping the whole boat from stem to stern. The flames spread to the boats lying alongside, and in a few minntes the Henry Adkins, the Carrie Kounz and the G. B. Allen were a mass of seething, crackling flames. The Jennie Lewis, having steam up ready to start up the Missouri river, pushed out, and might have been saved without a scratch had not the noble hearted com-mander, Capt. McPherson, endeavored to save the lives of the people on some of the other boats that were on fire near the middle of the river. In getting the passengers from the boats, the Jennic took fire, and was totally destroyed.

THE RENRY ADKINS.
