DAY OF MEMORIES

MRS. HASKELL'S ELOQUENT ADDRESS AT AUDITORIUM.

INSTRUCTION IN PATRIOTISM

Taught by the Men Who Went to War Forty Years Ago—Members of the Grand Army and Their Friends Honor the Memory of the Immortal Dead.

The memorial exercises at the Auditorium last night were well attended. The place was crowded, extra seats being called into requisition, and even then many had to stand. It was by far the largest and the most representative audience ever assembled in Butte on Decoration day.

The meeting was called to order by Post Commander J. G. Henneberry, after which the chaplain, Rev. Albritton, pronounced the opening prayer. Miss Genevieve Smith recited the address of Lincoln at Gettysburg with great feeling and power.

Miss Erma Charles, one of Butte's youngest and most popular singers, sang "The Holy City" and had to respond to an insistent encore. Her clever accompanist was Miss Grace Noyes. John A. Davies rendered baritone solo "Sleep," a patriotic song, which was one of the gems of the evening. He was encored and sang another song entitled "Sleep" also, but a lullaby, by E. M. Henry. His accompanist was Mrs. Leo C. Bryant, and she added much to the charm of the selections. Mrs. Bryant is a recent arrival in Butte and a finished musician. Mr. Davies has seldom been heard in Butte, but certainly will be henceforth.

The first appearance of Leo C. Bryant, the violinist, before a Butte audience resulted in an ovation for him. He gave a difficult selection, the seventh concerto (De Beriot), and his bowing and technique were exquisite. In response to the enthusiastic encore he gave a patriotic medley, and under its magic spell the old soldiers became uncontrollable. Often the player was interrupted by the applause of the audience. When he concluded an old soldier spoke to him asking him to repeat "America," which he did, the audience rising en masse and singing the song.

The audience had been aroused to a pitch of enthusiasm, and yet when Miss Ida Scott and her accompanist stepped on the stage silence fell instantly. Miss Scott is without question the most popular singer of Butte, and Mrs. Hill is as popular as pianist and organist. Miss Scott sang Kipling's "Recessional" with feeling, power and expression. It is a heavy selection, but the fresh young voice was more than equal to the demand. Miss Scott would not accept the imperative encore, simply bowing.

The benediction brought the programme to a close.

Ella Knowles Haskell was the orator of the evening and said in part: "Another year has passed into eternity, another link has been added to the endless chain called time, and at the commencement of a new century we have again assembled to honor the immortal dead, to commemorate their virtues and instruct a younger generation in lessons of patriotism.

"This is a day of memories, sad, glorious, eternal memories. Our vision is directed to the fast receding past, to a morning in April 40 years ago, when the white winged angel of peace withdrew from the sight of men, and the nation was awakened from its repose by the reverberation of cannon which echoed through the land. The telegraph wires bore the messages from Fort Sumter, and Columbia, pale and amazed, but fully aroused at last, called for her armor. The people felt and knew that those guns were aimed, not so much at Fort Sumter as at the heart of the American republic. The volcano that had been smouldering and smoking for 30 years had burst forth in all its fury. Civil war had come, and what the end would be was known only to a higher power.

"As the repeated calls of the immortal Lincoln for more troops were heard in the land, hundreds of thousands left their homes and the peaceful occupations of husbandry and trade and went forth to follow wherever the great generals, Sheridan, Sherman and Grant, might lead, though it be to certain death upon many a bloody field. Heroes and victors, many of them sleep peacefully and unheeded beneath a southern sun in nameless and unmarked graves, and Columbia, having sheathed her victorious sword, weeps today for her children slain.

"Under a single stone, an oblong piece of polished granite, in the National cemetery at Washington, which was the ancestral home of the great Confederate general, Robert E. Lee, lie the remains of two thousand one hundred and eleven Union soldiers, gathered from the Rappahannock and from the corpse-strewn battlefield of Bull's Run after the war. The inscription on the stone reads: 'Here lie the bones of two thousand one hundred and eleven unknown soldiers. Their remains could not be identified, but their names and deaths are recorded in the archives of their country, and its grateful citizens honor them as of their noble army of martyrs. May they rest in peace.' This inscription finds a response in every true American heart. The valorous deeds of those who rest beneath it, whether they perished in the very midst of death's kingdom, with the warrior's battle cry upon their lips, or in ambushed surprise with fast gripped bayoneted rifles awaiting final release, with a courage that has made our country a land of god-like heroes, they are all comprehended in the one word 'unknown.'

"Upon this sacred ground the north and south in reverence meet. Ivy twines its graceful vines, and flowers bloom above thousands of graves of unknown soldiers, marked by small blocks of granite designated only by numbers, while upon the heights stands the old mansion of Robert E. Lee, facing Washington, and in plain view of the capitol. Its spacious hall, frescoed by the hand of Lee himself, with paintings representing the chase, its deserted parlors and vacant reception rooms, with their large marble fireplaces, which formerly roared with the fires of hospitality, speak to us of the days of southern chivalry and of the demolition of war, while within a few feet, almost directly in front of the wide portico with its massive Doric columns, the great Union general, Phil Sheridan, lies at rest, with the glory of victory and the gratitude of a mighty people surrounding him for a shroud. Here one may read the history of a nation's peril, of saddened freemen, breaking hearts and the burial of hope, love, ambition, pride and all the world holds most dear."

DECORATION DAY WINDOWS.

Leyson, Gamer and Calkins Made Especial Effort for the Day of Memory.

The most artistic window in honor of Decoration day was that of the store of the old soldier and young patriot, J. H. Leyson, and crowds were before it all day. Great silk flags were draped on either side of the rear of the window. Center front arms were stacked with cartridge boxes and belts on the sheathed bayonets. On the right was a picture of Lee and Jackson in conference. To the left was a picture of Grant. Between was a picture of the battle of Vicksburg; before which was a wreath in the center of which were the words "In Memory of Our Heroes." Right in front lay a card bearing the lines:

And "The North and the South march together;
They are under one flag to-day.
And we pluck the rose of remembrance
Alike for the Blue and the Gray."

Gamer's shoe store had a marble shaft memorial, tastefully draped, and Calkins' book store had one window entirely devoted to Decoration day, and the other window draped in welcome to the delegates to the U. C. T. convention. Many other windows had some token of Decoration day, but the three mentioned were the most elaborate noticed by the Inter Mountain representative.

TESTED THEIR PATRIOTISM

High School Pupils Receive an Unexpected Visit From Lincoln Post and Relief Corps.

A committee from Lincoln Post G. A. R., and one from the Lincoln Relief Corps yesterday visited the High school in order to see how patriotism is taught in the public schools.

In the east Superintendent Young says that it is customary for the posts to give notice to the schools. The superintendent is waited upon and with the visiting Post he makes out a programme for the celebration of "Patriotism Day." It is intended to impress a love of country in the minds of the children.

Here no notice was given to the superintendent and the first he heard of it was when a reporter for this paper telephoned him to find out the order of exercises.

The children yesterday went through the patriotic exercises including the flag salute, they give daily, making a lengthy programme. Several of the G. A. R. men and several of the ladies of the corps addressed the pupils on the subject of true patriotism.

SCARLET FEVER SPREADING

Three New Cases Reported to Health Authorities—Twenty-seven Cases in May.

The dreaded scarlet fever is spreading in Butte and the city health officials are becoming alarmed lest the disease gets a serious start in the city.

A case was reported from No. 41 Anaconda road and another at No. 435 of the same street. The third case to unset the officials was reported in from 718 North Wyoming street.

During last Wednesday five children, in one family, were taken sick with the disease at 116 East Daly street, Walkerville. The three cases reported yesterday swelled the total number for the month of May to 27 cases, while three deaths have occurred from the disease during that time.

The city health officer, Dr. Leggat, stated that the disease which is now prevalent throughout the city is not of the serious kind, and this fact gives encouragement to the health authorities. Dr. Leggat believes the fever will continue to spread until about the time the public schools close for the summer, a week hence.

IS NOT STEIN'S PARTNER.

The Man Captured at Boulder Will Probably Be Given His Liberty.

Chief Reynolds, of the police department, returned last evening with the man captured by the sheriff at Boulder, and who was thought to be the partner of Fred Stein, the alleged bogus check and money order passer. Chief Reynolds has doubts about the man detained, being the one he is after, and since returning to Butte with him that official is about convinced that a mistake has been made.

When Stein's partner, in order to escape the closely following policeman, jumped out of a two-story window, it is thought he injured one of his ankles. The fact that the man captured at Boulder answered the description, to a large extent, of the man wanted, and was perceptibly lame, made the capturing officials almost certain that they had the supposed criminal.

One who was well acquainted with Stein's partner in Butte, visited the city jail last evening and stated that the person brought back from Boulder by Chief Reynolds was not the man wanted. It is expected that the police department will release the prisoner to-day, unless something further turns up to convince the chief that Stein's partner is in his keeping.

The police decline to make public the identity of the man under arrest.

SHE IS AN INCORRIGIBLE

Pretty Lydia Knutt, Seventeen Years Old and Wayward, Is Under Arrest.

Lydia Knutt, a modest, pretty girl 17 years old, was arrested at her home in Mahoney street today on a charge of incorrigibility and taken to the county jail. The arrest was made by Constable Frank Zimmerman of Justice Taylor's court. It is claimed that the girl has lately been running wild and refused to obey the orders of her parents. It is the intention to send her to the House of the Good Shepherd at Helena instead of the reform school.
