Jack Wade Gets Decision Over Jack Donnelly In Third Round

Referee Stops Bout to Avoid Brutality—Clever Exhibition Marks Opening of New Boxing Era—St. Louis Boy Game But Outclassed by the Salt Lake Lad.

"Kid" Lavelle Loses to Jerry McCarthy in Seventh Round—"Kid" Foley and "Young" Thomas Have a Pretty Go—Latters Get Verdict—Contests Clean in Every Way.

DONNELLY'S STATEMENT.

I have to admit that I was beaten, but it will not happen again. He got in a lucky punch in the second round that set me going. I could have won, could I have stayed through the third round. I will bet from $200 to $3,000 that I will get the decision if Wade will meet me again.

JACK DONNELLY.

WADE'S STATEMENT.

I went the three fastest rounds of my life with Donnelly. He is a good man and fights well. I think I can whip him again. I knew he was a game and hard man to handle, and that I had to settle him quick. I was sure after the first round that I could out-box him and win.

JACK WADE.

In one of his cleverest, cleanest and fastest boxing bouts ever seen in Butte, Jack Wade, of Salt Lake, last night at the big saucer track arena, stopped Young Jack Donnelly, of St. Louis, in the third round of what was to have been a twenty round go. The victory was decisive and reflects great credit on the Salt Lake lad, who conceded his opponent about two pounds. The result was in the nature of a surprise too, for though Donnelly made a good showing, Wade showing more cleverness and ability as an all round boxer, than even his friends had given him credit for. The decision carried with it the light weight championship of Montana and the winner's and of a purse of $400.

The bout was the main event of a boxing carnival, with two preliminaries, given under the auspices of the Butte Athletic club and served to demonstrate, as did the matches preceding it, that good legitimate sport without any objectionable features, can be put on in this city. for the advancement of the manly art of self defense and the edification of its lovers and the law be complied with to the letter, at the same time. That the law was conformed with is attested by the fact that the authorities were present to take action in case of any violation and found no occasion to interfere. The consensus of opinion, among those who witnessed the bouts, was that they were all that could be desired, clean and on the level and at the same time as good sport as has ever been seen in a ring. Every body was perfectly satisfied and it would now appear that a management has in hand, a sport dear to all sport lovers, which will be conducted so that no objection to it can be raised.

"Kid" Foley and "Young" Thomas. The first preliminary found "Kid" Foley and "Young" Thomas facing each other for six rounds. The bout went the limit and was a clever exhibition throughout. The youths showed themselves to be good at the sparring game and for boxers, of their experience, put up an article of the manly art which was popular in every respect. Foley was a slight favorite due to that fact that he recently gained a decision over Thomas and the showing of the latter surprised many. Referee Freddie Bogan could do nothing else than give the decision to Thomas.

Lavelle Loses to McCarthy.

"Kid" Lavelle, formerly of Denver, but who now claims Butte as his stamping ground, was expected to show up better than Jerry McCarthy, the "Walkerville pet," in the second preliminary, but did not do so, though it must be said to his credit that he put up a game and clever argument. He handled himself nicely and was as good at scoring as his adversary, but his condition was not up to the necessary key.

That was evident in the fifth round, when the fast work McCarthy cut out for him told and caused him to puff considerably, that tell tale evidence of being winded. Lavelle stuck to it, however, and was still willing to fight when the seventh round opened. He had been care of himself. Donnelly sent his left to the jaw and got a hard right on the head in return. Wade rushed Donnelly to the ropes where he landed right and left on the jaw and then hooked his feet and strong when the gong sounded.

Wade Grows More Confident.

In the second round Wade, more confident than ever, sent a hard right and then a left to the jaw. Donnelly tried for the body and they clinched. When they broke Donnelly, fighting low, sent his right over the heart and before he could get away received a right and left jab on the jaw. Again they clinched. Donnelly came back hard and landed right in the ribs. He was going it hard, realizing that his only hope was in a decisive blow. Wade refused to get rattled at Donnelly's hurricane tactics and met his second rush with a right and left on the jaw, that sent the St. Louis lad reeling. Donnelly landed on Wade's tests at the saucer last night that an effort would be made to match Jack Wade, for another go with "Kid" Oglesby, of Helena and this morning matters assumed such shape, that a contest between them is almost assured. Negotiations were opened up by wire, informing Oglesby that certain well known men of Butte were willing to waxer, from $3,000 to $6,000 on the result and Oglesby replied that he was not averse to taking on Wade. Fred Agatz, the well known theatrical and sport manager of Helena, who is in Butte, conducted the negotiations by wire and stated that he believed a match could be arranged. If the matter is settled, as everything indicates it will be, the match will be pulled off before the Butte Athletic club at the big Park street saucer. Wade is anxious for another go at Oglesby and believes he will redeem himself for the defeat he suffered at the hands of the Helena kid.

Will Be Hennessy Night.

This will be Hennessy night at the saucer and the programme arranged would indicate that the sport will be the equal of, if not better than any yet offered by the Butte Athletic association. The card includes a one-mile professional handicap, a three mile professional, lap race and a five mile amateur race, open to Montana riders only. The prizes for the last named race have been donated by the Hennessy Mercantile Co. and aggregate $110 in value. There will be four regular prizes and two lap, or pacing prizes, thirteen riders are entered. In addition to the bicycle races, there will be an exhibition of hand and pyramid balancing by George Trump, the legless wonder, Zoyarra with his equilibrist feats, on the revolving globe and Ed. Baisden with his marvelous trick riding.

OVERHEARD AT FRED FERRELL'S

HENNESSEY: It is a queer thing Mr. Dooley that in this Schley-Sampson controversee there's no woman in the case. DOOLEY: I don't know about that. Wasn't it a loop in her train that the Brooklyn took that made HER best man, Schley so much trouble?

HENNESSEY: Sure, had forgotten at all, at all, that all ships are called "she's" and "her's" so at-ther all there's a female

In the Schley-Sampson case. At this point the conversation of the two gentlemen was interrupted by the gentleman at the bar placing two Scotch high-balls on the bar, as he reassuringly said, "All set, gentlemen."

down for the count three times, but was undaunted and was mixing it up, though getting all the worst of it, when forty seconds before the seventh round would have ended. Referee Bogan stopped the bout and gave the decision to McCarthy. The announcement was received with cheers.

Donnelly Mixed It Up.

When the principals for the main event appeared Harry Monohan was chosen referee and he announced that Marquis of Queensbury rules would govern the bout. He cautioned the men about striking in the clinches and sent them to their corners. Wade was looked after by "Young" Thomas, Mose, Jack and Louis LaFontise. In Donnelly's corner were Frank Purcell, "Buck" Heffner and Jack Livingston. Wade's weight was given as 136 pounds and Donnelly's at 138. The latter looked to be a trifle heavier.

When Dr. Ironsides, the official time-keeper, struck the gong for the opening of the bout, both men came to the center with an alacrity that bespoke confidence. Donnelly proceeded to mix it up but found Wade not only on the defensive, but in a second a strong aggressor as well. Wade landed right and left on jaw, and they clinched. After sparring for an opening Donnelly sent his right hard to the ribs and got a stiff jolt on the nose in return. Again they clinched, only to break and begin in-fighting, with honors about even. Each man appeared to realize that he must settle his opponent in short order or not at all. Donnelly hooked his right to the head and missed a vicious swing for the body. Wade landed hard on the ear when they clinched. There was another mix up with Wade showing more ability to take mouth and got a jolt in return that sent him to the mat. He took a good bit of the count and got up, only to be floored again. Wade was boxing like a whirlwind and had Donnelly going when the gong saved him.

Referee Stops the Bout.

Donnelly seemed fresher when the third round opened, but Wade was still strong and went after the St. Louis lad harder than ever. Donnelly struggled gamely and fought like a man who does not know the meaning of defeat, but he could not stop the onslaught of Wade, who appeared to land at will. Once Donnelly sent his left to Wade's jaw and jolted him severely, but Wade was right back with a hard right on the point of the chin. Donnelly was going, but he rushed in and clinched, thus avoiding further damage at that time. It was now apparent that Wade was tired and pretty well winded. He realized, too, that he must finish Donnelly at once or take a chance on a long drawn contest, in which he might get the loser's end. Accordingly Wade went after his man hammer and tongs and sent his right to the jaw three times, while his left found the point of the chin. That was the end. Donnelly keeled over, all but out, and yet he regained his feet and wanted to continue. Referee Monahan very properly refused to allow the bout to go on, as he had been instructed by the club management to allow nothing bordering on brutality. Had he permitted the bout to continue Donnelly would have been knocked out.

To Match Wade and Oglesby. It was announced after the boxing con-
