Of Interest to Women

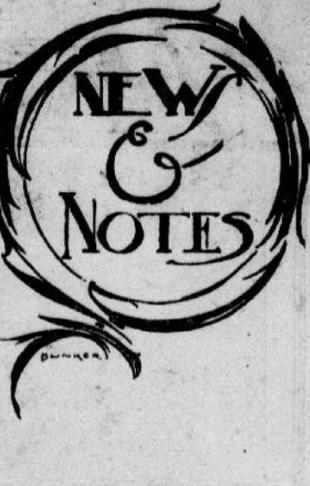

Opinions of a Bachelor. Here is the opinion of a bachelor who has "made" more belles than any other society man in his set.

A man likes beauty as a bee does flowers. He says it has no attraction if not linked with wit and charm. But experience proves the contrary. Beauty has always been queen, and though a wise Frenchman says her power is waning, there is little evidence of it yet.

A man likes a neat woman and admires a stylish one. If you can work this combination you have a winner. But it is difficult in these days of baggy coats and frowzy hair.

A man likes a woman of independent and strong character. But he does not want it too strong. There must be sufficient feminine weakness about her to tickle his vanity as her protector and defender. He likes the clinging vine, but don't cling too much after the marriage ceremony has been performed. He may decide that what was but charming dependence in the honeymoon is a heavy load after the glamour has worn off.

A man likes a woman to be capable of talking well if need arises, and if he wants to show off to relatives and friends what a smart girl he has. But he doesn't want her to talk too much when he is the only listener. He would rather do

***** ATTRACTIONS OF THE WEEK ***** Sutton's New Grand. "Rupert of Hentzau" — Sunday evening. Union Family Theater. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" — Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings; Wednesday matinee. *****

OWING to the success that attended the initial performance here of Anthony Hope's romance, "Rupert of Hentzau," Manager Sutton has made arrangements with the management of the company to give a special performance of that play Sunday at Sutton's New Grand. Few plays of recent years possess the magnetic essentials that are embodied in this dramatization.

Arrangements have been completed with Manager Sutton through which Prof. Levy of Philadelphia will appear in this city shortly. The art gallery of moving pictures is said to be, by the critics, the best yet exhibited. Many novel features will be the talking himself. A man likes an accomplished and bright woman rather than a talented one, and entertaining qualities rather than markedly intellectual ones. If you really are clever, be clever enough to conceal it, if you want to be popular with the average man. He is afraid of the women who take degrees as bachelor of philosophy and other terrifying scientific terms. He knows he cannot shine in such society, and he hides him to the girl who babbles about her friends, the play, and such brain-soothing subjects, or who will listen while he talks about foot ball, the club or why his dog didn't get a prize.—Philadelphia Press.

Not Up in Geography. A certain Unitarian minister of Greater New York is determined that his young daughter shall not know the dark side of orthodox religion. The miss went to the country with her mother during the past summer, and there found a playmate in the youthful daughter of a village teacher. One day the following conversation was heard: "You've told a story," said the village girl, accusingly. "Don't you know where folks go that tell stories?" "No," replied the New York miss. "Where do they go?" "They go to hell." "Where's hell?" "Why, Minnie Blank, you're a minister's daughter and don't know where hell is!" "Well, I don't care," observed the accused. "I never was in a geography class in my life."—New York Times.

How to Catch Cold. "Yes, I know. Another cold," said the doctor. "I do not know what medical men would do if it were not for you women." And he turned to the creature of furs and wraps, smiled one of his appreciative smiles and continued: "Remove your bon, please. Do you realize that the high collars that women wear around their necks are responsible for nearly all the colds that your sex gets? It is so.

"Winter and summer alike you will insist upon wrapping up your delicate necks in high silk, velvet, cloth, linen or chiffon covering. If it be not this, why it is a yard or more of ribbon tightly drawn about the neck, and naturally the neck gets tender and over-sensitive from the fancy bandages and swathing that are forever about it. With the first draught there is a cough.

"My advice to you as a friend and physician is to go straight home, and when you cure this cold throw away your ribbons and other neck traps. Leave the neck bare. Never mind what the other woman does. "You will find your health much improved if you give your neck a chance to get acquainted with the natural order of things. My advice does not apply to you alone.

"It is intended for all women who wear chokey neck stuff and endanger their health by forever catching cold. You may not like my frankness now, but if you follow my advice you will bless me inside of six months and your colds will be few and far between in the bargain."—New York Sun.

New Decorative Idea. A new note has been struck in the way of harmonious house furnishings. Instead of following out the scheme that has been in vogue for so long of having each room fitted up in a different tone, the latest notion is to have one introduced with this performance. The engagement is for five nights, commencing Sunday, January 25, with matinee Thursday.

The greatest of all war dramas, "Barbara Frietchie" is to be presented in this city soon, at Sutton's Grand, by Mr. James Neill and the great Neill company, whose success last summer in San Francisco, during a run of 29 weeks, carried all before it.

Mr. Neill and his company played "Barbara Frietchie" in San Francisco during that engagement 34 times and could have presented it many more times before tremendous audiences had he not had contracted previously to present other plays within a given time.

It was first produced in San Francisco by the Neill company during the visit there of President McKinley, and was not only witnessed by nearly all members of the cabinet, but by the governors of four states and their staffs. It is in four acts with the scenes laid in and around Frederick, Maryland. Mr. Neill will be seen as Captain Trumbull, the Northern hero, and Miss Edythe Chapman as Barbara. The entire cast will be the same as it was during the triumphant success of the play in San Francisco.

Mildred Holland, who made such a triumphant success in Theodore Kremer's romantic drama, "The Power Behind the Throne," has a new play, written by Carina Jordan, entitled "The Lily and the Prince," which will be produced at the magnificent Teck theater, Buffalo, this coming spring. The locale of the new play is laid at Florence, in sunny color throughout the entire house. On entering a house that has been furnished according to this new idea, one's artistic sense is immediately improved with the beautiful effect that is obtained by this harmonious blending of the most desired of all things, distinct individuality, is more than ever imparted to your own domicile by having everything in it of your favorite color. But one needs to have excellent taste in carrying out this idea, if they cannot afford the services of a professional decorator, for it would be rather unfortunate for a woman with auburn hair to fit up her home in a glorious red or that she of the raven tresses should decide upon the dull soft blue tones. So you see, it is going to require some talent along artistic lines to avoid appearing at a disadvantage in one's home.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S YOUNGEST SON.

MASTER QUINTEN ROOSEVELT President's Youngest Son.

QUINTEN is the only member of the president's family who can boast of the capital as a birthplace. He was born just prior to the Spanish-American war at 1735 N street, while his father was organizing the Rough Riders. He does not think much of Washington as a place of residence. The White House in his estimation is a poor substitute for the home at Oyster Bay. He does not relish being confined to a small part of the mansion, but would like to roam at will throughout the building and investigate the progress of public business from time to time. The other day he desired to walk through the flower beds on stiffs. His father told him that the gardener objected. The youngster answered: "I don't see what good it does for you to be president. There are so many things we can't do here. I wish I was home again."
