

DEATH WAS SUDDEN

P. J. BURROUGHS SUCCEUMS TO AN ATTACK OF APOPLEXY.

CAME HERE LAST THURSDAY

Was a Mason, an Elk and an Expert Jewelry Salesman—Body Shipped to Fremont, Ohio, for Interment.

P. J. Burroughs, a traveling jewelry salesman, who came to Butte from the East a few days ago to conduct the special jewelry sale at the Hight & Fairfield store, died of apoplexy in his room at the Thornton hotel yesterday morning. His wife was with him.

Shortly after death the body was taken to the parlors of the Montana Undertaking company and prepared for shipment to Fremont, Ohio, the home of the mother of the deceased, where it will be interred.

The remains were sent East last night via the Northern Pacific and were accompanied by Mrs. Burroughs. Before being taken from the undertakings rooms, however, the Masonic and Elk lodges, of which orders Burroughs was a member, held services over them and Rev. S. C. Blackiston delivered a short funeral service.

Came to Town Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Burroughs arrived in Butte last Thursday and, it is said, that on their arrival, Mr. Burroughs expressed to his wife the belief that something would happen to him here. He suggested that instead of stopping in Butte they continue on to the coast, but she did not take his remarks seriously and they decided to remain until Mr. Burroughs had completed his business.

After the Hight & Fairfield sale Saturday evening he went to his room in the hotel and retired. Although somewhat fatigued, he did not appear to be ill, but shortly after getting into bed he was seized by apoplexy. About 2 o'clock he asked his wife to call a physician and she did so, summoning Dr. Leggat, who occupies a room in the hotel.

Dr. Leggat gave Mr. Burroughs a restorative, which afforded the patient relief, and after remaining a short time returned to his own apartments, leaving instructions with Mrs. Burroughs to call him in case of a second attack.

After Dr. Leggat had gone Mr. Burroughs got up and sat in a chair until nearly daylight, when, at the solicitation of his wife he laid down again. Mrs. Burroughs fell asleep and when she awoke, which was about 8 o'clock, her husband was dead.

A Mason and Elk.

After notifying the hotel attaches of the occurrence Mrs. Burroughs made it known that Mr. Burroughs was a Mason and an Elk and several members of these organizations took charge of the body of the dead man and rendered Mrs. Burroughs all the assistance possible. The ladies at the hotel also comforted her.

Mr. Burroughs was 42 years old and possessed a national reputation as a jewelry salesman.

SOME PROBATE MATTERS.

Judge McClernan this morning appointed William Jane administrator of his mother's estate. His mother was named Amelia Jane and she died in this city last December. The order was made on the application of William Jane.

In the matter of the estate of Stephen Hughes, deceased, the court made an order of partial distribution of property of the value of $4,548. The administrator testified that all claims against the estate had been settled. He asked that the property be distributed to the heirs.

The property named was all of the estate except some litigated mining interests. The administrator said that the suits over these interests are in the supreme court and that the final decision of them would not make the estate liable in any way, as it would still have some mining interests.

HANFORD IS GREAT

BUTTE IS FAVORED WITH SHAKESPEAREAN PRESENTATION.

CURTAIN RAISER BEST OF ALL

Hanford's Personality and Splendid Acting Saves an Otherwise Mediocre Cast and Captivates Large Audience at Sutton's.

Though in the middle of the Lenten season, there was a good sized audience at Sutton's New Grand last night to greet Charles B. Hanford in his presentation of "The Taming of the Shrew." There was a fair sprinkling of society's notables also, and in the main it was an audience discriminating and equal to the appreciation of the splendid work of Mr. Hanford.

Though the star's splendid work in the main piece was far above what has been seen in Butte before, his best hit was in the curtain raiser, "The Old Guard," in which he took the part of Haversack.

As Good as Mansfield.

Without detracting from his Shakespearean role Hanford's presentation of an old, old tale of Napoleon's days was grand. His makeup was perfect and his acting was of a class superior, in this sketch, to any of his contemporaries, not even excepting a comparison for the nonce with Mansfield.

Mr. Hanford's great drawback is the nondescript support given to him. In the curtain raiser Marie Drofna gives a good bit of emotional work—but there's nothing else in the piece but Hanford, though he does for all.

Yet through the entire piece there runs a note of discord, due to the lack of a support commensurate with Hanford's ability. The one actress in the company is Marie Drofna, who does things at times, too, which destroys her good impressions.

Miss Grantly Is Winsome.

Helen Grantly is a beautiful woman—on the Maxine Elliott style of beauty—and her work is satisfactory in the measure of acting though there have been many better, much better, Kathelines. She is handicapped with a soft voice, unfitted for the part and not distinguishable past the orchestra rail. Her beauty and her gowns make up for much and she was appreciated by the audience, which, after all, is the test.

By far the best of the support is William J. Shea as Grumio. His comedy work is pleasing and effective. Irving Knight is a gushing sort of a young man who has much to learn; Paul Anderson is of the average type of Shakespearean support to stars and P. A. Nannary officially fills a vacancy always apparent in the role of Baptista. B. O. Meech as Tranio is a stick who gives one the impression that he is suffering with a crick in his neck and has his arms pinned tightly to his hips in the fashion of the school boy reciting his first "piece."

Stuart Beebe gives occasional glimpses in his brief parts of talent.

It speaks volumes for Mr. Hanford that with a mediocre cast he is able to accomplish so much and in a manner which compels his audience to forget the roughness of the play and the insipidity of much of the support.

The Hanford engagement will close at Sutton's tonight and the advance sale bespeaks an even larger attendance.

CASES ARE SET FOR TRIAL

The Auction Book Sale Is the Talk of the Town.

At the opening sale Saturday the store was filled with Butte's book lovers, the most of them going away loaded with books which they bought for a song.

Many of them at much less price than the cost of binding. The exclamation could be heard on every hand, "How can they sell standard books in good bindings, paper and print at such a ridiculously low price. It is certainly more of a book donation than a sale."

The stock consists of all standard books, histories, encyclopedias, dictionaries, bibles, works of art, Dudley Warner's "Library of the World's Best Literature" and Spofford's "Library of Choice Literature." All of the new copyrighted books, and in fact, a complete line of choice literature that ought to interest the reading people of Butte. Mr. Thomas, who has charge of the sale, informs the Inter Mountain that it is the advertising department of eighty-three publishing houses. That is the reason that books are sold without regard to their cost or value.

The sale will continue every day at 10:30 a. m. and 2:30 p. m.

A SCOTCH VERDICT

TRADES ASSEMBLY REINSTATES OFFENDING MUSICIANS.

CANNOT PLAY AT THEATERS

Musician's Union Will Appeal the Case to the Western Labor Union—Principle Involved.

The trouble between the Musicians' Union and the seven members who were expelled from the union was adjusted by the Trades and Labor Assembly at its regular meeting last night.

The decision is something of a Scotch verdict guilty but not proven. The assembly practically overrules the action of the musicians by reinstating the offenders and, at the same time, apparently shows its knowledge of the offense by prohibiting them from playing at any of the local theaters.

The matter came up in the form of an appeal to the assembly by the expelled members, who maintained that the evidence produced by the union was not conclusive; that they had no means of making a livelihood, now that they were expelled from the union.

Matter Will Be Appealed. The latter argument seemed to have had most weight with the assembly, as the very nature of its decision seems to be a belief in the culpability of the accused.

"We are going to appeal the matter to the Western Labor Union," said George Morse of the Musicians' Union this morning.

"Of course, the decision of the assembly practically throws these people out of the union, as there is no opportunity for them to make a living at the profession, outside of the theaters. However, there is a principle involved that we are going to maintain. Meanwhile, if we learn that these musicians continue to play for less than union wages we intend to take steps to have them summarily ejected."
