

FALLEN LIVES AFTER A SHAFT OF STEEL PIERCED HIS HEAD

For a man to live and "pursue the even tenor of his way" after being pierced through the head by a bar of steel three inches in circumference seems an impossibility, yet such a man lives in Butte today.

Three years ago Charles Fallen was being lowered into the mine. In his arms Fallen supported several

He was removed to the hospital where he spent many weeks before recovering. That he should have survived the injuries is nothing short of a miracle, but survive he did, and there is nothing in his appearance to denote the horrible experience except a tell-tale scar above his left temple and another beneath the jaw.

The physicians who attended Fallen machine drills, their heads resting on the cage floor, while their smaller ends projected upward.

One of the drills slipped from the edge of the cage floor.

Fallen leaned forward to recover it. At that minute the lower end of the drill struck against a piece of timber in the shaft, the other end catching Fallen squarely under the left jaw and three feet of rusty steel as large as a man's wrist pierced his head from teeth to skull.

declared it to be an accident and recovery without parallel and they gave the young man credit for an abnormal amount of vitality.

Fallen, who is 25 years of age, lives in Centerville and still follows mining. The accompanying photograph is the only one of Fallen with the drill in his head ever published. It was taken shortly after his recovery, while he was still at the hospital, and is a freak of photography of which Fallen is very fond.

JOHN RAHN LOST FROM HIS FAMILY TWENTY-FOUR YEARS

John Rahn, who lived at 1301 Chicago avenue, has been discovered and his discovery was brought about through a picture which appeared in the Inter Mountain February 15. A short sketch of Mr. Rahn also appeared with his picture.

Mr. Rahn left his home in the East 24 years ago, and went to Colorado, where all trace of him was lost by the family, consisting of a wife and several children.

He knocked around the Western country for years, and although he often thought of writing home he failed to write because, at the time of leaving, he had taken a silent vow not to do so until he had amassed a fortune. When times finally went well he did write, but his letters were returned; the family had gone to another part of the state to live.

JOHN RAHN.

Turned Up in Helena.

He drifted from one place to another and finally, years ago, turned up in Helena and engaged in business. While there he celebrated the 70th anniversary of his birth, and although the newspapers there and in other parts of the state published an account of the anniversary it did not come under the notice of his relatives in the East, who had years before given him up for dead.

They had pictured him in Indian fights while blazing trails for the advance of civilization and had imagined him submitting to the ravages of disease in some far-off land where the sound of human footsteps is seldom heard.

But they were only pictures of the imagination, for Mr. Rahn has not been scalped or stolen and is a hearty, fine-looking old man today.

A Sure Medium.

Shortly after his picture appeared in the Inter Mountain a cousin of Mr. Rahn's sons and daughters living in Butte secured a copy of the paper and sent it to the family in St. Paul.

The Butte cousin was not sure that the Rahn of Butte was the Rahn who disappeared from his Eastern home 24 years ago, but thought he might be the one.

One look at the photograph convinced Mr. Rahn and the older children that the right Rahn had been found.

Two days ago there arrived in Butte from St. Paul another John Rahn, 26 years old, a son of the old gentleman.

Although only two years old when his father left the East, he was anxious to see his long-lost sire.

He had some difficulty in finding his father, but the meeting was a happy one to both.

The young man is still in town and will remain several days.

for training, five for coal passers, one as mess attendant and one as an apprentice.

"If you get into a fight you'll have to show the enemy what Montana boys can do," said one of the crowd that stood talking to the embryo sailors.

Answer Sufficient.

"We came from Billings, where men die in their boots," said one youngster, who looked as if he would fight if the occasion required it.

"Say," said another, "do they have newspapers on the battleships? If they do, we'll get Charlie Powers to peddle papers. He used to carry the Inter Mountain at Billings."

Mr. Powers acknowledged the distinction with a smile, and showed that he was a good newspaper man by preserving a colossal silence.

Just then the "red-headed guy" came in, and the boys put on an air of discipline and their eyes looked far away, probably to their old homes on the prairies around Billings, where the first meadow-larks are beginning to sing and the sick-eared maverick will soon roll his tail and pull for the wild bunch.

Billings' Enlistment.

LADIES ALWAYS IN ATTENDANCE

FROM CAYUSE TO FORECASTLE FOR THE GLORY OF THE FLAG

"Stick close to your desk and never go to sea. And you'll be a ruler in the queen's navy."

The advice of Gilbert & Sullivan in the opera "Pinafore" may seem a little ridiculous, but its humor is surpassed by the arrival of two cowpunchers this morning from Billings who have passed the examination for Uncle Sam's navy and will leave for Mare Island in the morning.

With 13 others the cowboys came in to join the other recruits this morning and are staying at the Southern hotel enjoying their last experience in the haunts of the landlubbers before they take to the ocean blue to learn how to shoot straight, keep clean and tie a bowline knot with their teeth.

Not one of the boys has ever seen a boat of any description and not a few of them have ever seen a sheet of water bigger than the Yellowstone that dashes in muddy wavelets through the sagebrush hills near Billings.

"Who's in charge of you?" asked an Inter Mountain reporter of the boys this morning.

Only One Apprentice.

It was little Dick Murphy, the only apprentice in the gang, who answered and there was a little of the spirit of the sailor in the lad's eyes when he replied: "We're in charge of ourselves just now but there's a red-headed guy who calls himself a petty officer who's going to take us to 'Frisco."

"That's right, kid," said one of the cowpunchers. "Call him a red-headed guy now while you have a chance; pretty soon you'll be touching your cap every time you see him."

"All right," said the coming Dewey, and he gave a military salute to show he knew how.

Eight of the boys enlisted as landsmen

EMPLOYMENT OFFICE HAS HELP

City Employment Agent Cronin has an assistant in the person of John C. Bowen, who was at one time a shift boss in the Anaconda mine. The selection was made yesterday by Mayor Davey. It is understood that the appointment is not a permanent one, and the place will not be permanently filled until the council disposes of the ordinance creating the position.

COX SAYS HE IS CROOKED

John Cox, who has occupied a cell in the county jail since Monday when he was arrested for illegal voting, was taken before Justice Arnold this morning to answer to the charge.

Cox realized that the case would go against him, as he lives in the Fourth ward, but cast his vote in the Sixth; accordingly he pleaded guilty. Justice Arnold announced that he would pass sentence tomorrow morning. The penalty for illegal voting is a fine not exceeding $1,000 or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year.

Justice Nelson will have before him tomorrow morning J. C. Hurley, Dan Harrington and J. F. Hurbert, also charged with having voted illegally on election day.
