

MANNING IS FREE CONSUMES SMOKE HE LIVED IN BUTTE

NOTORIOUS BURGLAR BELIEVED TO BE IN BUTTE.

FATHER OF DEGENERATE SONS

Children Are in Penitentiaries, But He Has Just Been Released From Canon City and May Be in This City.

If you ever awake in the middle of the night and see the frightful grimace of Frank Manning, the subject of the accompanying picture, staring at you, don't get frightened; just grab and hold him until the police arrive and you may share liberal rewards for his capture from various parts of the country.

It is more than likely that his face will be hidden behind a mask and he will carry in one hand a bunch of keys and a dark lantern. In the other hand he will have a revolver or bludgeon. But don't get frightened. Grab him and hold him fast.

This fellow is a burglar and one of the worst crooks in the United States. What a terrible face has this Frank Manning of a dozen aunts!

Sons in Prison. Manning is the head of a family of degenerates. Several terms in the penitentiary has not had the effect of working reform in his evil-inclined soul.

FRANK MANNING.
House Burglar and All-Around Crook.

Manning is the father of four boys, all of whom are now serving terms in various penitentiaries. The "old man" is, however, at large. The police of cities all over the country have tried in vain to capture him, but of late have been unsuccessful.

It is believed that Manning is now in Butte, as he makes a practice of following the races. He usually lands in a city a few weeks ahead of the races, and the Butte police are keeping a sharp watch for him.

Shot in Denver.

Manning's nefarious specialty is porch climbing and burglarizing private houses. He was captured three years ago in Denver after he had entered a house in one of the swellest residence parts of the city, and was shot in the leg by a young woman.

Manning entered the house by a side window. There were no men in the house, and he had things pretty much his own way until he made his exit. The young woman saw him drop from a window below her room.

She saw his form plainly in the moonlight and she fired two shots at the profile of the man in the yard. One shot took effect in Manning's leg. He was traced by the trail of blood he left behind him and was captured. For this crime he served four years in the penitentiary at Canon City, Colo.

Manning is again abroad. Look out for him!

DENVER CONTRIVANCE THAT PERFORMS USEFUL SERVICE.

SAVES MUCH MONEY IN FUEL

George Harris, a Visitor, Talks About a Machine That Has Rid the Colorado Capital City of Black Clouds, and Recommends It to Butte.

"Say, I saw a smoke consumer and fuel saver before I left Denver that ought to be just the thing for Butte," said George Harris, a Colorado visitor, standing on a street corner today and gazing at the smoke clouds hanging over the Meaderville smelters. "The consumer saves 20 per cent of the fuel which now goes up in smoke, and there must be a great deal of coal and wood used here."

"A. M. Grant is the man who owns the consumer and he perfected the original idea of S. M. Trapp of Tacoma. It is a smoke consumer that consumes smoke.

Describes Machine.
"To the uninitiated it appears as a machine which grinds its own coal, feeds the dust automatically into the furnace and makes a 'deuced' hot fire without a particle of smoke at any time. Just a tiny bit of gray dust that is disseminated through the atmosphere like steam issuing from the stack if one observes closely, but none of it is ever seen to fall. There are no ashes—only about a wheelbarrow load of light brittle clinkers in every 100 hours or so, and everything is clean and natty.

"The fireman doesn't work. Every half hour or so he puts down his paper and looks at the gauges and probably adjusts the air blasts—that's his job. Of course, in a regular run he will feed the coal mill, but even that isn't necessary. The wagons can unload into a bin with a trap chute and the coal travels with the machinery.

"Its fuel saving qualities lie in that there is no loss from unburned gases passing away in the form of smoke; no loss from unburned fuel in the ash pit under the grate bars; no loss due to constant opening of fire doors, thus cooling the boiler; no loss from burning out of grates or other mechanical appliances.

How It Works.

"The coal is first pulverized and this dust is then fed from the hopper into an automatic feeder, which conveys it to the throat of the blast-pipe, when, by the action of a blower, it is mingled with needed amount of air to form perfect combustion, and blown through the blast-pipe into a combustion chamber under a peculiarly constructed arch. Here the fuel is instantly ignited and the burning gases are permitted to escape through the opening in the arch and to pass into an auxiliary combustion chamber formed by a deflecting arch at the rear end of the boiler. The release of the gases from this second combustion chamber is controlled at the will of the operator by an adjustable damper.

Regulates Temperature.

"The temperature of the arch is regulated by the admission of air into the body of the arch, this air being supplied also by a blower, and is forced through a hot-air chamber, thus utilizing the heat which would otherwise radiate through the walls, and by sending the air into the arch at a high temperature prevents any undue chilling of the boiler and also materially aids combustion.

"During the past two years this furnace has been tested on almost all kinds of coal in use in the inter-mountain regions, with working results that show a saving of fuel of over 20 per cent as compared with any other method of boiler firing now in use."

ENTERS DEFAULT IN THE POGREBA DIVORCE CASE

Judge Harney today entered up a default in the Pogreba divorce case, at the request of Attorney John A. Shelton. Mrs. Elizabeth Pogreba is the plaintiff and Norbert Pogreba is the defendant. Suit was brought on the ground of desertion. Mr. Shelton stated to the court that the defendant had not answered the summons in the case. The hearing of Mrs. Pogreba's proofs was set for May 31.

FISCHER, WHO KILLED HIMSELF AT MISSOULA, A TOUGH.

SERVES TIME IN DEER LODGE

Chums With Clinton Dotson Behind the Bars—Prefers Death to Another Term—Kirkwood Must Take His Medicine.

Police officials in Butte were not surprised to read in the Inter Mountain yesterday that Charles Fischer had killed himself.

"Fischer had probably been in jail so often that he dreaded another sentence as a man might dread death," said Detective Murphy this morning. "That is true of many criminals. After a man has lived a wild criminal life, has served several sentences in jails and penitentiaries there is a horror about prolonged incarceration for him.

"However, the man cannot break away from a criminal life. It is bred in him as thoroughly as consumption is bred in a body and it is no more easily exterminated. The greater the education the man has, the more difficult it is for him to shake off crime. That has been proved time and time again.

Was a Butte Man.

"I knew Fischer. He was practically a Butte man and well known to the criminal class of Butte. He had a splendid education and talents that had they been turned elsewhere than into the channels of crime would undoubtedly have made him a wealthy and respected member of any community. Undoubtedly he had contemplated suicide in one way or another when a long term stared him in the face. That time came to him in Missoula and so he ended his life."

Fischer demonstrated that he was a man of education at his recent trial. When arraigned in court in Missoula on the charge of complicity in the flour mill robbery, he dismissed the attorney appointed to defend him and declared that he could take care of himself. He then demonstrated a pretty thorough knowledge of the law. He said that he had studied law under Charles Emory Smith.

Was His Own Lawyer.

With considerable tact he conducted his own case. He strenuously objected to the jury; closely cross-questioned witnesses submitted by the state and carried his case along with dash and vim. However, when placed upon the stand himself and subjected to a vigorous cross-examination he could not stand the strain and repeatedly contradicted himself.

Evidence was piled up against him so strong that the jury returned a verdict of guilty and he was remanded to the county jail pending sentence. Similar was the fate of Kirkwood, Fischer's partner.

In the evidence submitted was a letter written by Fischer to James Douglas, Moscow, Idaho, in which he gave minute directions to Douglas for making a deposit that he was on the north side of the river in Missoula, in the business portion, at 11:15 o'clock March 23, the night of the flour mill robbery. He gave explicit directions to prove that he was going to a barn in which to sleep and setting forth other facts necessary in a deposition.

Career of Crime.

That Fischer had led a long and adventurous career in crime is generally believed by the police. He showed, upon one or two occasions, a thorough knowledge of the rules and regulations of the Texas penitentiary, and he also spoke familiarly of the Minnesota penitentiary. His knowledge of Joliet and Madison, the latter in Iowa, was also such as to fix it that he was familiar with both of these prisons.

Fischer was also in the Deer Lodge jail with Clinton Dotson, who was hanged for complicity in the murder of his father, and it is said schemed to secure Dotson's release. Fischer was to secure a bribe and permit Dotson to pick the lock. He also volunteered to aid Dotson in escaping if he himself secured his liberty in time.

Information received in Butte was somewhat meager of details of the suicide of Fischer and nothing was said about the disposition of the body. However, burial will probably be in the pauper's field in Missoula. Kirkwood will be sentenced as soon as he recovers sufficiently to appear in court.

M. MEYER ANXIOUS THAT BANK PAY TAXES SOMEWHERE

Trouble looms blackly ahead for I. Bank, a money lender, who lives in Minneapolis and draws interest in Butte, providing M. Meyer, who used to be a shoemaker, but does a little money lending himself now, can get things to moving rightly.

Meyer declared today that Bank has $5,000 out on mortgages at heavy interest in Butte, but pays no taxes in the state, being exempt from taxes under the non-resident law. Meyer is seeking evidence of Bank's mortgage property here, and when he gets it into shape he will send it to Minneapolis and try to compel Bank to pay taxes in Minnesota.

"What's your interest in Bank's failure to pay taxes here?" Mr. Meyer was asked today.

"I pay $2,500 in taxes every year in this county, and I want to see this man pay his share. He has $5,000 in mortgages here," was the reply.

Bank is a brother, it is understood, of B. Bank, who is the manager of the Montana Chattel Mortgage company, and does business in Butte.

"Bank is a competitor of yours? You lend money, too?" Mr. Meyer was asked, but he denied that he follows the business that Shylock tripped up in.

Still he was anxious that Bank of Minneapolis should pay taxes somewhere for the reason that the latter draws 4 or 5 per cent interest on mortgages here and pays taxes nowhere, if his statements were correct.

Automobiles in National Park Stir Up the Animals

FIRST AUTOMOBILES IN THE PARK.

Automobiles are to be used for conveying tourists through Yellowstone Park this summer, and in all probability there will be a merry time along the trails over which the vehicles will travel, as the rattlesnakes, mountain lions, wildcats, sage hens, bears and ranchers in that section have never seen anything of the kind and may be a trifle curious.

At first they will stampede like a herd of goats in a Mexican threshing corral, but later when they find out that the pesky things are not going to run over them unless they lie down in the road like a drunken man they will venture closer and watch the wheels go round.

It is understood that some of the machines will be provided with quarters for bear, as the animals have a weakness for climbing into the rear end of wagons and investigating the character of the cargo. The machines will move swiftly, however, and any bear that gets aboard will have to hump himself.

There is no particular danger from a bear if it is allowed to do as it pleases, a privilege which most persons accord it in the park. The black brand has been known to walk into a camp and upset everything in sight just for the fun of the thing and then give the campers the laugh.

Automobiles will no doubt surprise the black ones and "break them all up" for a time, but they will eventually come down from the timber and resume business at the old stand. The machines will begin whizzing through the park in a few weeks.

Whew! Who'd Believe There's So Many Children in Butte?

6,680! That was the number of children's tickets taken at Columbia Gardens yesterday. Glance at the picture and you'll naturally think that the youngsters went in a bunch, but they were distributed through the day. That number, however, does not cover all of the tots. There were hundreds of children under 5 years of age, and these went in without a ticket. Only those above the age are included in the number. Every one of these children was not way company said this morning that the attendance of children at the gardens yesterday was 79 less than last year, according to tickets. However, he said that the attendance was actually larger as many went through the turnstile that did not have tickets on the cars, but who paid their way. In the picture you can get a fair idea of how the youngsters piled from the cars and rushed through the turnstile. It shows the little ones in their rush to get into the gardens and have the good time they had been anticipating since last Arbor Day. Not one accident was reported to Man-only carried free on the street cars, but was admitted free to the grounds. They received their tickets in their respective schools. As the actual daily attendance in the schools is only a little over 7,000, it will be observed that there were only a few who did not use their tickets.

Upon all the lines of the street railway company in Butte yesterday were carried 29,953 people, of whom 17,322 were children. At the Gardens yesterday and last night there was a total of 12,306 people. Manager Wharton of the street rail-ager Wharton. Considering the enormous number of children carried on the cars and taken care of in the gardens this is considered remarkable. The only suggestion of an accident concerned a woman. This woman boarded a car at the gardens just as it started last night. Then she changed her mind and jumped off. She missed the platform and fell upon the track. The car stopped, but she hurriedly sprang to her feet, leaped upon the platform and dashed smilingly back into the gardens.
