BI AZING JEWEL OF NAT GOODWIN PAWNED AGAIN

It's a Big, Rich Gem and Shines Like the Lamp on a Doctor's Gig—Has a History.

Nat Goodwin's $800 diamond ring is once more doing duty as a satisfier of a debt.

It was used in this capacity originally by the comedian when he was in Butte two years ago. At that time he was busy with the good fellows of the town; so busy in fact, that he missed an engagement in Helena; was so sick as to need drugs before a performance and a physician afterwards.

Because of this little flurry Goodwin was forced to use his diamond ring as a means of financial relief. Incidentally, it was the cause of his determination not to play in Butte, resulting in the cancellation of his looking at Sutton's Broadway theater for next month.

However, this has to do with the Goodwin ring.

This ring contains a diamond that looks like the end of a cut-glass perfume bottle stopper. It is a huge diamond, set in black and mounted on an 18-karat gold band. The man in whose hands it fell was prosperous, and he prized the ring, partly because of its value and partly because it was a sort of souvenir of Goodwin's hilarious visit to Butte.

Into the lives of the best of men come the financial clouds. It came into this man's life this morning, and so he deposited it with a well-known restaurateur not only for safekeeping but for 30 pieces of gold instead of silver. Just the amount he realized is not given out, but it was sufficient to tide him over the breakwater and land him in the deep sea again where he hopes to fish up sufficient currency to repay the debt and secure the ring.

Meanwhile the Goodwin ring can be truthfully said to be "in hock" without being signo vices.

BREWERS HORSES RUN AWAY

One of the Animals Falls and Prevents Collision With an Ice Wagon.

This morning a team of gray horses attached to a Centennial Brewing company's wagon escaped in North Main street and ran south.

Just after passing Mercury street one of the horses fell and was dragged by the others, fully 100 feet over the pavement. Fortunately for the horse the surface of the street was covered with a soft dirt that had just been sprinkled, and it made the sliding easy. It was a good thing the horse fell, too, for not more than 10 feet ahead of the place where the pulling horses tired and stopped there was a heavy ice wagon. Had one of the runaway animals not fallen a collision would have been inevitable and the results might have been disastrous.

When the fallen horse got up and shook himself he found a correct map of South Africa on his left side, the result of sliding in the mud. Neither of the animals was hurt fatally.

At Broadway and Main streets the horses swerved to one side and "pied" the popcorn and candy stand of John Damascus Greek merchant who transacts business in a go-cart there. The goods flew in all directions while the Greek flew in only one, which was towards a place of safety. Small boys rendered the curbstone merchant valuable service in preventing the popcorn and candy from becoming a total loss.

C'AIMS TO BE HIS WIDOW

Woman in San Francisco Says She Was Married to Jack Shaughnessy.

Mrs. Anna Shaughnessy, or a woman calling herself by that name, has appeared in the San Francisco courts and set up a claim for the $85,000 estate of the late Jack Shaughnessy, who was so well-known in Butte. Shaughnessy died a short time ago, and so far as was known, he left no widow.

Mrs. Anna Shaughnessy alleges that she and Shaughnessy were married by contract 12 years ago. She was 18 then and is 30 now, she says. Her place of residence in San Francisco was the Lambourne hotel.

Mrs. William Hobson, the sister of Shaughnessy, contests the woman's statement that she was Shaughnessy's wife, and claims the estate as his sole heir. A fight in the courts over the estate is promised. The announcement by the woman that she was Shaughnessy's wife will surprise many people here.

The memorial order of the commanding-in-chief was read by Adjutant Almon of Lincoln post.
