REMAINS OF E. L. BONNER LAID AWAY

MANY HUNDREDS OF CITIZENS ATTESTED THEIR RESPECT FOR THE DECEASED PIONEER.

[SPECIAL TO INTER MOUNTAIN.]
Missoula, July 14.—With sad and impressive ceremonies, the remains of Edward L. Bonner were laid to rest yesterday afternoon, and hundreds of citizens attested their respect for the deceased by being in attendance and witnessing the last sad rites which consigned him to his grave.

The funeral was very large, as in addition to the people of the city a large number came from distant towns to be present. The services at the home began at 2 o'clock, and for several minutes before the hour set, friends of the family began to gather at the home.

The casket containing the remains occupied the east end of the main hall, it being beautiful steel gray, and surrounded by flowers sent by kind friends from almost every part of the state. One beautiful piece was sent by Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Hammond of Portland, who regretted that they could not reach here in time for the funeral, but who will arrive tomorrow.

The foot of the casket was covered with a blanket of flowers prepared by several ladies, friends of the family, while at the head, in the rear, and on the floor beneath the casket lay a large number of elegant wreaths. At the rear stood a flag of flowers presented by the Elks. On the easels around the casket roses were in abundance.

As the people arrived they were escorted to the rooms connecting with the main room, which were thrown wide open.

Ex-Senator Carter's eulogy was as follows: "With many misgivings I undertake compliance with the family request to speak a few words. In this sad presence, as we stand beside the mortal remains of the devoted husband, the affectionate father, the kind neighbor and the loyal friend, it is but natural that voices should sing low and eyes grow dim. If control of what happens here were vouchsafed to those who have gone before, sure it is that the spirit of Edward L. Bonner would silence the voice of unavailing sorrow.

"He has gone but a little in advance of the youngest and strongest of us. He has solved the overwhelming mystery of life in the way prescribed for all human kind. He has entered that democracy of death into which we must all soon enter. His death was sudden, but not unexpected. For more than a year he had known that his days were few. With sincere faith and confidence he looked the great destroyer fairly in the face, while meeting every duty with unflinching cheerfulness, gloomy fore-

T. P. O'CONNOR INTERVIEWED

He Believes That Balfour, as Premier, Will Favor Ireland--Salisbury Did Not Retire Any Too Soon--His Health Is Bad.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
New York, July 14.—Thomas P. O'Connor, M. P., in an interview, summed up the resignation of Premier Salisbury and the appointment of Mr. Balfour as follows:

"The resignation of Salisbury was an expected coincidence with the coronation of King Edward, but when the coronation did not take place, there grew up a belief that perhaps the premier's resignation was indefinitely postponed. Old men cling to power and it was supposed that Lord Salisbury was not free from the weakness of so many others. This prospect did not quite satisfy his colleagues.

"Lord Salisbury's health has been notoriously indifferent, especially with activity, either of mind or body, and there were whispers that he was sometimes overcome by sleep in the midst of a momentous cabinet meeting and that he only awoke when the discordant voices of Joseph Chamberlain, the colonial secretary, and Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, chancellor of the exchequer, the two chief opponents in the cabinet, reached an unusually high pitch. Once or twice, too, lately, in the house of lords, he has shown a want of grip that was pitiable. For instance, when the terms of South Africa had to be announced, he calmly asked the house of lords whether they desired to hear the words of Lord Kitchener's dispatch as though the communication was really of little or no importance.

Opposed to Each Other.

"Probably his resignation has now been influenced partly by the desire to make sure of the succession being in the Cecil family and still more with a view to preventing the accession of Mr. Chamberlain. No man could be more adverse than Lord Salisbury to supreme power being in the hands of so impulsive, restless and arrogant a politician as the colonial secretary. Though they had been made political bed fellows by necessity Lord Salisbury and Mr. Chamberlain remained apart and were frequently opposed to each other. In addition, the accession of Mr. Chamberlain might involve the immediate dismissal of Lord Cranborne, under secretary for the foreign office and the Earl of Selborne, first lord of the admiralty, one the son and the other the son-in-law of Lord Salisbury.

"It is doubtful, in any case, whether the rank and file of the tory party would have accepted Mr. Chamberlain willingly. They use him but do not like him. There is a section of young Tories who do not like Balfour, thinking him slack, decadent and lax. Still he is the darling of the old-line Tories, and his appointment will be more popular with his political opponents than with his present friends.

"Mr. Balfour remains the most popular figure in the house of commons and his very faults help him in this respect. If he be indolent, he is also courteous, tolerant and broad-minded, and he will not insult other nations as Mr. Chamberlain has done. His tongue is well under restraint and he has all the instincts of a gentleman.

Will Help Ireland.

"I regard the change a beneficial one to Ireland in the long run. Mr. Balfour has had much experience of Ireland and, although he is not yet a home-ruler, all his old animosity has disappeared and he is just the man to propose a solution of the long standing difficulty. But Mr. Balfour does not come into office at a very happy moment. The educational bill, which he is piloting through the house of commons, arouses tremendous religious passion on both sides, and it is doubtful if he will be able to carry it through without such concessions to his opponents as will exasperate some of his political friends. The aftermath of the war has also come and the majority of the government, though large, is wanting in cohesion.

"But it is useless speculating further, the unexpected is always the dominant feature in English politics."

bodings found no lodgment in his strong mind, which remained active to the very instant of surrender to the final impulse.

"Those who knew him well marveled not at his composure under the increasing shadow of his fast approaching night. The heroic faith, the common sense, and the indomitable courage which secured for him an honorable, enduring place in the great galaxy of distinguished Northwestern pioneers, remained with him to the end.

"Mr. Bonner was a man of action, but not of the self-asserting kind. His constructive genius has left a lasting impression upon the state. He was identified with nearly every important event connected with the upbuilding of the state. For 36 years he so lived and labored in Montana that when he laid down the burden last Thursday morning he possessed the confidence and respect of all the people of the commonwealth.

"The affectionate regard of those who knew him best is attested by the vast concourse of sad faces surrounding his remains yesterday. In distant states strong hearts beat in sympathy with the mourners here assembled, for our departed neighbor was well known and highly esteemed by distinguished citizens of many states.

His Advice Often Sought.

"The president of our great republic and members of his cabinet sought, respected and often followed the advice of Edward L. Bonner. Within his chosen sphere he was a masterful man, and when he reluctantly departed from that sphere to serve his neighbors and friends he crossed the summit of every task assigned him. Public station was not to his liking, and yet he took a keen, quiet and effective interest in all that concerned the public welfare.

"To the deserving he was ever ready to lend a helping hand, naturally looking for the best men. He gave little countenance to evil reports and always viewed the erring with charity.

"Mr. Bonner was reserved and dignified. His voice was low and his manner unobtrusive. So gentle and easy did he seem, that men sometimes wondered at his continuous and remarkable success. He did not indulge in domineering ways and loud words. He did not appear active and yet he generated activity. Accidents played no part in his career. He built upon a foundation of sound integrity. No man doubted his promise. He was a profound student of conditions, and almost unerring judge of men, and he always gave a fair chance to every good man who came within his reach.

"If every one to whom he lent a helping hand in life could send a wreath to his newly made grave today, he would rest under an avalanche of flowers. But what is better still his ways can and will be emulated. While we consign his remains to rest until the morning of the resurrection, the memory of his gentle, forceful, helpful, nature will abide with us after this last sad parting and affectionate farewell."

Small Grain Exports.
[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Boston, July 14.—Up to date there seems to be no improvement of the condition in grain exportation from this city. Many of the large ocean liners, which make this port, are leaving without an ounce of cereals. The steamships that have left during the past week carried only 170,000 bushels, compared with 851,000 in the same week a year ago.

MURDER MYSTERY DOWN IN MAINE

RELIGIOUS ENTHUSIAST WILL BE PUT ON TRIAL FOR KILLING AN ELDERLY WOMAN.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
New York, July 14.—One of the most remarkable murder mysteries Maine has known in 25 years is, after a long period of official inactivity, again engaging the attention of the courts and exciting public interest, says a Bangor special.

On September 17, 1898, an elderly woman named Sarah Ware, disappeared from her home in Buckport and two weeks later her body was found badly mutilated in a pasture near the house.

William Trewarkey, a religious enthusiast, was arrested. He was held to the grand jury, chiefly on the evidence of a half-witted boy named Fogg, who said he helped Trewarkey to move the body.

Later Fogg said his confession was false and Trewarkey was released from jail, where he was awaiting trial and Fogg was locked up on the charge of perjury. Since that time, Fogg has declared his first story was strictly true and that he was frightened into making the retraction.

For years the case was allowed to rest, but now the county officials have caused Trewarkey to be arrested and he will be tried.

Jumps One Hundred and Fifty Feet in Ohio River.

Wheeling, W. Va., July 14.—In full view of several hundred people, Theodore McGraue, a messenger boy, jumped from the suspension bridge over the Ohio river, a distance of 150 feet, for a paltry sum.

A professional high diver had failed to appear, whereupon young McGraue, who was one of the assembled spectators, quietly announced that he would make the leap, mounted the rail and dropped off.

He disdained a skiff that hurried to him and swam the 50 yards to shore, landing without a bruise.
