

INTER MOUNTAIN'S ANACONDA DEPARTMENT

JUST WANTED TO SEE THE DOINGS

PROMISED HE WOULDN'T SQUEAL AND OFFERED DOORKEEPER A LARGE FAT $2 BILL.

[SPECIAL TO INTER MOUNTAIN.] Anaconda, August 26.—There are a great many amusing stories told of the presentation of Elmer Walters' new play "A Thoroughbred Tramp," one of which is related by the press agent of the company as follows:

"In Denver during the week of March 9, 1902, while 'A Thoroughbred Tramp' was playing at the Denver theater, after the orchestra pit, the aisles and every available foot of space was filled with auditors, the police were obliged to interfere and stop the further sale of tickets.

"A gentleman from the mountain district who did not understand the trend of affairs, inquired at the box office for a ticket. Upon being informed that the police had stopped the further sale of tickets, he looked wisely at the ticket seller and turned away. Crossing to the doorkeeper he tendered him a $2 bill for admission—upon being refused he stooped over and whispered to him: 'Jest let me in I won't squeal.' He imagined the police interference had been actuated by an entirely different motive, and it took all of 15 minutes to convince him otherwise."

"A Thoroughbred Tramp" will appear at the Margaret theater next Friday night.

QUEER VERDICT GIVEN BY AN ANACONDA JURY

Both Plaintiff and Defendant Are Favored in Suit of J. B. Gnosé Against Mansfield Curd.

[SPECIAL TO INTER MOUNTAIN.] Anaconda, August 26.—It is not often that a jury renders a verdict in favor of both plaintiff and defendant, yet that was what happened yesterday in Justice Kennedy's court.

J. B. Gnosé had sued Mansfield Curd for the recovery of 19 cords of wood or its equivalent in money. Some weeks ago Gnosé received a bill of sale for the wood from Anton Blaz, a hauler. When Gnosé sent after the wood it was found that some of it was missing and had been taken by Mr. Curd in payment for a debt which he claimed Blaz owed him. Gnosé claims that the wood was all his by the bill of sale, and Curd claims that he was entitled to what he took for the debt owed him.

The jury returned a verdict to the effect that Curd was justified in taking what he did and that Gnosé was entitled to whatever was left.

Mr. Gnosé is not satisfied with the decision and expects to appeal the case.

TO REPAIR WORNOUT WALKS

Streets and Alleys Committee Ordered to Consider the Matter.

[SPECIAL TO INTER MOUNTAIN.] Anaconda, August 26.—Among other business transacted at the meeting of the council last night, methods for repairing broken and worn-out sidewalks were discussed and the matter finally referred to the streets and alleys committee, with instructions to confer with the city attorney and report at the next meeting. An ordinance providing for a new sprinkling district was referred to the same committee. The next meeting of the council will be held September 2.

AFTER THE COLORED CLUBS

Organizations Running Without License Are to Be Vigorously Prosecuted.

[SPECIAL TO INTER MOUNTAIN.] Anaconda, August 26.—Chief Taylor and his men have been requested by the city council to rigidly enforce the law regarding colored clubs and institutions which have been running without licenses. A resolution to that effect, introduced by Alderman Steingrue at the meeting of the council held last night, was passed almost without opposition.

ANKLE DISLOCATED IN FALL

P. E. McGuire Sustains Painful Injury While at Work at Washoe Smelter.

[SPECIAL TO INTER MOUNTAIN.] Anaconda, August 26.—P. E. McGuire, just after he had gone on duty at the Washoe smelter yesterday, fell from a board on which he was standing and alighted in such a manner that his ankle was twisted under him, sustaining a severe dislocation.

HANDSOME FLOATS FOR BIG PAGEANT

LABOR DAY EXHIBITS THIS YEAR ARE TO ECLIPSE ANYTHING YET SEEN IN CITY.

[SPECIAL TO INTER MOUNTAIN.] Anaconda, August 26.—The labor unions and the merchants of the city are making preparations for an appropriate celebration of Labor Day.

A special committee from the board of aldermen has been appointed by the mayor to lend any possible assistance in the matter and the indications point to a celebration that will eclipse any thing of the kind ever held in this city.

In the immense parade in the morning nearly every business house and all the labor unions of the city will be represented by floats, and while there may not be so many as there was last year, in appearance they will far excel the former display.

Eloquent speakers have been obtained to address the people and every effort will be made to handle the crowd without inconvenience or confusion.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTES ARE TO BE POSTPONED

Will Not Come Together Until After the Next Meeting of the Legislature Which May Amend the Law.

[SPECIAL TO INTER MOUNTAIN.] Anaconda, August 26.—State superintendent of Schools Welch has written a letter to Miss Mary McLaughlin, superintendent for the school in Deer Lodge county, regarding the holding of teachers' institutes.

The letter states that no institutes will be held until after the meeting of the next legislature. Superintendent Welch further adds that it is hoped that the next legislature will amend the present law in regard to institutes in such a way that the people of the state may be amply repaid for the money expended.

Money collected from examination fees is to be placed to the credit of the institute fund.

PICNIC OF WOMEN OF WORLD

Mountain View Is to Be Scene of Big Doings Next Sunday.

Anaconda August 25.—Mountain View park will be the scene of a lively throng of people next Sunday when the Women of the World ladies of Butte will meet there for the long talked about picnic.

The arrangements are being made by the members of the Butte branches of the order, but the local members will also take a part in the day's festivities and help to enliven things a little by their presence.

FAD THAT IS FAST BECOMING POPULAR

SISTERS, WIVES AND SWEETHEARTS RIDE OUT TO WORKS AT NIGHT TO MEET THEIR MEN.

[SPECIAL TO INTER MOUNTAIN.] Anaconda, August 26.—There is a new fad popular in Anaconda among the women. It is going to meet the workmen when they come off shift at the smelters at 11 o'clock at night. It has been gradually growing in popularity for the past few weeks and now when the cars go down at 10 o'clock at night, there are any where from 25 to 35 women who go down to meet their husbands, brothers or sweethearts and ride back to the city with them.

That it is pleasing to the workmen themselves goes without saying. However, if the number of women who do this keeps on the increase for the next month as it has during the past, there will be nothing to it but a moon light excursion for the females. There will be no room for the men and those who desire to have the company of the men just off shift will have to walk back from the works.

There is much to recommend the practice, for besides having the company of friends or relatives on the street car there is the pleasure of a street car ride which carries them beyond the limits of the city, where they are compelled to stay all day. Judging from appearances, it is a fad that bids fair to develop into a regular thing and its benefits are self-evident.

It is something which the tired smelterman will come to look forward to and the women look to enjoy.

POPULIST TOUCHES THE THREE FURLONG RECORD

Makes the Distance in Thirty-four Seconds Flat—Abba L Shows Form—Good Crowd at the Track.

With the track in splendid condition and the weather all that could be desired for racing the crowd that attended the races yesterday were treated to some very fine sport. As the meeting draws to a close the interest in the races seems to increase in proportion. For a first day yesterday's attendance was most gratifying to the track officials and in the betting ring things presented a lively appearance.

In the three furlong race, the last event on the day's programme, the world's record was touched by Populist. It was a beautiful race from start to finish. Populist showed exceptional speed and led down to the stretch by two full lengths and looked like an easy winner. In the last 40 yards, however, Abba L made a remarkable sprint and finished a nose short of Populist. The time was :34 flat. The same record was made by Red S on the local track on July 22, 1896, and until yesterday the record remained untouched.

A nose finish marked the sixth race also and made that event one of the most interesting of the day. The horses got off to an excellent start, Montecarlo leading. July Gyp forced to the front at the half and led up to within a few jumps of the wire, when Agnicia pulled up and finished first by a nose.

Outside of Kohnwreath and Populist all the winners were surprises and while none of them were particularly long shots the odds were sufficient to cause the bookmakers a little heart palpitation where the horses had been heavily played. Abba L furnished food for gossip in the six and one-half furlong event. The mare led all the way and won handily by a head. Cushion got the place.

Kohnwreath had all the say so in the third race, seven furlongs, and led all the way, winning easily a half length ahead of February who came in for the place.

Virgie d'O's, 4 to 1, was something of a surprise in the mile and 40 yards, winning easily by a length and a half. Frank Woods finished second and Kenova third.

The opening race, five furlongs, was such a snap for Yankee Lass that it was really a shame to take the money. It is rather difficult to get up any enthusiasm over a race in which the winner finishes four lengths to the good. Florinell II had almost as easy a time in the fifth race, six furlongs, finishing two lengths ahead of the place, Cora Goetz.

The judges yesterday suspended Jockey See upon a charge of indifferent riding. An investigation will be held. Jockey Lewis was fined $25 for losing two pounds weight in the race on Kenova who finished third, but was disqualified on account of the short weight.

"YOUNG" CORBETT IS FAITHFUL

Dick Howell the Well Known Sporting Writer, Is Satisfied That the Young Champion Is Training Hard for His Fight.

Numerous reports were spread broadcast over the country a few weeks ago that Young Corbett is not faithful in his training for his coming fight with McGovern. The reports were evidently started to influence the betting.

It is interesting in this connection to note what Dick Howell of the Waterbury Herald, and one of the best posted writers on the subject of pugilism today, has to say of the young champion. Howell made a personal examination of Corbett with a view of giving the truth of the matter to the public. Here is the result of his investigation, told in his own language:

"There is evidence of plenty of brains in this Camp Corbett. Everything of benefit is used. The things of no use are cut out. I spent a day and a night at Camp Corbett during the week and briefly here is the observation I have to make:

"It was about 5 o'clock in the evening when I arrived last Monday. The members of the camp were sitting on the porch of the hotel, having finished their first day of hard routine training. I hadn't laid eyes on Young Corbett since the day when he won the championship in Hartford nine months ago. From stories I had been told I was given to understand that I would see a change in him—a change that would show the mark that disipation's hand had drawn on his face. Before I go further I want to say that Corbett's appearance gives the lie direct to those stories. There is a lie in his face. It would be more noticeable to me because I had not laid eyes on him during the intervening time. But it is a change from a face, as I remembered it just previous to the great battle in Hartford, of firm nose to win, to a face that shows its owner is now possessed of the confidence that a champion has in his power and ability to retain the championship. The firm mouth of almost a year ago has grown firmer, the gray eye of determination, which nine months ago fastened itself on the snapping blue eyes of Terry McGovern as they met in the ring, is the same piercing, eagle eye. Between the eyebrows at the foot of the forehead was the same pair of vertical lines of a thinker, just a trifle deeper than they were nine months ago, perhaps. The same clear complexion of health is there, and the same sandy colored, stiff little bristle of a beard of a day's growth, that would grow into a vigorous whisker if left alone by the razor. And the same untrifled, quiet temperament, taking everything philosophically, not worrying about anything.

"In short, before me stood the same full-chested, supple-muscled, self-controlled, strong-minded, bull-necked boy with the eye and the soul and the temperament of the typical Western gambler. This isn't meant in any disparaging sense, mind you, but it is the way this interesting young boxer impressed me.

"That is the picture of Young Corbett today. Take my word for it, he is not haggard nor fagged out. He looks stronger now than he did when he met McGovern before, and he is more confident."

Owner of the Scuttled Yacht Independence Publishes Book Giving Complete Account of Past Contests.

Much material that will be useful to yachtsmen and to those who seek for facts and figures relating to past contests for the America's cup may be found in Thomas W. Lawson's history of the America's cup, recently published for private distribution.

While it is evident that the ultimate purpose of the work has been to exploit to the fullest extent the "Independence episode," the main portion of the 402 pages in the volume is devoted to a concise and ably written review of the races for the America's cup from 1851 to date. Eighty-nine illustrations adorn its pages. They include many in colors, and a number of heliotype and etchings, as well as line drawings, showing the sheer plans and midship sections of the cup challengers and defenders. These are said to be reproduced directly from drawings furnished by the designers of the yachts. The illustrations reproduced from photographs, notably those of the accidents to the big sloops Constitution, Columbia and Shamrock II when they lost their masts and the frontpiece of the America's cup, are particularly good, as are those of the races between the Vigilant and the Valkyrie, and the foul between the Defender and Valkyrie III, on September 10, 1895. Nearly all the starts and finishes of the races between the Columbia and Shamrock I and between the Columbia and Shamrock II are shown. The portraits of Josn C. Stevens, the first commodore of the New York Yacht club; of George Steers, the designer and builder of the America, and of George L. Schuyler, one of the donors of the cup, are cleverly reproduced from oil paintings. Mr. Lawson's portrait does not appear.

The causes of the defeat of the Constitution, and the selection of the Columbia to defend the cup in 1901, are gone into at length, and various authorities quoted in the matter.

In the closing chapters of his book Mr. Lawson refers to the demolition of the Independence. He says: "When I became convinced that it would be impossible for her to secure another race, and that there was absolutely no reason for keeping her afloat, I gave orders that she be broken up. The Independence was in commission exactly three months. Her sails were hoisted for the first time off Boston Light on June 3, and on September 3 they were lowered for the last time, in the same locality. The work of breaking up the yacht began as soon as she went out of commission, and in a month a pile of metal in a corner of a boatshop at Lawley's yard was all that remained of her hull."

It has been understood among yachtsmen that the frames and plates of the Independence were taken apart and placed where they could be set up again, and used for a new boat. The following paragraph from Mr. Lawson's book seems to dispose of this rumor:

"No attempt was made in taking the Independence apart to preserve the material from her, with a view to future use in a yacht. She was as dead a ship as any wrecked by the sea, and nothing that came from her hull could be used again in a yacht unless worked over in foundry and rolling mill."

SPORTING BREVITIES. The record for the highest cricket score in Australia was made this year by M. Eady, who scored 517 runs out of 917 for his team.

Christy Mathewson, pitcher of the New York baseball club, is quite a football player, too, having played at Bucknell university with Weymouth, Yale's fullback. After the baseball season ends Mathewson will take hold of the South Jersey Institute team.

James A. Ten Eyck, of Worcester, Mass., father of the former American amateur champion sculler and Harry Vail, of Cambridge, Mass., were matched to row a two-mile race for a purse of $500 on the Patapsco river, Baltimore, on August 23.

Automobilists are beginning to realize that the only proper place to test the speed of a machine is the regular race track.

Recent tests show that an automobile can be stopped as quickly or more quickly, in fact, than any other vehicle.
