ROOSEVELT MAKES A LONG SPEECH AT WHEELING

lems—we have to class all of our fellow-citizens. One is composed of those men who refuse to admit that there is any action necessary at all. The other is composed of those men who advocate some non-effective action or, if effective, would be effective only by destroying everything good and had connected with our industrial development.

"In every governmental process, the aim that a people capable of self-government should steadfastly keep in mind, is to proceed by evolution, rather than by revolution. On the other hand, every people that has self-government must be of this fossilized state of mind which refuses to allow any change as conditions change. Now, in dealing with the problem of a change in our great industrial civilization; dealing with the tendency which has been accentuated to an extraordinary degree by steam and electricity and by the tremendous up-building of industrial enterprises, dealing with these problems, I think we must set before ourselves a desire not to accept less than the possible, and at the same time not to bring ourselves to a complete standstill by demanding the impossible.

Control the Trusts. "No one can dam the Mississippi. If the nation started to dam it, its time would be wasted. It would not hurt the Mississippi, it would only damage the population along the banks. You cannot dam the current, but you can build levees and keep the current within bounds and shape its direction. Now I think that is exactly what we can do with the great corporations known as trusts. We cannot dam them, we cannot reverse the industrial tendencies of the age. If we succeed in doing it, then cities like Wheeling will have to go out of business, remember that. You cannot put a stop to or reverse the industrial tendencies of the age. You can control and regulate them so that they will do no harm. Another thing, you do not build these levees in a day or a month. The man who tells you that he has a patent device by which in 60 days he would solve the whole question of floods along the great rivers would not be a wise man, but he would be a perfect miracle of wisdom compared to the man who tells you that by another patent remedy he can bring the millennium in our industrial and social affairs.

Something Can Be Done. "We can do something. I believe we can do a good deal but our accomplishing what I expect to see accomplished is conditioned upon our setting to work on a spirit as far removed as possible from hysteria. A spirit of sober, steadfast kindly—(I want to emphasize the word kindly)—determination not to submit to wrong ourselves, and not to wrong others. Not to interfere with the great business development of the country, but at the same time, so to shape our legislation and administration as to regulate, if we cannot remedy, the vicious features connected with that industrial development. Now, I have said that there can be no patent remedy offered. There is not any one thing which can be done to remedy all the existing evils. There are a good many things, which, if we do them, we will, I believe, make a very appreciable betterment of our existing condition.

"Let me go back to my illustration of the Mississippi river. It took some time to build the levees, but we built them, and if we have the proper intelligence, the proper resolution and the proper self-restraint, we can work out the solution along the lines that I have indicated. The first thing is to give the national government the power. What power is given, I can assure you will be used in a spirit as free as possible from rancor, but with the firmest determination to make big men and little men alike obey the law.

"What we need first is power. Having gotten the power, gentlemen, remember that the work won't be ended. It will be only fairly begun. And let me say again and again, that we will not get the millennium. The millennium is some way off yet. But we will be in a position to make long strides in the direction of securing a juster and fairer and more intelligent, and more honest management of those corporations, both as regards the general public and as regards their relationships among themselves. When we have the power I should earnestly advocate that it be used with the greatest wisdom and self-restraint. The first thing would be to find out the facts. For that purpose I am absolutely clear that we need publicity, not as a favor from any one corporation, but as a matter of right.

"The fact of the publicity itself will tend to stop many of the evils, and it will show that some of the alleged evils are imaginary. And, finally, in making evident the remaining faults, those that are not imaginary and are not cured by the light of day itself will give us an intelligent proposition as to the methods to take in getting at them."

At the conclusion the party were driven over the principal thoroughfares. The decorations were of an elaborate and festive order. All along the route vast crowds cheered the president to the echo. The party was driven to the southern portion of the city where the Baltimore & Ohio special was boarded and the trip to the South continued.

CALMLY SMILING MARTIN LISTENS

in his voice. Of the two men who alternately held the attention of the spectators, the judge was if any, the more affected.

With a Smile on His Face. And then James Martin, with his head still held in the same attitude, and without even the relaxation of a muscle in his face, stood and listened, his sparkling dark eyes fixed steadily on the judge, so the words which deprived him of his life to the sentence of death—the extreme penalty of the law.

These were the words of the judge: "It is ordered, adjudged and decreed by the court that you, James Martin, be remanded to the custody of the sheriff of Silver Bow county, Montana, and on a day to be hereafter fixed, in a warrant duly issued, you be by the then acting sheriff of said county of Silver Bow, within the yard of the county jail of said county, hanged by the neck until you are dead and the sheriff of this county will see this judgment and sentence executed."

Every eye in the courtroom was directed upon Martin's face as the words "hanged by the neck until you are dead" fell from the judge's lips, but in that face there was not even a reflection of the anxiety betrayed by the spectators.

That was all. Deputy Dolson turned; Martin said, "All right," in a low tone with the rising inflection on the first word that made the expression mean indifference, resignation, or unconscious acquiescence.

As One Who Cares Not. Jauntily he walked away with the deputies just as he had jauntily entered. His demeanor now, was not defiant, however. Neither was there any show of pretended indifference. He seemed to take his sentence as a matter of course, but not with the cheap bravado that so often marks the hardened criminal.

Returning to the jail, Martin was escorted to the chamber of death—a cell in the witness department, where two trustees had prepared a comfortable bed and made the place look as decent, perhaps, as a cell can look.

Deputy Sheriff Dolson was detailed by Under Sheriff Guilan as a temporary death watch, the under sheriff meanwhile hastening to the county commissioners to learn if the indefiniteness of Martin's sentence would require his being kept in the death chamber.

MINER'S CONSUMPTION CAUSE OF HIS DEATH

William Caldwell came to his death as a result of miners' consumption. This was the substance of the verdict of the coroner's jury which met this morning at 10 o'clock at the Montana undertaking establishment.

Several witnesses who saw Caldwell die yesterday afternoon at the corner of Park and Wyoming streets, testified at the inquest. They all said the man simply sank down and a few minutes later passed away. The dead man's brother also testified, and said the deceased had suffered with miners' consumption for many years.

There was no evidence introduced to show that Caldwell died other than a natural death, and the jury came to its verdict after a short deliberation.

SIMPLE METHOD USED TO EXTINGUISH A MINE FIRE

Conflagration in Senator Clark's United Verde in Arizona Was Put Out With Gas.

The method adopted by Superintendent Groux to extinguish the fire in Senator Clark's United Verde mine in Arizona is thus described by the Jerome Reporter:

"The system he has put to the test is simplicity itself, involving nothing more than a knowledge that carbonic oxide extinguishes combustion. It seems that one equivalent of carbon combines with two of oxygen; carbonic oxide gas is made and forced into the place where the fire is confined, and there takes up a second part of oxygen. When the oxygen is finally exhausted, naturally the fire is extinguished. The fire has been confined behind a bulkhead; a furnace was built near it which was connected by iron pipes, through which it was intended to force carbonic oxide gas. The apparatus was built and put in operation, but the pipes became so heated it was found necessary to tear them away and put smaller ones in; a trough was built around the new pipe and filled with water. This work was completed Tuesday and will answer the purpose it was intended for. Handling carbonic oxide gas is dangerous; it being fatal alike to combustion and animal life. It is needless to add that the big fresh air pumps are kept at work supplying the fire brigade with pure air. It is said that enough air is sent down to the men to remove all suspicion of mine gas.

"When this trouble is remedied, if one may judge by the preparation being made at the smelter, work at the United Verde will be carried on on a larger scale than ever before. The smelter has been equipped for some time with six 250-ton furnaces, four of which are usually kept at work. No. 4 has been torn out to make room for a 500-ton furnace, which is to be followed by another of the same size. This will make necessary additional converters and a larger force of miners and roasters."

Revenge. (Chicago Record-Herald.) "They say she married him just to get him away from another girl." "What did the other girl do?" "Sent her a bundle of his love letters as a wedding present. That was the reason she had nervous prostration and was compelled to give up her wedding trip."

LAW AND MOTION DAY IN JUDGE CLANCY'S COURT

Cases Disposed of in the First District of Montana Jurisdiction—Mrs. Schroth Got a Divorce.

This was law and motion day in Judge Clancy's court. At 10 o'clock the court opened, but during the forenoon was unable to dispose of more than a few cases.

In the case of the State Savings bank against Beck, which was set for September 7, the setting was vacated by the consent of both parties to the suit. A similar disposition was made in the case of Silas P. King et al. against Pat Mullins, which had been set for September 16.

Motions for new trials in the cases of Butte Mining & Milling company against W. R. Kenyon et al. and of David Potter against Fred Lohse, were denied.

Judgment in accordance with the prayer of complaint and an attorney's fees of $50 was allowed in the case of William Tyack against Thomas Colbert and Josie Colbert.

Maude Schroth was granted a decree of divorce from her husband, Willard Schroth, and the plaintiff failed to resume her maiden name of Maude Kramer.

HENTHORNE'S ATTORNEY STRAINS EVERY NERVE

J. Bruce Kremer Putting Forth Every Effort to Keep the Law From Punishing Brute as He Merits. Ernest Henthorne, accused of a heinous crime, was arraigned in Judge McClernan's court this morning. His attorney, J. Bruce Kramer, asked for one week in which to plead. It is understood that Henthorne will plead guilty if he can be assured of a five-year sentence, and while the case is pending his attorney will make every effort to reduce the charge so that he may not be in danger of getting the extreme penalty which the law provides.

Worn Out Expression Every druggist ever known advertises "Pure Drugs." Of course, druggists themselves know that there is a whole lot of substitution and adulteration being done all the time, not to speak of downright buying of cheap, stale stuff and known to be so—but labeled "Pure Drugs." But the general public also know that there's "lying" somewhere; for no class of men is perfect. When every last druggist says that he sells "Pure Drugs," there's certainly a screw loose in the honesty valve. The question is, "Who can you believe?" Come in and let us show you our back room and down stairs, and behind our prescription counter and everywhere through the store—then judge of the quality and freshness and purity of our drugs.
