

GOTTLIEB WISHES HE HAD KEPT MUM

YOUTHFUL PROSPECTOR WHO DUG UP OLD MAN LEWIS' WEALTH IS ARRESTED.

TALKED TOO MUCH AFTER BEING RELEASED BEFORE

County Officials Believe They Have Sufficient Evidence to Convict the Young Man of Grand Larceny—How He Went Out With His Little Pick and Found a Canful of Greenbacks.

If you are a prospector and on one of your expeditions up in the hills, dig up an old tomato can with a comfortable grub stake in it, turn it over to the sheriff of Silver Bow county. It does not come under the head of legitimate mineral discoveries, and the capitulation may save you trouble. This is a maxim which a Butte youth, Samuel Gottlieb by name, is willing to subscribe to, after being arrested today for grand larceny.

If you are a capitalist with a matter of $500 or more, and wish to secure the transfer of this amount to the heirs of your estate, put it in a reliable bank. You will save the county expense, if sudden death overtakes you and incidentally you may save others from trouble.

This is another maxim that the heirs of the Lewis estate and others interested in a case which was reopened this morning, will also consider salutary.

Moral—Never Prospect!

Some two months ago old man Lewis was struck by lightning near his cabin in the Highlands. He died without benefit of clergy or lawyer, and so the location of the little tomato can with the $300 buried under a granite rock and laid away for a rainy day was not known to his heirs. If its presence had never become known to anybody else, that would have been the last of the story.

But one day, not long after the death of Lewis, a heedless youth, the Gottlieb aforesaid, began to reflect on the quantity of undiscovered wealth in the hills around Butte.

"I will take my trusty pick," said he, "and I will go forth in quest of lucre." The presumption is that Mr. Gottlieb did not expect to find the lucre in the form of crisp new bank notes. That, at least, is the presumption of the friends of the young man.

Unfortunately, however, the county attorney's office thinks otherwise. It had an altogether different presumption.

It Looked Good to Him.

But to resume the story of the prospecting trip. After clipping off several pieces of rock, Prospector Gottlieb came to a most promising looking piece of black granite. He knocked off a piece and viewed it with the eye of a connoisseur. Possibly he tasted it. At any rate, it looked good to him. It looked like a free milling proposition, and it is not impossible that he made the assumption that it would run $300 to the ton.

He drove his pick against the side of the mighty boulder. It rolled over and underneath it. How his eyes glistened. Never did a lucky prospector find a better proposition. No transportation rates, no assayer's bill, no smelting expenses, no water rights to fight, no litigation and no injunctions.

He Did It With His Trusty Pick.

"I did it with my trusty pick," said he, as he folded the wad of bills and laid them away in the inside pocket of his outside coat.

Needless to follow him. Leave that to the sheriff's office. He was apprehended at Silver Bow Junction, after having a pleasant time with friends in Anaconda. He had $230 left and a ticket for Salt Lake.

For two weeks Gottlieb languished in the county jail. No charge was made against him. He got a competent attorney and turned over the money to Sheriff Furey. For the portion he had spent he gave a promissory note. Then, through the efforts of his attorney, he was released on his own recognizance.

In the meantime the county attorney and his deputies have secured additional evidence that will go to prove that Mr. Gottlieb, prospector, by starting his tongue working at both ends and forgetting to come back and stop it, has injured his case and his reputation for honesty.

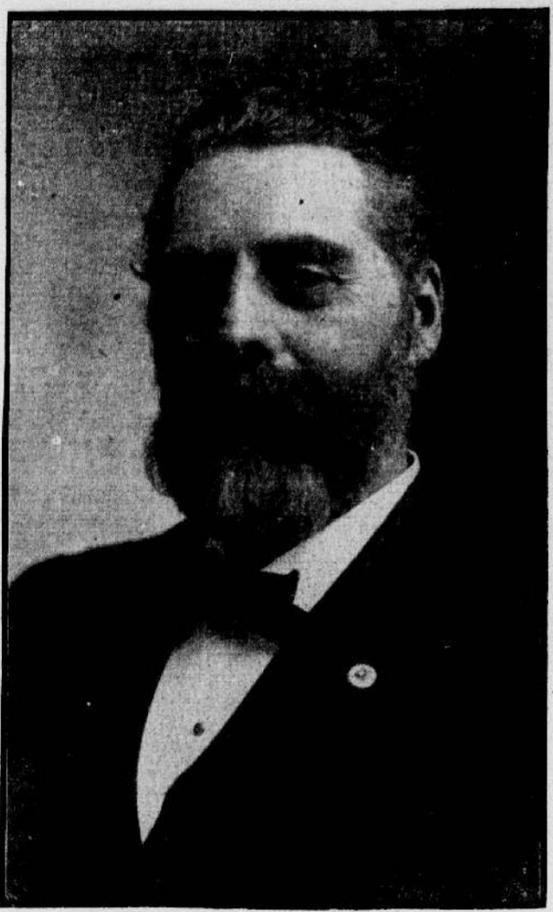

Deputy Attorney Dan Yancey this morning filed a complaint of grand larceny against him, a warrant was issued, and he was arrested at noon. He will have a preliminary trial in Justice Danzer's court.

HOW BITTER ROOTERS TREATED PRESS BOYS

J. E. TOTMAN,

One of the Residents of Hamilton Who Helped Entertain the Members of the Press Gang—He is the Only Man Among the Lot Who Had a Photograph.

After their week of junket and jollification in the Bitter Root valley, the members of the press of Butte who were fortunate in attending the annual meeting at Hamilton, returned yesterday morning.

Disdaining to put any of the news of their proceedings on the wire or even to steal from the night an hour for work, they brought the association's resolutions home with them.

These resolutions read not unlike grace after a meal and only need one more paragraph to complete the illusion. "For all the numerous blessings which we have received, O Lord, make us truly thankful!"

Here they are: "Whereas, The present session of the Montana State Press association has been one of more than usual enjoyment and profit, and will remain with the members in attendance as a most pleasing memory; therefore be it

Resolved, That we extend our thanks to the president and secretary for their energetic and untiring efforts in planning and arranging for the meeting.

"That we tender our thanks to the local committees, consisting of Messrs. Frank Anderson, C. M. Crutchfield, E. A. Sherman, Fred Ellis, M. D. P. J. Shannon and Miles Romney and Mrs. Mary J. Foote, Mrs. George H. Taylor, Mrs. D. V. Bean, Mrs. C. M. Crutchfield and Mrs. W. O. Fisk, for the cordial reception, the banquet, drives, excursions and the many other courtesies so lavishly extended.

being equal, the greater their vigor. The moment these vital organs are lowered from their normal altitude, that moment their tone of power is lowered.

A Common Defect.

"There is no physical defect so general as this—that the vital organs are from one to four inches too low in adults and among children down to the age of five or six years. This is the age they are sent to school, and it is necessary that public school teachers understand what to do with these little fellows who are beginning to cultivate the bad habits of their elders. The Emerson system of physical culture is so simple that every person, every teacher at least, should be familiar with it.

"We have heard a great deal about throwing the chest out as if the lungs were on the outside; they are in the trunk of the body and as they are lifted, the shoulders are thrown apart and the back broadened as much as the chest is expanded. Too much is said about holding the shoulders back as if they were given us to put behind us. The shoulders belong on the sides, and in raising the lungs, it is not necessary to throw the shoulders back. To bend the back and "That we extend thanks to J. E. Totman, who furnished the delightful excursion to the logging camp, where an excellent dinner was provided by that prince of chefs, James Burns.

"That we extend our hearty thanks to William Scallon for substantial favors, particularly the opening of the Ravalli for the free use of the members.

"That we thank Superintendent Horn of the Montana division and Superintendent Russell of the Rocky Mountain division of the Northern Pacific for courtesies.

"That the thanks of the association are specially due to the Hamilton Cornet band, which greeted us on our arrival in the city and who have been lavish with their music during our stay. We appreciate not only the music, but also the members of the band, and will hold them in kindly remembrance for their courtesies.

"That our thanks are due to Mr. Wharton of Butte for the free use of the street cars in that city by association members.

"That we express our hearty thanks to the many others who have extended to us numerous lesser, though not less cordial, kindnesses and favors.

"That we shall ever gratefully remember the beauty of the scenery, the productivity of the soil, the delightfulness of the climate and the hospitality of the people of the matchless Bitter Root valley."

This was signed by H. O. Collins, chairman; M. J. Garrett, W. W. Cheely, Joseph Smith, F. E. Foote.

bulge the front of the body is to sacrifice the back to a perturbation in front. Any exercise that will develop and quicken the activity of the vital organs is beneficial.

"Any exercise that will preserve a true balance between the life sustaining force and that of the brain is valuable. Any exercise that will free the different parts of the physical system that are joined by definite articulations and thus prevent them from embarrassing each other, are necessary for harmonious movement. Any exercise that will teach us to get about with a maximum of effort will prevent an undue nervous tension. School teaching is nervous work and a true balance is not struck between the vital forces and the brain. Teachers, as a rule, are busy people, but progressive people, and are always on the alert for new methods which will benefit themselves and pupils. The strain upon the nervous system of a teacher is great, but by making a systematic effort toward physical culture every day she will find herself at the end of the year well poised mentally.

Mens Sana in Sano Corpore.

"There is no such thing as a sound mind in an unsound body. Again, the Emerson system of physical culture develops the relationship of mind to body and is therefore psycho-physical culture. If we free the different muscles and agents of the body, we are going to be able to express ourselves more intelligently. The organs of the soul have legitimate channels of expression. They have natural channels of expression through the voice and in the movements of the body.

"The body is generally so constricted that the intellect, if ever so active, cannot express itself through the body, and although the body is the natural servant of the intellect, when contracted into the

HOW THEY STAND ON THE ISTHMUS

IT IS NIP AND TUCK BETWEEN THE COLOMBIAN GOVERNMENT AND BOLD INSURGENTS.

PANAMA AND COLON ARE SAID TO BE QUITE SAFE

But Herrera is Advancing on Panama, and Herrera is Said to Be the Real Thing—Unless He Moves Within Fifteen Days It Will Be Too Late as Re-inforcements Are Coming.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Panama, Sept. 11.—The situation of the Colombian government on the Isthmus is thought to be more serious than it has been for some time past.

It is reported here that General Herrera's revolutionary army consists of nearly five thousand men, encouraged by their recent successful engagements with the government troops. The principal strength of the revolutionists lies in the fact that their fleet of gunboats, composed of the Padilla Boyaca, Gaictan and Baracan, supplemented by numerous sailing vessels, can maneuver and operate at sea without molestation. The conservatives on the Isthmus have much faith in General Salazar, who has assumed command of all the forces in this district. He is ably seconded by Generals Quintero and Guiterres, who are active and brave fighters.

Colon and Panama Safe.

In government circles the capture of Panama or Colon by the revolutionists is believed to be impossible because of the strong entrenchments which protect these towns and which are defended by soldiers who are anxious to avenge General Morales Berti, who surrendered at Agua Dulce, and because large numbers of re-inforcements are expected to reach the Isthmus this week from Barranquilla.

The government minister of war is fully aware of the dangerous situation existing here and telegraphic advices received from Bogota say the government has dispatched 5,000 men to reinforce the soldiers here and at Colon. Two thousand more troops, according to military men, would not only make Panama secure, but would render General Herrera's position very delicate should he locate on the railroad line where food is scarce.

Advancing on Panama.

General Herrera's plans are not known, but from the latest reports he was advancing toward Panama. Judging from his method of campaign, his intentions would seem to be to surprise the government by some extraordinary movement.

The situation here, in the summer of 1900 when General Porras attacked Panama, was worse than it is now. Then the revolutionary forces defeated the government at Beleno and Coros; two federal generals fled the field and the population was panic stricken.

General Salazar is said to be a daring leader. In the department of Bolivar, he was surrounded in a year by a strong force under General Uribe Uribe, which he surprised during the night and completely routed with a small force under his command. The recollection of deeds like this inspire General Salazar's troops with faith in their leader.

Herrera the Real Thing.

Partisans on the isthmus of the liberal or insurgent parties, believe that General Herrera will be victorious over the government. General Herrera is undoubtedly a great organizer. When he headed his expedition in Colombia, no one thought he would succeed in organizing the army he has drawn to his cause. His success or his defeat is thought to depend on his next movement. Should he wait for 15 days before making an attack, it is thought he will be defeated. There is little doubt here that General Salazar and the men under him will fight valiantly.

No definite news has reached here from the revolutionary fleet since last Sunday, when it was at San Carlos.

rebellious servant, it will not respond to the intellect. The misrepresentation of the soul by the body is so common that many persons possessed of loving and benign hearts, have bodies, which in their attitudes and movements, express direct antagonism to the law of affection. How to break up this unresponsiveness in pupils is a serious problem with many teachers. We find some pupils quick and able to express their feelings easily. Again, we have a shy, reticent pupil that needs the utmost study to find out how to bring out what is in him. Physical class work will bring abandonment and from that one can pass by degrees to bodily expression.

"Have them play—they are trees, small flowers. I have seen bashful girls and boys forget they were in the class-room, and soon you can give them whole sentences to express with the body. Have them first give you the thought without words, then finally use the words. You will be surprised at the amount of exercise the method will bring into your reading class.

Opening the Pupils.

"This is one way of opening avenues of action and thought to the sensitive pupil. There are many others which will take the pupil into the study of elocution. The first step is life and action. Elocution, or the term expression, is better, has to do with the whole person in this art. While the body and voice present the form, we must see and feel thought before we can express it. Children soon become eager to impersonate the character they read about and this will lead them to study the character of people about them. They will hunt about after reading Dickens for characters like Macawber and Betsy Trotwood.

"The study of expression is helpful to the teachers because, in order to express herself, she must study her own emotions in order to interpret literature. No work will more richly reward the teacher's efforts, for emotion is the heart and soul of the mind and it grows through expression. Intellect without it, if we can imagine it without, is as cold and lifeless as the columns of a census report. Emotion runs the will and the will is the man. With undeveloped emotions, poets and scientists, preachers and statesmen could not be."
