THE REAL ISSUE.

The campaign is rapidly drawing to a close. In this county it is a momentous question which confronts the people. It involves the welfare of Butte. Mr. Heinze's purposes are declared. In his reckless endeavor to advance his own individual interests he would destroy all that tends to secure prosperity and peace to the citizens of this city. He would control the legislature for the purpose of passing laws that would help to destroy Butte's largest companies, and place the appointment of additional judges in his hands. He would control the judiciary of Silver Bow county so as to make his conquest complete.

The judge who is elected in Silver Bow county on November 4th next will hold office for four years. In two years he will be the senior judge. What Mr. Heinze has done or attempted before he will, if successful, do or attempt with renewed vigor, and receiverships and closing of mines may be looked for. With victory in his grasp that cloud and threat may hang over this community for years. In the present condition of Butte properties it does not require much to create a restless, uneasy feeling. The feeling is, indeed, already here. It can be aggravated until endurance has ceased, and the community is in the midst of a condition of absolute retardment.

The exchange of charges and counter-charges, the constant friction produced by crimination and abuse, are, in the presence of the real danger, lesser evils. If these charges have any foundation the courts are the place to investigate and probe them, and to punish the guilty, if the charges are substantiated and made good under oath. These matters should be left to the tribunals which control them and not allowed to obscure the one great issue which confronts Butte. This political warfare, this method of trying titles to property by ballot, must cease before any prosperity can come. That is a vital fact that should be borne in mind.

If Mr. Heinze were a disinterested critic, if he was calling attention to abuses, real or imaginary, which were not entirely personal to himself, the conditions might be different. He is asking the citizens of Butte to take up a quarrel which is of his own seeking, and in which he has been entirely too successful because of seeming public approval of his declared course of confiscation.

If property is to be considered as having any rights which are entitled to respect, conditions must change. No corporation should be given any advantage over another. The law should be allowed to take its own course, unswayed by inflammatory outbursts against any one of the litigants.

Even more strongly should it be said that the elevation of any man to the district bench whose election is sought for the avowed purpose of aiding one corporation as against another would be most unfortunate, not only in its actual results, but in the precedent which it would establish.

This is the issue. It cannot be obscured. It is of too vital importance to Butte. Upon its determination must depend much that makes or unmake. Upon it depends prosperity or depression.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

In Theodore Roosevelt the people of the United States have a president who comes nearer representing the ideal American than any other executive who has ever presided over the destiny of the nation. Our presidents heretofore have been particularly identified with the section of the country from which they were chosen, but Mr. Roosevelt peculiarly includes in his make-up the characteristics of North, South, East and West. In fact, he is a composite of the American citizen as you find him in all parts of the country.

President Roosevelt is the first executive who has thoroughly appreciated the great West, as it is today, a powerful factor in the union of American states. Before assuming the responsibilities of national magistrate, he cast his lot among the Western people, and in this way he learned to know them as they really are. Out of this relation with the people in this section of the country President Roosevelt developed a great bond of sympathy for them, and by cultivating them he became thoroughly acquainted with their needs and interests.

No president has ever had the intimate knowledge of Western conditions that is possessed by Mr. Roosevelt. He has studied our problems, and already he shows that he is master of the situation, with all of the intrepid foresight and good judgment of a wise administrative statesman. To President Roosevelt we are largely indebted for the efficient irrigation legislation that will reclaim the vast arid plains and transform the West into an agricultural paradise. His firm stand on foreign policy is certain to develop the Oriental trade markets to the great benefit of Western towns and seaports. An ardent protectionist, President Roosevelt is certain to maintain a stiff tariff, which is the basis of prosperity that is now blessing so many of our Western sources of productions.

These are but a few of the many instances wherein President Roosevelt has evidenced his friendliness to and interest in the West. That the people appreciate this great American statesman is being manifested anew every day in countless different ways. There can be no doubt that more former Western democrats have left and will leave their party to support President Roosevelt than has ever been known before. It could not well be otherwise in a free country, where a man attracts his following on account of his own real worth. Roosevelt is undoubtedly fearless in his treatment of public questions, and that is one of the characteristics that has made him more friends in the West than anything else.

Furthermore, he is a thorough republican and he has on numerous occasions shown that he is true blue in regard to party principles. Unlike most party leaders, he is unhampered by dictators, nor does he permit himself to be browbeaten for the sake of extending his influence. President Roosevelt has won the confidence of the Western people, and they will stand by him.

Sentiment in Montana has always favored President Roosevelt and his influence has been increasing rapidly. The best way that the people of the treasure state can show their appreciation of him this year will be to elect a republican congressman who will go to Washington fully equipped to aid the president in securing those benefits to the country for which he is so gallantly contending. To the same end a legislature should be chosen that will insure the election of republican United States senators. This step taken as a preliminary and Montana will be sure to be in line two years hence when Theodore Roosevelt will be elected president of the United States.

WHY NOT IN MONTANA?

The Spokane chamber of commerce is considering the proposition to encourage the construction of a woolen mill to employ from 75 to 100 men. With from 30,000,000 to 35,000,000 pounds of wool produced annually in Montana this state has more reason to encourage the building of woolen mills than has Washington. The one wool manufacturing establishment in this state has proved to be a successful enterprise and there is room for scores like it. The first thing necessary, however, is to clear the political atmosphere in this state so that capital will feel safe to come here for investment. The "hold up" party must not succeed. The way to invite capital into this state is to elect the republican ticket. It stands for good government and the rights of the people.

The Northern Pacific Railway company was prompt in offering a liberal reward for the capture of the daring robber who held up the North Coast Limited Friday morning, which extraordinary exploit was so fully and graphically described in yesterday's Inter Mountain. The way to discourage the enterprise of these road agents is to offer a suitable reward for their detection by individual effort and for the company to use every means at its command to effect the same end. This is the policy of the Northern Pacific and it will be no doubt effective.

Fred. H. Kohl, republican nominee for sheriff of Silver Bow county, is making a splendid canvass and his friends feel assured of his election. It is but the simple truth to say that he is by far the most capable man running for the office on any ticket. The office of sheriff is an important one and it should not be permitted to pass into incompetent hands because of some fancied sentiment. It requires a man of ability and nerve and Mr. Kohl meets all of the requirements.

Both Evans and Dee have been proven to be unworthy the support of the laboring interests of which they have proclaimed themselves the special champions. Fortunately the laboring men of Montana have found out wherein these candidates are their enemies and not their friends. There is every indication that the vote of workmen will be cast for the most part for Joe Dixon and his election now seems to be a foregone conclusion.

Vote the republican ticket and thus extend an invitation to capital to come to Montana and develop the wonderful resources of this state. It has been said, and well said, that a republican victory this year will be worth $100,000,000 to the state. A large percentage of the money invested in mining operations goes to labor. It should not take a workingman long to decide which ticket to vote.

Every vote cast for the republican ticket in Silver Bow county will be a vote for plenty of work, good wages and prosperity in the Butte camp. Whatever have been the conditions in former years, no workingman in Silver Bow county can afford this year to vote any but the republican ticket.

Carroll G. Dolman continues to make an active and intelligent campaign as one of the republican candidates for the legislature. A well educated, progressive young citizen of Butte, he would be a credit to the Silver Bow delegation. His election ought not to be in doubt and it does not seem to be.

Suppose that Mr. Heinze should be successful in his heroic endeavors, and then sell out his mining interests in this camp? Then what?

STATIONS OF THE CROSS IN ST. JOSEPH'S KIRK

Interesting Ceremonial is to be Performed by Members of Father Quesnal's Parish.

The stations of the cross, which Father Quesnal of St. Joseph's church received from the East last week, are going to be blessed with a great solemnity tomorrow evening at the evening services, 7:30. A distinguished priest of Butte is to deliver the sermon.

The stations are going to be carried by 14 men of the parish, according to the ceremonial of the Catholic church, and then they will be hung around the wall of the church, where they will stay.

All the indulgences granted to those who visit the Holy Land and the seven basilicas of Rome and many others have been attached to the way of the cross by the popes. Mrs. Elizabeth Shale is the donor of these stations for St. Joseph's church.

PEOPLE WE MEET.

DR. M. E. KNOWLES.

M. E. KNOWLES, state veterinary surgeon is in the city today. Dr. Knowles is one of the best known, most popular and most successful veterinarians in the west and in addition to his duties for the state is compelled to look after a large private practice. He believes that Montana is the most healthful stock raising state in the union. He says that "Montana stands foremost in this respect and this fact is not only because of the naturally healthful condition of the state but also to the fact that the state has good laws regulating the importation of diseased stock.

"In every instance where disease has been reported among the sheep of the state it was the result of imported infection. Of course we prevent importation of infected sheep when possible, but this is a large state and it is all but impossible to properly inspect them all. "Yes, we have a few cases of glanders among horses, but nothing serious and Montana stockmen generally have much to be thankful for."

MADAME DAVENPORT WILL LECTURE TO TEACHERS

Tuesday Afternoon the Public Will Have an Opportunity to Hear This Distinguished Woman.

Mme. Charlotte de Golliere Davenport, whose lecture before the Woman's club last Wednesday aroused so much enthusiasm in her audience and created such general comment, that she will speak to the teachers of the public schools on Monday and Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock she will deliver an entertaining and instructive lecture at the auditorium, which will be especially interesting to mothers.

Madame Davenport is a fluent and entertaining speaker, with a gift of saying much in few words and a way of going straight to the center of things. She is original, clear and forcible and her subject is handled in a way that only thorough knowledge, long experience, and natural eloquence can give. She has devoted almost her entire life to her chosen profession, which she calls physical as well as mental training. Her first studies were devoted entirely to the physical well-being, embracing anatomy, physiology, dietetics, hygiene, exercise, bathing, grooming, etc., but she soon found out that the best results are impossible without due consideration of the mental plane; that both are so closely connected, act and rest upon one another so continually through the medium of the nerves, that next to nothing can be done physically, especially for women, without making due provision for the necessary equilibrium. But the cause of her great success she lays to the consideration of the three planes, physical, mental and spiritual. She says some may think in dealing with the spiritual, she is using the field of the ministers of the gospel, but she explains that in advising strongly against immorality, intemperance, in eating and drinking, pernicious mental attitudes, sloth, etc., she does so with the physical and mental well-being in view, regardless of what other reasons there may be for a clean, well-ordered life. When asked what people or race represented her ideal of manhood and womanhood, she said the Spartans of old Greece came nearest to her ideal in physical & moral qualities in which she thought they were models for the world.

Next week will be Madame Davenport's last week in Montana and it will no doubt be a busy one for her.

Amusements.

"A Poor Relation."

Horace Lewis heads the Western company producing "A Poor Relation," made famous by Sol Smith Russell, at the Broadway. The play is too familiar to Butte audiences to need review. It has become standard, and deservedly, for a sweeter story was never told.

The company is good throughout and the simple requirements of the plain settings are amply filled. Mr. Lewis' rendition of Noah Vale is necessarily a memory of the creator of the role. Should he depict the kindly inventor otherwise than did Mr. Russell, we should not receive him. But the character is easily and amusingly portrayed, and if one is constantly thinking of Russell, this is in itself a tribute to Mr. Lewis' art.

Next to Mr. Lewis, the hits of the piece are easily little Winkie and Miss Bibbins, who portray the children. George R. Sprague does what there is to Roderick Faye in an acceptable fashion. Thurston Hall is good as Jasper Sterrett, a role none too pleasant to assume. Dolly Faye is sprightly and winsome in the hands of Marie Harriott and Henrietta Newman is worthy of notice in her idea of how Alice Warriner should be played. Portia Albee's Sea lops is one of the bright bits of the piece. The remainder of the company pleases.

"A Poor Relation" will be presented at the Broadway this evening.
