

FRIDAY WILL BE OLD HALLOWE'EN

Do Not Fail to Make a Date With Your Girl For That Night, For Then It Is That Some of the Best Fun of the Fall Season Is Legitimate--Few of Tricks Which Are Usually Played.

The time of all the year that gladdens the small boy's heart is Halloween, when he can get out and commit his depredations with impunity to the agony and misery of all that come within his way.

Not only the small boy, but the youth and maiden take delight at Halloween for then they avail themselves of the mystery that prevades the sanctity of night and make various attempts at delving the secrets of the heart, for the purpose of ascertaining whether their true love will be faithful and who he or she may be.

Halloween comes on October 31 and elaborate preparations have been made by many of the young people in Butte to celebrate the grand old festival with all of the abandon and jollity that it calls for.

When the fathers of the church found their one time pagan worshippers yet mindful of the days wherein they offered to idols they turned those days to the service of the new faith.

The evening before it was Hallow Eve, and formerly had certain observances connected originally with worship. Now it is given over to spooks who are allowed to walk the earth, accompanied maybe by human spirits who have to amuse themselves.

This is helpful to the bashful young man who dares not ask his beloved if she is his or not. On Halloween he may know she is trying to find out who is going to share her fortune and pay her bills, and he need only send his astral body as deputy to the place where she is to be.

His presence (as a spirit) is guarantee that he is hers, and he won't be obliged to ask, for is it not fate?

Halloween parties usually are of girls alone, though there seems to be no good reason why brothers and cousins may not be admitted. She who means to have a Halloween party must provide lead to melt, nuts, nutmeal, material for making a cake, and a ring, thimble, raisins, key and wheel to put in it.

Exercise Your Ingenuity. If she cannot be in the county to try the cabbage trick, the best thing to do for it is to have a quantity of cabbages brought from the country and stored in the cellar. There must be apples and a ball of twine. By reading Burns' poem about Halloween other things may be found to try.

The proper way is for some to melt lead and others to do something else. The trouble is that every girl wants to see what every other girl gets, and a party divided will not enjoy themselves. Begin with the nuts. Put one for yourself and one for some one else, for several some one's else, if you wish, over the fire. Some will stay unmoved for a while, then fly off. Rarely are these two which burn quietly to ashes besides each other. That is the happiest omen for one's future.

It Spoils Spoons. The lead melting may come next. It will spoil the spoon in which it is melted, so use a cheap iron one. Take the lead that comes on tea boxes. Put a little piece of this in your spoon, hold it over the fire until the lead is soft and then quickly drop it into cold water. It will take many shapes, and if your imagination is good you will see the shears of a tailor or a newspaper man, the sword of a soldier, the look of an author, the desk of a preacher, or anything else you want to find. It is remarkable sometimes how certain likenesses can be found, especially when one knows what to hunt for.

Seven girls may mix the dumb cake, and while they do this not a word must they speak. It is nothing but flour and water mixed in a stiff dough and placed in a pan. On the top of it each girl with a new pin pricks her initials and those of her best beloved. The cake must bake ten minutes--no talking all this time--and those whose initials are plain when the cake is baked will be married before the year is out.

Another cake with the usual ingredients of ring, key, etc., named above, may be made with any amount of chattering going on. It may be good enough to eat, too, provided the boys are of sterling silver. Each girl must stir the dough once or twice. When the cake is ready each girl eats a slice. She who gets the ring will become a happy wife; the possession of the dime insures riches; the raisin promises happy motherhood; she who finds the thimble will never cease to wear it; the key unlocks all hearts, meaning many lovers but never a husband, and the wheel foretells travels over land and sea.

Apples are important for the charms of Halloween. Every one knows about bobbing for them in a tub of water, but does every one know that the success of the coming year is foretold by one's skill in getting between one's lips an apple suspended by a string from a height? There's nothing more elusive than an apple swinging in the air, but it can be caught. Of course the hands must not help. Name an apple run a needle through the center, and if it goes through the seed the desired one is yours for sure.

This is Great Fun. Another trick is to put the seeds on the lips, naming each seed, and the one that chings the longest is the one who loves you best. Of course you will peel the apple, turning the peeling three times around your head, let it drop, and then find it forms the initials you wish your future name to have. The charm which requires you to walk down stairs backward eating an apple and looking in a mirror all the while for the some one who will appear behind you is rather trying to the nerves, even if you do it with some one holding the light at the head of the stairs. This must be done in perfect silence.

The candle charm is pleasant. Into a candle run two needles "which have never been used" at right angles to each other. One is you (by proxy) and the other is "he." If the candle burns past the spot where the needles cross all will go well, but if it does not--who knows? The cabbage charm came from Scotland. Each girl goes blindfolded into a field where cabbages are growing and pulls one. If much dirt clings to the roots, wealth is coming by marriage; if there is a good straight stem the future husband will be comely. A taste of the heart indicates the disposition of the man to be.

It Makes 'Em Natty. A nut test is tried by seven girls. Each girl makes a long string of acorns, winds it around the same log (a stick of wood) and places that on the fire. When this is done they draw their chairs to the side of the room furthest from the fire and sit in silence until all is burned to ashes. They must rake out the ashes of the log without help from anyone, saying as they do it:

May my marriage be my theme. To visit me in this night's dream The image of my lover send, Let me see his name and face And his occupation trace. This produces a prophetic dream, so it is claimed. Another dream producer, warranted, is a cake mixed of pounded nuts, salted very salt. Equally efficacious is a hard boiled egg, from which the yolk is removed and salt put in its place. It must be eaten after you get into bed, and then not a word must you speak. You are sure to dream that some one is bringing you a drink, and he who does is your man.

The card charm is not generally known. At a quarter of 12 all who are to try it sit at a table and say nothing. One word breaks the spell. Promptly at 12 the cards are dealt, using only the face cards. A king prophesies speedy marriage; a jack a broken engagement; a queen, an old maid; diamonds, riches; spades, thrift; clubs, poverty; hearts, love in a cottage.

Their Name Is Legion. There are many more tricks that might be tried. The ball of twine is thrown from the window, one end being held by the thrower. When she feels it caught she calls, "Who's there?" and "he" ought to tell her. When these have all been tried it will be too late to try any more.

At the supper let there be tea grounds, which are so prophetic of one's future. Any menu in which apples and nuts have a part will be appropriate. Odd and dainty souveners may be made by mounting small witch dolls of nuts on the supper card. The nut forms the head of the doll and is dressed with a witch's peaked hat over her hood. The body is made of toothpicks. One trial will show how to make them. Letter on the card a line or two from Burns and you will have a quaint card.

YANKEE MARINES ROUT INSURGENTS

COMMANDER OF UNITED STATES CORPS GIVES GRAPHIC DESCRIPTION OF BATTLES.

MAJOR WALLER AND HIS MAN AND THEIR EXPLOIT

While No Engagements of Note Have Been Fought for Sometime in the Philippines, There Have Been Numerous Skirmishes, in Which the Marines Have Shown Great Gallantry.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Washington, Oct. 29.--Major General Charles Heywood of the United States marine corps, in his annual report to the secretary of the navy, says it is his policy to keep the officers and men of his command in the Philippines only two years and a half, returning there after such service to this country. He hopes to reduce this term of service to two years, that being as long as advisable to keep them in that climate.

During the past year, while there have been practically no demonstrations in the Philippines by organized insurgents, the marines, says General Heywood, have done excellent work in ridding the island of roving bands of ladders. The report presents in detail the operations of Major Waller and his courageous band of marines on the coast of Southern Samar. Major Waller is quoted as saying that the expeditions early in last November in Soholon district were the most important of the campaign so far as the effects of the insurgents were concerned.

A graphic account is given of the operations of the main expedition in the Soholon district. The attack was on the fortified cliffs and caves in the mountains, which had been reported to be practically impregnable. The plan of attack was that two shore columns were to unite at the enemy's stronghold and be joined there by a river column under Major Waller.

Came on Bamboo Guns. Concerning the result of the attack the report says:

"On the 17th of November, the shore column struck the enemies trail which was followed and the detachments soon came upon a number of bamboo guns. One of these commanding the trail had the fuse burning and Acting Corporal Harry Glenn rushed forward and pulled out the fuse. "The attack of the marines was a perfect surprise and the enemy was completely routed, so being killed. After driving the insurgents from their position the troops crossed the river, scaled the cliffs on the opposite side and destroyed the camps there. "The enemy fired two volleys and then fled. Major Waller says that he himself was not in this attack, being in the river below and unable to reach the firing line in time, but mentioned Captains Porter and Berris as being entitled to the highest credit for the courage and skillful manner in which they routed the enemy in the face of apparently insurmountable obstacles.

A Hard Proposition. "In order to reach the enemy's position the troops had to climb the cliffs, which rise sheer from the river to the height of about 200 feet and are honey-combed with caves, to which access is had by means of bamboo ladders and also by narrow ledges with bamboo hand-rails. Tons of rocks are suspended in cages held in position by vines, and in readiness to be precipitated upon people and boats below.

"Instant destruction would have undoubtedly been the fate of the boats had they undertaken the ascent of the river before the shore column had dislodged the insurgents. The effect of the capture of the last stronghold upon the insurgents of Samar cannot be over-estimated as they had spent years of labor upon the defenses and undoubtedly considered the cliff fortifications impregnable." Endured Incredible Hardships. The reports contain an account of the march of 100 miles across Samar of Major Waller and his men and of the incredible hardships they endured. The command was engaged actively and continually against the insurgents for three months. General Heywood strongly urges the enactment of the measure introduced at the last session of congress providing for an increase in the officers and enlisted men of the marine corps. He recommends the erection at Philadelphia of a fire-proof deposit of supplies at a cost of $150,000, the present leased quarters being entirely inadequate and unsafe. He says, too, that the present quarters in Washington are old and unsanitary and have been condemned by a board of medical officers of the navy. Preliminary steps have been taken to erect new barracks at Norfolk, Va., at a cost of $100,000. General Heywood renews his previous recommendation that congress appropriate liberally for marine barracks and quarters at the Charleston, S. C., naval station. The report says that the native inhabitants in Guam are making gratifying progress in acquiring a knowledge of the English language.

Valuable Relics Stolen. New York, Oct. 29.--Tommaso Salvini, the tragedian, who is living in retirement at Florence, has been the victim of burglars, and many valuables, wreaths, medals and other gifts gathered during Salvini's stage career were stolen.

It is not possible for the proprietors to publish more than a very few of the numerous letters received in praise of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and telling of its remarkable cures. They come from people in every walk in life and from every state in the Union. The following from Mr. T. W. Greathouse of Fratsburg, Pa., speaks for itself: "I would have been dead now but for the use of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It cured me of chronic diarrhoea after seven years of suffering. I can never say too much in praise of that remedy." KICK FROM HORSE RESULTS IN DEATH

O'BRIEN'S BEAST LETS DRIVE WHEN PLAYFULLY POKED IN RIBS BY HIS MASTER.

Eugene O'Brien was kicked on the jaw by a horse which he was cleaning at his home, No. 215 South Main street, last night, sustaining injuries which resulted in his death at the Murray & Freund hospital an hour afterwards. Both the upper and lower jaws were fractured by the horse's hoofs, and there was no hope for the injured man. In a measure his death was due to his own carelessness. He was working at the rear of the horse, and playfully poked him in the ribs to move forward, when the horse let both heels drive and knocked him back several yards. He was taken in a hack to the hospital immediately, but died an hour afterward in spite of the efforts of the surgeons to prolong his life. O'Brien was 26 years of age and unmarried.

CHICAGO MAKES LOSING IN UNCOLLECTED TAXES

The Collectors Have Some Peculiar Methods That Are Full of Errors and Abuses. [BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Chicago, Ill., Oct. 29.--In 10 years the city of Chicago has lost $3,610,000 in uncollected taxes. A report showing this and declaring the tax assessing and collecting methods of the county full of errors, abuses and mysteries, has been placed in the hands of Controller McGann, expert accountant, who has been examining the books of the county treasury. During the 10 years, accountants assert, the collection of delinquent personal taxes amounted to only $50,000, until an investigation of the books was begun, and then the county officers were able to collect $15,000 a month. It is asserted also that the county authorities have made a practice of accepting partial payment in full, without showing by their records why a reduction was allowed.
