DOMINICK NEGRO IS AFTER DAMAGES

PRAYS FOR REMOVAL OF HIS CASE AGAINST BRITANNIA MINING CON. TO HIGHER COURT.

AVERS HE WAS INJURED WHILE AT WORK IN MINE

And That, Further, the Machinery Provided for Him and Dennis Regan Was Not of the Proper Sort—He Wants the United States Court to Hear the Story of His Trials and Tribulations.

A transcript was filed with Clerk Stephens of the federal court this morning, praying for the removal of the case of Dominick Negro against the Britannia Mining company from the district court of Silver Bow county to the circuit court of the United States. Judge Harney has consented to the removal from his court and it now remains for Judge Knowles of the federal court to receive the action and set it for hearing.

In reciting the facts in the case the transcript avers that in May 15, 1902, the Britannia Mining company contracted with Dennis Regan and Dominick Negro for sinking a shaft in their Britannia mine, located east of Butte, next to the inclosing hills. They were to receive $16 per foot for doing the work. Operations were begun at once and continued until June 1. The complaint alleges that the defendants agreed to furnish all of the necessary machinery for doing the work and to provide the precautions required by law in order that the men might do their work with as little danger as possible. But during the course of operations many of these agreements were neglected. It is alleged that the cage was too large for the shaft. Rails for the ore cars were permitted to extend over the shaft.

His Skull Was Broken. In May 30 it is claimed that one of these rails became loose and fell down the shaft, striking Dominick Negro in the head. He was working at a level of 230 feet. So forcibly did the rail strike him that his skull was broken and he sustained various other severe injuries. Since that time he has been disabled and it is believed that he will never recover his former state of health, according to the complaint.

The defendant Dominick Negro asks damages to the extent of $10,000. He also claims that he has suffered from the loss of time to the extent of $3,000. His medical and surgical bills up to the present time have aggregated $613. Negro claims that he still requires medical attention. In view of these facts he summarizes his demands and asks that he be given judgment against the Britannia Mining company to the extent of $13,613. Dominick Negro is being represented in this case by Attorney J. L. Wines.

Jesse B. Roote entered his appearance as attorney for the Britannia Mining company. He filed a motion with the federal court this morning that the action be dismissed, in view of the fact that the complaint as contained in the transcript for removal does not give sufficient evidence to warrant further procedure in the matter.

Laura Biggar Gets Bail.
New York, Nov. 7.—Bail was furnished yesterday for Laura Biggar, charged with conspiracy in connection with the Bennett mill case. She returned voluntarily three days ago.

No bail has yet been found for Dr. Hendrika, or former Justice Stanton, who are held on the same charge.

Wilson Barrett's New Play.
London, Nov. 7.—Wilson Barrett produced a new play, "The Christian King," of which he is the author, at Bristol last night, with the greatest success. The play deals with the story of King Alfred, and is cleverly constructed. It was well received by the London critics this morning.

Mr. Barrett appeared in the title role.

"The Convict's Daughter."
"The Convict's Daughter" is a new sensational melodrama by J. A. Fraser, Jr., that will be the attraction at the Grand Opera house tomorrow and Sunday. It introduces an original type of "hobo" known as "Wearry Willie." For a time, through force of circumstances, and threats he serves the villain, but through the development of the story he shows a generous nature. It is a character that stands out in bold relief and wins deserved commendation.

Sale of seats begins tomorrow morning.

HOT ON THE TRAIL OF A GOLD MINE!

WALKERVILLE HOUSEWIFE THINKS IT IS UP TO HER TO LAND REAL BONANZA OF YELLOW.

FOR OUT OF A TURKEY SHE CUTS FINE METAL

And Now She Is Trying to Find Out Where the Gobbler Pecked Up the Shiny Bits She Found in His Gizzard—It May Lead to One of the Quickest Discoveries in Gold in a Long Time.

One of the early arrivals among the hosts of Thanksgiving turkeys headed into Butte from the state of sunflowers has proved a bonanza to a housewife of Walkerville, and its advent into the kitchen of the family on the hill may lead to the discovery of a new Eldorado in far-off Kansas.

It all happened yesterday. The story is still fresh in the minds of the people most interested and an effort is being made to keep the transaction dark and shady, so that the news may not leak out and spread as far as the home of Carrie Nation and thereby upset the plans of Butte adventurers, who want to get rich from the tip they have that Kansas is paved with gold of several carats fine. The plot is interesting.

Yesterday a delivery wagon of a Park street firm stopped at a kitchen door in Walkerville and delivered a turkey. The bird was designed to supply the table on the occasion of an especial feast, and it was a gobbler of size and juiciness suitable for the occasion. It cost $1.80 with its plumage on, and was regarded as a bargain, although just how much of a bargain she had secured did not appear to the housewife until she had cut the bird down the breast, dragged out its gizzard and split it open.

She Had a Bonanza.

In the sack where the Kansas gobbler kept his fine-cut provender appeared several shining particles. Upon further investigation several more were found. They looked like gold, they met every test of gold, and when taken to a place in the city where gold is purchased they sold for gold, netting the housewife the tidy sum of $2.10. It was a case of unexpected profit, the like of which culinary circles had not seen for many a day.

It seemed as plain as the nose on the face of the market man where the turkey was bought that the Kansas turkey had gobbled up a quantity of gold somewhere down in the sunflower state and was filled with valuable evidence of the existence of gold-bearing ground in a region where he was raised. Gold evidently could be found in the grass roots in the range where the gobbler had pastured.

It seemed likely that a fortune could be made by anyone who could get a line on the backyard where the gobbler grew and stake it out under the mineral land act. To this end the woman who purchased the fowl went to the dealer and let him into the secret, asking that he trace the consignment of turkeys to Kansas, ferret out the place where they were raised and go cahoots on the profits of the deal when the gold mine should be finally exploited and the stone rolled from the grave of the buried treasure.

Groceryman on the Track.

The groceryman is now on the track of the shipment of turkeys and will make a strong effort to connect with the man who sold them and then trace the birds to their early home in the gold-bearing ledges of the Kansas prairies. It is a task which he undertakes with delight and he sees already dangling before him the long green which will be his when he does the detective work necessary to land the prize.

Ought to Be Gold There.

Different theories are advanced relative to the turkey problem and its relation to free-milling gold. It is suggested by some that the turkeys ran across a cache of jewelry and that the gobbler swallowed a watch or bracelet and pulverized the same while it roamed in search of grasshoppers on its native heath. Others say that while coming to Montana the turkey took a whiff of the atmosphere about election time and sucked in enough money from the bushes growing along the track to make even change for $2.10.

Yet on the face of things it would appear that the first impulse of the housewife who dissected the turkey was a rational one. There may be gold mines in Kansas; everything else seems to grow there, and it seems likely that a state which runs contrary to all natural laws should easily be able to refute the theories of the mineralogists and give evidence that placer ground is plentiful within its borders. Soil rich enough to grow such whiskers as spring up flourish with luxuriance in Kansas must have some ingredients other than the black loam substance. Reports from Kansas may be received before the election returns are all in, and the likelihood of finding bonanza ground under the eaves of the dwelling of Mrs. Lease is likely to be ascertained soon if the Walkerville housewife's hopes mature. She says she seems to be lucky and the deal with the market man would appear to bear out her view of the case.

DAN McDONALD IS VICTIM OF RUFFIAN

PRESIDENT OF AMERICAN LABOR UNION LIES ILL IN DENVER AS RESULT OF AN ASSAULT.

TROUBLE GROWS OUT OF AN ELECTION DISPUTE

McDonald Was Talking to Secretary W. W. Haywood of the Western Federation of Miners When a Special Policeman, One Bramer, Came Up and Assaulted Him Without Provocation.

Secretary Smith of the American Labor union received a communication from Denver this morning containing the news that President Dan McDonald is lying ill in that city from the effects of a blow on the head which he received on election day.

The communication to Mr. Smith was brief, but told enough to satisfy those who read it that President McDonald was the innocent victim of a vicious assault made by James Bramer, a special policeman. It seems that McDonald was standing on Sixteenth street in the Colorado capital talking with Secretary W. D. Haywood of the Western Federation of Miners, when the special policeman came out of a saloon near by and attacked them.

Over the Election. What the ill-appointed officer's motives were is not stated in the message to Mr. Smith, but it is believed the assault was inspired by the heated feeling which grew out of the election. Bramer approached McDonald from behind and without warning struck him a terrific blow on the back of the head. Haywood drew his revolver on the instant and fired at the assailant, the ball entering the left arm and disabling Bramer. Both McDonald and Bramer were removed to the office of the nearest physician and their injuries were dressed. A telegram received at a late hour told that McDonald is improving and will soon be out again.

FERDINAND JACOBS ON WAY TO WARM SPRINGS

Once Well Known in Helena, He Has Lost His Mind and Incarceration in Asylum is Necessary.

Ferdinand Jacobs, who at one time was a well-known man in Helena, was brought to Butte last night by Sheriff O'Connell of Lewis and Clarke county. Jacobs has been adjudged insane and is on his way to Warm Springs, where he will be confined in the state institution for the demented. The old man was very much affected and did not seem to enjoy his incarceration in the city bastille. Though not raving, he sometimes becomes unmanageable, and for fear that he might become violent it was thought most expedient to commit him to Warm Springs.
