ONCE A PROUD DUKE, NOW A JAIL HABITUE

THE DUKE OF KAKYAK

Who Has Drifted From the Top to the Foot of the Ladder, From a Noble Birth to the Bastille as a Vagrant.

How have the mighty fallen! Ask the Duke of Kakyak. He ought to be able to tell if anybody can, for he was once a member of the royal house of Portugal, and now he is a habitue of the city jail.

The duke was arrested last night for vagrancy, the usual charge, and this morning was fined the customary $10 in police court. There is nothing unusual in this, for Judge Boyle has fined the duke as often as he has hairs on his head, and the judge isn't bald, either; but for the first time the member of Portugal's royal family told the story of his life.

Here's the duke's story from his own lips:

"I first saw the light of day in Lisbon, Portugal, 35 years ago. My father was a second cousin of King John and a distant relative of the father of the present young king of Spain. My mother, had, for years been a lady-in-waiting on the queen, and for generations her family had in some way or other been connected with the royal house.

"My father was made duke of the little province of Laspel, in Southern Portugal, for bravery displayed during the Lisbon earthquake and the tidal wave. He was also knighted. I grew up surrounded on every hand by luxuries such as only branches of the royal family possess, and I was taught to be proud and haughty to the poor.

"When 16 years of age I wanted to see the world, and one day I took ship for South America. My parents knew nothing of this move, and I took great pains to keep the news from them; in fact, I caused a message to reach them, which said I had been drowned at sea, and from that time I have never sent them tidings of myself nor have I received news from them.

"Well, to make a long story short, I drifted up into Mexico, and from there into the states. Ten years ago I came to Butte and tried to get work. I had never been trained to work and could therefore only hold down odd jobs. I often went hungry, and then my troubles drove me to drink. I guess I went from bad to worse, and here I am in the city jail of Butte, a vagrant and an outcast."

"And why haven't you sent for aid to your family?" was asked him.

"I would far rather be dead than have them know that I have reached the dregs," he replied. "I will die soon, anyway, and they might just as well be kept in ignorance of the disgrace I have brought upon the family name."

THREE BOYS SLEEP UNDER SIDEWALK

AND ARE WROTH WHEN PULLED OUT BY THE POLICE AND HUSTLED TO CITY JAIL.

EMBRYONIC DESPERADOES HAVE NO HOME TO LOVE

And So They Hang Out Wherever They Can and Pick Up a Living by Selling Bits of Stuff to the Junk Men—How They Touched the Tender Heart of Judge Boyle and What He Said.

Three dust begrimed, ragged and disheveled boys were dragged from underneath the sidewalk on West Mercury street by Policeman Sullivan at an early hour this morning and the rest of the night was passed by the young Arabs in the detention ward at the city jail.

The young knights of the road gave their names as Willie Probst, Dan Sullivan and Joe Barber. They said they had nowhere to sleep and that they thought they had a right to make their downy couch under a board sidewalk.

"We wasn't doin' nobody any harm," said Dan Sullivan, the largest of theurchins, "and weuns don't think dat cop oughter pulled us out o' de hole."

"How do you boys make a living?" Chief Reynolds asked them.

"We picks up ol' sacks an' pieces o' brass an' sells 'em ter de junk shops," was the reply.

He Has a Tender Heart. Judge Boyle dislikes to fine boys of tender age and after giving them a severe lecture and promising to send them to the county jail unless they mended their ways, dismissed the cases against them.

"There are some cases for charity," said the kind-hearted judge after the boys had strolled up the street. "Those boys could be made useful men with proper encouragement and help, but they are sure to wind up in the penitentiary if they keep on the way they are going."

Joe Barber, who is 14 years old, ran away from the reform school at Twin Bridges about six weeks ago and landed in the arms of a Butte policeman.

The boy has a good face and Chief Reynolds, Jerry Murphy and Barney McGillic interested themselves in getting him a position. He was rigged out in a new suit of clothes and a position was secured for him with a lady on a Silver Bow county ranch. The lad was to leave on an afternoon train, but when the time came for him to depart he failed to put in his appearance. He drifted about the streets, fell in with bad company and is fast becoming a little tramp.

He Is a Regular Corker. Reports from Dublin Gulch have it that Joe can whip any boy of his age from Corktown down the gulch and he is looked upon as a hero by the young America of that vicinity.

He is sure to develop into a criminal unless steps are taken to reform him. The charity will have to come from outsiders as Joe's parents are dead and he has not a single living relative that he knows of.

At St. John's Episcopal church a musical program was rendered last night by the organist, V. E. Matlack. In addition to the organ solos a number of vocal selections were creditably sung by the vested choir. The Rev. Blackiston preached a strong sermon upon the "Righteousness of Christianity."

SHOWER OF BRIGHT LEONIDES

Expected in This County and Vicinity at the End of This Week.

Much interest is being taken just at present by astronomers and those interested in the subject in the shower of missing Leonides which is expected about the close of the present week. Two years ago, about the 14th of November and again last year, the astronomers throughout the country watched for them, but for some unaccountable reason they failed to appear.

Prof. N. R. Leonard is of the opinion that the Leonides may be seen again this year but says that it is hardly possible that the phenomenon will be visible before midnight on Saturday.

Astronomers in general seem to think that this should be a particularly favorable time for the meteor to make their appearance because that part of the space through which the earth passes in the middle of November is a well-traveled highway for meteors.

Washington, Nov. 10.—The weather bureau has issued the following bulletin:

"The northwestern wave has extended over the upper lakes and Mississippi valley and Middle Western states and will overspread the middle Mississippi and Ohio valleys and interior of New York and Western New England Monday."

The Rev. E. J. Groeneveld preached a very interesting sermon at the First Presbyterian church yesterday morning on the "Genealogy of Christ." He sought to show how all of the people on earth were descended from one and the same source.

O'CONNOR'S COURT TO HAVE BUSY DAY

WALKERVILLE JUSTICE HAS SEVERAL CASES OF INTEREST, AMONG THEM JOHN HARMON'S.

Tomorrow will be a busy day in Justice O'Connor's court in Walkerville. The case of John Harmon, charged with having broken into a dwelling at No. 820 South Main street, Butte, and stealing jewelry and other articles of value amounting to more than $100, has been set for hearing at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when the prisoner will be arraigned for burglary.

The case of Peter Van Holt, who, it is alleged, attacked Tom O'Neill in Centerville some time ago, inflicting serious injuries about his victim's head by means of repeated blows with a heavy club, will also come up during the day. The charge against Van Holt is assault in the first degree.

Some interesting developments are expected when the cases of Kelley and Miller and Fred Holdorf are brought up for trial. Each of these defendants is to answer to a charge of illegal registration. The cases are also set for tomorrow.

BUT FOR A TELEGRAPH POLE

Runaway Team Might Have Done Things to the Finlen Hotel.

An ordinary telegraph pole saved the day at Finlen hotel yesterday morning when a runaway team dashed full speed down North Wyoming street straight for the hotel.

It all happened about 10 o'clock. A dairyman had left his team of horses standing unhitched towards the top of North Wyoming street and the animals becoming frightened at something started full speed in the direction of East Broadway. At the time there were a dozen guests sitting in chairs on the sidewalk and the danger seemed imminent.

The horses were evidently blinded with fright, for they ran headlong into the telegraph pole that stands at the corner of the streets in front of the hotel. The wagon was badly demolished and the horses were bruised; otherwise there was no harm done.

WHERE IT REALLY BELONGS

Jefferson County is in the Column of Republican Districts.

[SPECIAL TO INTER MOUNTAIN.]
Boulder, Nov. 10.—From the returns as first reported and as canvassed and found correct by the board of county commissioners it appears that Jefferson county has at last joined in the republican procession.

For the first time in the history of this county it has elected a majority of republican county officials and given the republican state ticket a small majority.

The official canvass gives Dixon for congress 24 more votes than Evans, his democratic opponent, and Holloway has a plurality of 420.
