METHODIST CHURCH TO HOLD REVIVALS
REV. CROUCH THINKS THE TIME IS RIPE AND IS PREPARING FOR SERIES OF MEETINGS.
The preparations for the protracted meetings to be held at the Meaderville Methodist church are now being completed and Rev. C. D. Crouch, the pastor of the church, announces that he will be ready to begin the revivals in about two weeks.
"I am much pleased with the spirit shown by the members," said Mr. Crouch, "and everything seems to point to the success of the meetings. The revivals will be held each night in the week as long as the interest in them keeps up and we expect to accomplish much good. The church work in both Meaderville and Walkerville is progressing nicely and the time seems ripe for an awakening of interest in both pastorate."

TRIES TO KILL BELGIAN MONARCH
lice that Rubino really fired a ball cartridge, the bullet of which smashed the window of Count D'Outremont's carriage and grazed the grand marshal's face. When removed from the mob Rubino was placed in a cab and infuriated crowds of people immediately surrounded it and attacked the vehicle with knives and sticks. The police had great difficulty in forcing a way to the police station through the crowd, which shouted alternately, "kill him" and "long live the king." The cab was badly hacked with knives.
WAS PREPARED FOR A FUSILADE OF BULLETS
A search of the prisoner revealed a package of ball cartridges.
It is reported Rubino had been heard to express anarchistic opinions. It was ascertained he came to Brussels from London expressly to kill King Leopold, and went to the cathedral today for this purpose, but refrained from shooting for fear of killing soldiers who stood between him and his majesty.
Rubino is also reported to have said he was employed in the Italian secret service in London and that he came to Brussels a fortnight ago with the intention of assassinating King Leopold.
The news of the outrage spread rapidly throughout the city and the greatest excitement prevailed. The people thronged the streets early and large crowds gathered in front of the various bulletin boards. The newspapers issued frequent editions and these were eagerly bought. General abhorrence was expressed by the people.
King Leopold appeared to be quite unmoved. After the luncheon at the palace his majesty entered a motor car and proceeded to the railroad station, where he boarded a train bound for Geronendael.

EFFORTS TO SECURE JURY STILL DRAGGING ON
McManus, P. S. Taney, Jim McCreavey and the eight of the defense on Charles Wegren, A. Short, W. C. Converse, Dan Thomas, J. L. Singleton, S. B. Gorr, George Wallace and Lorenz Weidener.
THEY HAVE ALL READ NEWSPAPER ACCOUNTS
Reading the newspaper seems to be one of the worst things that a man who wants to serve on the jury can do. Most of the jurors have read one of the three papers which circulate in this county. Many have read the Inter Mountain of July 19, which contained the first news of the horrible tragedy. From reading these accounts many have formed an opinion, which they had not since changed, and were accordingly ineligible for service.
Deputy Sheriff Lou Turner brought McGeary into court at 9:30. The prisoner took his seat behind his attorney, W. H. Trippett. Directly behind him and next to the deputy sat his brother and sister and other members of the family, while in front, where they have been sitting since the beginning of the trial, were the two Evans brothers and their sister, Mrs. Hollinshead. County Attorney Duffy and Deputy Tolan sat in their accustomed place, facing the prisoner.
As soon as court convened the jurors began to flock around the judge's bench to make excuses. They had the time-worn tales of sickness and business. Some few did not understand the English tongue; some were not taxpayers; some had sick wives and some had sick children. It was marvelous how many of them had reasonable excuses.
When the space was cleared it was found that 27 had been allowed to go, leaving 39 out of a hundred to run the gauntlet of the attorney's fire.
"You may proceed with the examination of the jurors," said the judge.

IT TOOK LITTLE TIME TO EXHAUST THE PANEL
In fifteen minutes 20 of the 39 were excused for opinions or opposition to hanging. They alternated with remarkable regularity. One juror had a definite opinion that nothing could shake. The next would never hang a man for murder.
With painful monotony the examination proceeded. With equally painful regularity the jurors were excused. At last came a man who proved a competent juror, James McCreavey, despite every effort on the state to prove that he could not give the case a fair trial. Rapidly came attorney's questions. Like lightning came the juror's answers. He had no opinion; he had not talked with any one concerning the trial; his wife did not read the papers; he did not belong to the same society as the prisoner and he was not opposed to capital punishment. At last Mr. Duffy asked, "has anybody talked to you at all about the matter?"
"No sir," was the answer.
"Have you a partner at the works?"
"Yes, sir."
"Didn't he talk to you about the matter?"
"Can't talk English, he's a dago," was the ready answer.
Mr. McCreavey was passed for cause, although afterwards he was challenged by the state and excused.
Attorney Duffy used his third peremptory challenge of P. S. Taney, who stepped out of the box.
"Joseph Sladich," called the clerk. Mr. Sladich was also examined closely by Mr. Duffy. During the examination the juror stated that he had heard stories and expressions concerning the case from several of his acquaintances, but did not believe them.
"Then you thought the whole outfit were liars," said Mr. Duffy. This brought a reprimand from Judge Napton.
"I don't want the county attorney of this county to make a remark like that in court," was the way the judge admonished the state's representative.
Mr. Sladich remained in the box and the defense challenged J. L. Singleton. Then there was another procession of men with opinion or aversion to hanging. Down the line went the clerk of the court until only a few more were left in the box.
P. J. Maloney broke the spell by establishing the fact that he was in a position to try the case and F. B. Gorr, challenged by the defense, made a place for him. More men with opinions and dislikes of the death penalty, and then Lorenz Weidener stuck. He was passed by both sides.
The state left itself with only one more challenge when the county attorney told Juror McCreavey that he could go.
"Michael Corrigan," called the clerk. Mr. Corrigan surprised everybody by having all the qualifications to remain. The county attorney attempted to ask the juror if he had any opinion concerning the sanity of the accused, but the judge overruled the question of Mr. Trippett's objection.
"We challenge George Wallace," said Attorney Trippett, as the clerk turned the box over to find the names of the three remaining jurors.
The hands of the big clock were creeping close to 12; the peremptory challenges were dwindling down and it was an even chance to get a jury or have recourse for a venire.
Thomas Barret had a fixed and unalterable opinion. Barney McCreavey had to explain a defect in his alarm clock, the cause of his being late, and then showed his gratitude for being excused by having neither opinions nor other defects.
"You may excuse your eighth challenge, Mr. Trippett," said the judge.
"We excuse Mr. Weidener," said the attorney.
LAST NAME IN THE LONG LIST OF MEN CALLED
"This is the last name," whispered the clerk, as he called the name of Thomas Collins, and the whistles announced the noon hour.
Mr. Collins came to the front, held up his hands and was sworn. He took his seat in the box confidently, and had no scruples about inflicting capital punishment. There was a hush in the courtroom.
Here was a jury at last thought the audience.
"Have you formed or expressed any opinion concerning the guilt or innocence of the prisoner from reading the account of the coroner's inquest, the statement of the accused man and the dying statement of Mr. Evans?" asked the county attorney.
"I have," said Mr. Collins.
"You may stand aside," said Judge Napton.
"We will issue another special venire

Important Testimony Closes
that he would not require a written lease, that Mr. Daly's word was good enough for him. I stated to the judge that there was a case pending in his court about that very claim between the Anaconda company and the Butte & Boston company, whereupon he made the remark, 'I wonder if these people want to fix me or want to bribe me?' One of these two words was used by him. I told him I didn't think so, because I had been informed that Mr. Shaw was acting on his own account; that he wanted to get into the lease on his own account, and that it was his own move. In one or both of these conversational reference was made to the possibility of getting a lease on the Foster interest, as it was called.
"I told the judge in one of the conversations that I doubted whether Mr. Shaw could get the lease for him; that I understood it was under bond to the Butte & Boston. The judge said that Mr. Shaw would fix that part of it. I believe that is the substance of what was said between us relative to the lease. The conversations, especially the first one, was quite lengthy—the first one was, and many others were mentioned or said besides the matter of the lease."
TOLD CLANCY HE THOUGHT IT COULD NOT BE GOTTEN
In reply to a question from Mr. Thresher, on cross-examination, Mr. Scallion said:
"I said to Judge Clancy that I doubted whether he could get that interest for him, referring to the Foster interest—he called it the Foster interest—and I remarked that I understood that it was under bond to the Butte & Boston company and that I doubted whether Mr. Shaw could get the interest for him; that I didn't believe that the Fosters had control of it. He explained that he could get it anyway; he understood that Mr. Shaw could get it for him, and that the Butte & Boston interest could be arranged for in the same manner as the other interest. I have told you already what I said about Mr. Shaw in the second conversation."
W. H. Watson was the next witness. He was connected with the Reveille staff and expressed the opinion that Judge Clancy himself wrote the affidavit which was published in the Reveille.
Mr. Hennessy on the Stand.
D. J. Hennessy testified as to the conversation that he had with Judge Clancy. Mr. Hennessy said:
"Mr. Daly came to see me one day and told me Judge Clancy had made application through Mr. Scallion for a lease. He wished to tell the judge in as nice a manner as possible that he could not have that lease."
"I went up to the judge's rooms some time during the day, and I couldn't get in, and I went into the county attorney's room and saw Mr. Connolly, as I remember, and Mr. Connolly went out to see if he could get into the judge's rooms, and he came back and said he couldn't; that he would see the judge, as I remember; but, anyway, I was afterwards informed that the judge would meet me that evening at 8 o'clock in his chambers."
"I went there and I met the judge, and I told him that Mr. Daly had sent me to tell him that he respected the judge and himself too much to even talk of granting him a lease while the judge was in a position to try any cases in which Mr. Daly might be even directly interested. That was the full substance of my conversation as to any lease or any connection with mining matters."
Mr. Hennessy was then cross-examined at some length and later on Attorney Breen for the state and Attorney Thresher for the defense, made brief arguments.
The justice took the case under advisement until Monday at 2 o'clock.

the public schools and permit the family to spend a portion of its income for education and still not make it necessary to resort to child labor. Witness answered in the affirmative.
On the question of the minimum age at which a boy should go on the breaker, Mr. Mitchell said he would advocate that it be put at 14 years.
Mr. Wilcox examined Mr. Mitchell at some length regarding the various demands of the miners.
"Do you know the wages that are paid are about $60,000,000?" Mr. Wilcox asked.
"I have read that statement," the witness answered.
