Deed of Dastards in Devitt Claim, Where Giant Powder Was Exploded While the Miners Were at Work.

menous explosions might easily kill the Mountain View employees, the Heineze things went on with their work. Accident alone prevented them from becoming murderers in fact as well as in thought.

Jostiah Hodge, foreman of the Mountain View, tells a graphic story of his experiences early on the morning of Wednesday, November 4, when he visited the workings connecting the Mountain View with the Rarus.

When Judge Knowles granted the order permitting the Butte & Boston company to remove the loose rock and debris in the way of the inspection party in Michael Devitt ground, this work was placed under the supervision of Mr. Hodge owing to his long and practical experience as a miner and foreman.

On Tuesday, November 3, Mr. Hodge, accompanied by Shift Boss Joe Dawe, entered the Mountain View and proceeded to the Rarus mine, owned by the M. O. P. company. The object of the visit was to ascertain just what work would be required to clean out the drift from the Mountain View to the Rarus in order that the waste might be trammed from the entrance of the Michael Devitt to the Mountain View shaft.

Mysterious Man With Candle.

The gentlemen made an examination and as a result two men were put to work cleaning out the drift. They began work about 45 feet back from the Rarus workings.

At the time of Mr. Hodge's first visit he saw a person moving about with a candle, in the Rarus, but was unable to ascertain who it was.

At about 3 o'clock Wednesday morning Mr. Hodge was called from his bed and asked to go to the mine, that blasting was going on in the vicinity where the men were working. When he arrived at the Mountain View shaft it presented the appearance of a huge smokestack, so dense was the smoke issuing therefrom.

Felt His Way in Smoke.

He immediately went down the shaft and after reaching the fifth level of the Mountain View, which corresponds to the 700-foot level of the Rarus, he traversed the drift for a distance of about 400 feet to where he had left the men at work. The smoke was so dense at times that it was almost impossible for a man to remain in the workings and live. When he arrived at the spot he found that the men had taken refuge in a drift running from the Pennsylvania, which supplied a current of air that sent the smoke into the Mountain View.

The men stated that they were working away in the drift some 45 feet away from the entrance to the Rarus and saw a man skulking about the latter workings. Finally he came out far enough to be recognized as a shift boss in the employ of the M. O. P. company.

He had no candle and when one of the men called him by name he slunk away in the darkness. Within a few minutes afterward there was a loud report and the men were severely shaken up. They retreated some distance and waited to see what would happen. Another and another explosion followed the first and they immediately surmised what was transpiring.

They sent for Mr. Hodge, and when that gentleman arrived they all took refuge in the Pennsylvania drift. No warning was given the men that giant powder was going to be exploded, and but for the fact that they had been busy at their work and not nearer the blast they would have been instantly killed.

Thirty Shots Fired.

While in the drift of the Pennsylvania Mr. Hodge stated that at least 30 shots were fired in the Rarus. The explosions were not confined to this particular entrance to the Rarus, but were also going on in every direction to the Michael Devitt from the Mountain View.

While in the mine Mr. Hodge had little opportunity to view the havoc being wrought by the Montana Ore Purchasing company further than a cursory inspection of three points leading from the Mountain View to the Rarus. When the party emerged from the Pennsylvania drift into the Mountain View they were almost overcome by the smoke from the burning timbers and the powder and it was with difficulty they reached the shaft of the latter mine.

A later examination of the destruction wrought by Heineze's satellites showed the method employed to block the entrance to the Michael Devitt.

Powder in Places.

The powder had been placed in the crevices between the lagging and capping in the drifts and when it exploded all the filling and "gob" was precipitated into the level. Mr. Hodge remained in the mine from 3:30 to 4:30 o'clock and then went to the surface, where he was taken sick from the fumes inhaled while underground.

The men were left in the mine and reported that the explosions continued until nearly 6:30 o'clock in the morning.

The workings where the explosion took place are a complete wreck and makes it impossible to enter the Michael Devitt and Rarus from the Mountain View.

The work performed by the dynamiters is considered the most malicious proceedings that a miner could be employed to enter into and it is a matter of surprise to every self-respecting miner in the city that there are men in their ranks who would lend countenance to such an outrage wherein the lives of brother work-

A POINTED PARLOR CARPET PROPOSITION

The point can be readily understood. The proposition is easy of solution. Our stock of parlor carpets is many times too large for the present conditions in Butte. We must move them. If you are in a position to buy one and will buy it of us, it will save us from carrying it in stock perhaps for months, and we will save you more money than you ever saved before on any carpet transaction of equal amount. We are willing to waive all our profit, and in some lines will actually book a loss to make a sale. We quote a few prices that show plainly that we stop at nothing short of the impossible to accomplish the desired result.

Velvet Carpets In rich red, green and blue ground, high pile, close weaves, standard grades, of which we cut 17 rooms last month at $1.25 a yard. REDUCED TO 85c a Yard	Wilton Velvet Carpets Undoubtedly the best weave of velvets to be had, in patterns and color schemes to suit all size rooms. The same grades that we booked orders on last month at $1.45 a yard. REDUCED TO $1.10 a Yard	Axminster Carpets With deep pile, in two-tone blue grounds, scroll and floral patterns, suitable for parlors only. The identical grade and quality sold for five rooms no later than last Wednesday for $1.35 a yard. REDUCED TO 95c a Yard	Extra Axminster Parlor carpets, with or without borders; the swellest thing in all carpetdom; choice colorings, exclusive designs, exceptionally close weave backs. An October bargain at $1.75 a yard. REDUCED TO $1.32 a Yard

BACK TO THE CITY.

Back to the city
When summer days are o'er,
'Tis good to hear the hurry,
The cheerful hum and hurry,
The rattle and the rour,
We love the rumbling city
And we're much inclined to pity
The country folk who never know
The rattle and the rour.

Back to the city
When autumn's golden store
Is shed upon the alley
The same as on the valley
And on the rippling shore,
The air is just as bracing
Where cabs and cars are racing,
And well dwells on the avenue
As well as on the shore.

Back to the city
And to a certain door,
(I wooed her by the ocean,
And still my deep devotion
Is waxing evermore),
So here's to the city,
And here's to Mistress Kitty:
The town would be a different place
If she came back no more.

COUNTY BOARD TO BUILD NEW ROAD

COMMISSIONERS GO OUT TO LOOK OVER PROPOSED THROUGH-FARE OUT TO SILVER BOW.

TO OPEN THE NEW ADDITION

Will Also Take a Look at Maud S. Gulch to See Whether Railway Has Obeyed Board's Order.

The county commissioners made a tour of inspection today of several county roads and of one proposed route for a new road. The route for the proposed new road is that heretofore considered and which, if built, will run from Butte to Silver Bow addition by a direct course and not go around either by South Butte or Meaderville, as do the old roads at present.

The commissioners drove down to the southeastern part of the town and across the country through the old Parrot smelter ground on the course the new road must take. It will run to the east of the old smelter and will be much shorter than the old roads.

Want to See the Ground.

The commissioners went over the route in order to familiarize themselves with it and to gather data which will be useful to them if the road is put through.

After visiting this locality it was the intention of the commissioners to visit Maud S. gulch and see whether the Northern Pacific railroad has complied with the order of the board to clear out the county road under the trestle there, which it recently filled in.

The railroad was given certain privileges by the commissioners in putting in tracks in the gulch, and it agreed to preserve the county road there and leave it in as good condition as ever. But it filled in under the trestle, where the road ran, and left no place for a practicable road on either side of the track.

Will Do It Themselves.

The commissioners issued an order for the clearing out of the road under the trestle by November 9, and if the railroad has not obeyed the order by that time the county road overseer will have the work done by the county teams.

From the gulch the commissioners expected to go to the Homestead hill and look at the road which runs over it. Every season the earth in the made-road there washes away and new earth has to be put in to make the roadbed over or else teams are unable to pass over the hard rock of the hill.

The commissioners are expected to return to the city this evening from their tour of inspection.
