

BROOKLYN ACADEMY OF MUSIC BURNED

FAMOUS OLD THEATER GOES UP LIKE TINDER—LOSS PLACED AT $300,000, COVERED.

LIBRARY WAS THREATENED

Brooklyn's Public Collection of Books, Numbering 160,000, Once Menaced by the Flames.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.
New York, Nov. 30.—The historic Academy of Music, the largest theater in Brooklyn, was destroyed today by a fire that is supposed to have been caused by an explosion. For a time the flames threatened adjoining property and when the roof fell in part it struck a saloon building adjoining, but fortunately no one was hurt, although the saloon was destroyed. The loss is estimated at $300,000, fully covered.

The fire started in the scenery on the stage of the theater, where a number of men were preparing for the testimonial dinner to State Senator McCarron, to be given there tonight. Within half an hour of the discovery of the fire the entire building was a roaring furnace and the firemen were bending all their efforts to saving the surrounding property.

The academy, which was an antiquated building constructed of brick, sandstone and wood, offered no resistance to the flames. It was located in the heart of the financial district.

Opposite, on Montague street, is the Brooklyn public library with over 160,000 volumes. The wind was blowing in that direction and great fears were expressed for its safety. The building was owned by a stock company.

PETITION FOR SALE OF PERSONAL PROPERTY

A petition for the sale of personal property was filed in Department III, of the district court this morning by William E. Wynn, administrator of the estate of Julia G. Wynn, deceased. The property in question is the Park block, located on West Park street.

Recently Patrick Gilroy, John Gilroy and wife, of County Mayo, Ireland, sought to have Wynn removed as administrator, on the grounds of embezzlement, but their showing in court was a complete vindication of Mr. Wynn, and the court refused to entertain the plea of the petitioners. The complainants were the father, mother and brother of the deceased.

EDWARD KELLER FINED $25 FOR HIS ACTIONS

Keller became disorderly at the place and was ordered away. He became more demonstrative and Backus personally took the man in hand and marched him to the police station, where a warrant was sworn out against him.

JUDGE CLANCY TAKES UP HEARING

the witness stand finishing his evidence under cross-examination by Mr. Forbis for the Boston & Montana company.

The divergence of the streaks or different platings of what the Boston & Montana company calls the No. 7 vein and what the Heinze people call the enargite vein and the 98 vein, on the different levels, came in for attention by Mr. Forbis.

"On what levels are there cross-cuts on the enargite vein?" Mr. Forbis asked.

"On the 7, 8, 9, 10 and 11," the witness replied.

The witness then said that the cross-cut on the 700 level is in granite for 20 feet, till it reaches the first streak of the vein and then in granite again for 20 feet before it reaches the next streak.

"What is the length of the cross-cut to the south on the 800 level?" Mr. Forbis asked.

"About 70 feet," was the reply.

"What is the distance to where it intersects the vein?"

"About 20 feet."

The witness said that one of the streaks was called the 98 vein and the other the enargite vein, and the lawyer said:

"What is the length of the cross-cut between the enargite and the 98?"

"About 25 feet on the 800 level."

"What's the distance between the enargite and the 98 veins on the 1,000 level?"

"About 50 feet," the witness said.

"So the veins diverge going down?"

said Mr. Forbis.

"Yes."

The witness said the cross-cut on the 10 level was farther east, but admitted that it was parallel to the cross-cut on the 9.

"So there is a divergence which is shown on our cross-sections," said Mr. Frank.

"Is it not just an opposite condition that is shown on your maps?" Mr. Forbis wanted to know.

The witness looked over the maps, but could not show that it had the divergence testified to, finally saying that the condition was different in another place. He finished by saying:

"The veins diverge as you go east on the strike. From that it is to be presumed that they converge at the west."

"Well, there is no development showing a convergence at the west?" the lawyer said, and the witness had to admit the fact.

"Do you find the veins coming together anywhere at the west?" the lawyer asked.

"I find the facts as I have testified to," was the best the witness could do.

The witness' evidence then was to the effect that there is 35 feet of granite between the streaks of vein on the 700 level, and that there is still a further divergence of them on the 1,100. It was also developed that there was still another course on the 1,100 level.

The witness said that the entire 1,100 level, 208 feet in length, is on the enargite vein, but that the level is on different streaks. He said that the vein had been stoped on the 1,100 level, and Mr. Forbis said:

"Where has it been stoped there?"

"All along," the witness replied.

"Are there any stopes on the level?"

"Do you mean the sill floor?"

"Yes," said the lawyer.

"No; we didn't stope on the sill floor, because the ore was not good," the witness replied.

"Well, I want to know about the level?"

id Mr. Forbis.

"Well, we didn't stope on the level."

"What's the nearest point above the level that you stoped?"

He Does Not Remember.

The witness said he did not remember, but that he was sure there were stopes 10 floors above the level.

"Well, that's about 70 feet, isn't it?" the lawyer asked.

"Yes," the witness admitted.

"What is the width of the vein on the 100 level?"

"About four or five feet."

"What's the width of the ore in it?"

"There isn't much there."

"Now, Mr. Frank, tell us where you find the enargite vein joining the 24 raise vein?" said Mr. Forbis.

"The 24 raise or still stope raise is on the 24 raise vein, and it shows a streak of ore. This ore, which comes up from below, has been developed by leasers, and it shows here," was the reply.

"How far from the fifth floor of the 70 level is the nearest development on the enargite vein?"

"I don't know the height of the stopes from the 500 level of the Pennsylvania, but I know it would be right under the fifth floor. This raise is up 115 feet above the 500 level of the Pennsylvania," was the reply.

"Is that the nearest working?"

"Yes; coming west."

"This raise would be 45 feet above the 700 of the Rarus?"

"Yes."

"So the highest point is above the top of this raise, and that is above the fifth floor of the 700 level?"

"Yes; but there is a connection in the still stope."

"Have you seen it there?"

"Yes."

"How much west of the raise you spoke about is it?"

"About 60 feet."

"Well, then you project the region between the faults over the raise in order to make the connection?"

The witness had to admit that he did that in order to accomplish the connection that he had seen.

"Have you ever seen any junction between the faults?" was the next question.

"No," was the reply.

"Do you think the enargite vein will go up to the east fault?"

"Yes, it assuredly will, and pass through it," was the reply.

"Then connect with the 24 raise vein?"

"Yes."

state next year with his new political party and make his usual whim about corporation control—for with Heinze anything like corporation control gives him a cold shower, unless it be the control of the United Copper company.
