MONTANA'S BUILDING.

A Description of the Headquarters to Be Built at Chicago.

Galbraith & Fuller, of Missouri, whose plans have been adopted by the state board of World's fair managers, furnish the following interesting description of the Montana building to be erected at Chicago:

The building is designed to cover an area of 64x124 feet and containing suites of parlors, suites of reception rooms, two parlors, two offices, large spaces, vestibule, lobby, corridor, main exhibit gallery, gallery, lavatories or toilet facilities and a restaurant. The position, location and sizes of these rooms and halls can at once be seen on the floor plans.

The entire interior is to be constructed as to conform to the architect's designs, and is used for its beauty and durability. The building will be supported on two-foot square cast-iron columns, cast in steel, manufactured, modeled and moulded on the ground at the building, so as to conform to the different architect's designs, and is used for its beauty and durability.

The interior of the building will be furnished with a complete set of native woods, including pine and tamarac alternately. All the interior wood finishing will be done in oil, polishing and bringing out the natural grain of the different woods.

The main entrance vestibule and lobby will have plastered walls, polished floor, heavy washstands, wall mirrors, urinals, water-closets etc. The walls of the lavatories will be wainscoted in native wood, Venetian doors and Portland cement floors, thoroughly ventilated. The exhibit gallery will have plastered walls, polished floor, heavy washstands, wall mirrors, urinals, water-closets etc.

The main staircases leading to the gallery will have boxed, carved and gilt newels, supplied with stationary and electric lights. The vestibule corridors, rotunda, parlors and reception rooms will be carpeted with wall space for each county in the state, sixteen in all, for the purpose of recording historical events, etc.

The building will be thoroughly wired for electric lights, both around and inside, including the exhibit system, which is considered one of the best now in use.

AN AMERICAN GIRL'S STORY.

Thrilling Account of Chilian Affairs at the time of Balmaceda's Fall.

New York, Nov. 22.—Some interesting details regarding Chilian events immediately following the battles which resulted in the downfall of Balmaceda and his followers are contained in a private letter received from a young American girl who has been living in Valparaiso and Santiago.

The writer has been a member of the household of some of the most influential families in Chile, including that of Balmaceda himself, and also was for a long time with the Edwards family, who were exiled by Balmaceda and afterward allowed to return to Santiago.

The letter is dated Santiago, Sept. 15, referring to the treatment of the defeated leaders of Balmaceda's forces after the fall of Valparaiso, the writer says: "It is sickening to even write it, but I saw that mob fight for a bone, a hand, a small piece of flesh, anything out of the cart containing the bodies of the dead generals; and six officers of the junta looked on and smiled. The generals had done nothing but remain loyal to the government. They were not good men, but they led Balmaceda's army, and after the battle were wounded on the field.

When the enemy found them and demanded their swords they answered 'Generals never surrender.' So they were killed, their bodies stripped, cut to pieces and carried around Valparaiso. Women, mothers with their daughters, looked on and said 'Well done, this is the vengeance of the constitutional party. Catch Balmaceda and roast him.' Speaking of the battles of Concepcion and Vinda, Delmar, the writer, says: "From the top of the house we could see the tents and hear every shot. Thousands of the government troops passed over to the opposition on the morning of the 28th.

After the final battle of Pisilla, the firing continued an hour and a half. Then it ceased entirely. Twenty minutes later the remnants of the artillery dashed by as though the devil was after them, and one shouted up to us 'All is lost.' We immediately signaled the Baltimore and the San Francisco for help and the marine corps soon arrived.

About noon the opposition was routed and the city of Valparaiso was in the hands of the invaders. Never was a town so willing to be taken. Ladies pulled the officers from their homes and begged them to stay. The opposition fought that night. Next morning in various parts of the city 600 men, women and children were found dead. Balmaceda turned the government over to General Bolognesi, who was neutral, and his wife, Minister Egan, and they disappeared. A week ago to-day we returned to Santiago, and as soon as we arrived the Chileans shut us up in the house. We telephoned to Egan and so received assistance. The Chileans wanted to march for Balmaceda, but were not allowed to, but they appointed a guard to watch our going and coming. The guard is still watching.

The last battle occurred Friday. The victorious army forgot the 5,000 dead and wounded at the battle-field, and the first ambulance sent was by ferryboat, on Sunday morning. For ten days I assisted the surgeons of the Baltimore and the San Francisco. Many wounded men were healed. I did not know what they had been fighting for. After each battle the government men who had been wounded were all killed. At one time, in Valparaiso, there were 4,000 wounded congressionalists. When the soldiers went to the dead they found their clothes and guns. For a day or two they dug deep wells, into which the bodies were pitched headlong, but this occasioned too much work, so they piled up the dead, poured arsenic over them and burned them, although called Yankee spies, soon won the good will of every one."

THE INQUIRY IS OVER. Findings in the Matter of the Chilian Assault Will Soon Be Made Public.

New York, Nov. 22.—The Herald's Valparaiso cable says: Judge Foster has concluded a secret examination into the assault upon the seamen of the Baltimore, and the result of the testimony will probably be obtainable this week.

MANY CITIES WANT IT.

Gathering to Select a Meeting Place for the National Republican Convention.

The Representatives of the Various Points Busy Rustling for Supporters.

Each Will Be Allowed an Hour to State Their Case—Quay's Successor to Be Chosen.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The national republican convention meets to-morrow morning. After an organization is effected the resignation of Chairman Quay will be acted on, and some one chosen as his successor.

In the afternoon delegations from the various cities desiring to entertain the national republican convention next year will be heard. A member of the committee to-night said that each delegation will probably be allowed an hour for argument.

The committee will hold until a city has been selected. The Omaha delegation has chosen Judge C. E. Scott to present their claims. Cincinnati will be represented by ex-Gov. Foraker. Major McKinley is expected to-morrow, and his support is expected to materially assist Cincinnati.

Minneapolis will be represented by a number of speakers, each with a brief argument. The same rule will be followed by Detroit. It is now stated that Senator Hisscock will present New York's claims, assisted by John I. Fassett and Senator Hawley, of Connecticut. Committee-man Campbell, of Illinois, will at the proper time announce Chicago's willingness to entertain the convention should the committee decide it is the proper city in which to hold it.

Pittsburg's delegation has not yet arrived, the train having been delayed. San Francisco's claim will be presented by Representative McKim, Francis M. Newland and possibly others. The delegates to-night conceded that there will be no choice on the first ballot, but the various delegations are hopeful that their several cities will be selected on the second.

The hotel lobbies and headquarters of the various delegations were intensely lively to-day. All the delegates are putting forth their best efforts and to-night are comparing with fellow delegates the results of their labors. It is difficult to say which delegation has the greatest confidence, for none are backward in making estimates and presenting statistics to sustain them. Various rumors of deals and combinations between certain sections are afloat, but investigation shows no foundation for them.

Secretary Foster Ill. WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Secretary Foster is confined to bed by an attack of grip resulting from a cold contracted in New York. The attendant physician says the attack is also attributable in part to the need of rest from long continued mental strain, but there is no reason to doubt that the secretary will be soon restored to his usual robust health.

THEY WERE BURIED ALIVE. A Fatal Cave-in on the Brooklyn Conduit Extension.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Nov. 22.—The new conduit extension under course of construction burst, and submerged a number of laborers yesterday afternoon. To add to the horror a large gas pipe running parallel with the conduit broke, filling the place with gas. Four laborers were buried alive. High Murray and two Italians, known only by numbers, were completely smothered. Another Italian was partially covered and before he could be rescued another load of sand caved in, carrying him out of sight. Ernest Pallas was rescued unconscious. While the rescuers were at work another cave-in occurred and Frank Heiney, an Italian was buried. Workmen labored all night and all day at the conduit snoring for the bodies of the buried men. At 3 o'clock this afternoon the first body, that of an Italian laborer, was reached. It was found twenty feet below the surface, standing in an upright position, both hands grasping a shovel. The bodies of the other men have not yet been found.

BROKE THROUGH THE ICE. An Old Man Drowned While on a Fishing Trip Near Livingston.

LIVINGSTON, Nov. 22.—[Special.]—Pat Monahan, an old man of about 70 years, residing in his own home, was drowned yesterday afternoon in the Yellowstone river. Yesterday morning he went out fishing, intending to return about seven o'clock that evening. Not returning at that hour, diligent search was made for him during the night and until three o'clock this afternoon, when his body was found in the water about two miles up the river. It appeared he had attempted to cross the river on the ice and had broken through. His body was found a short distance from the place where he fell in. The funeral services will be held in the Catholic church to-morrow afternoon.
