

The Helena Journal.

VOL. XXXIII.—NO. 338.

HELENA, MONTANA, TUESDAY MORNING, JANUARY 10, 1893.

PRICE FIVE CENTS

GANS & KLEIN

TO-DAY the trial of Vicomte Ferdinand de Lesseps and others implicated in the Panama Canal scandal will begin in Paris. The great Engineer who originated, and supervised the construction of the Suez Canal, is eighty-seven years old, and the ruinous fiasco on the Isthmus which has swallowed up so many millions of French money, has blackened the names of many men prominent in French politics.

Clearance Sale Prior to Inventory.

DR. JAEGER'S

CELEBRATED

Sanitary All-Wool Wear.

ESPECIALLY ADAPTED FOR WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

GANS & KLEIN

TRUMPH OF POPULISTS.

Made Possible in Kansas at the Fall Election, Fulfilled Monday Noon.

Gov. Lewelling, First of His Line, Makes an Address of Length.

Consentance in the Saddle, a New Era Has Dawned—Inauguration in Several Other States.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 9.—The triumph of the populists of Kansas, made possible at the polls in November, was fulfilled to-day. The ceremony took place in the hall of the house of representatives and was witnessed by probably the greatest crowd ever assembled in Kansas on a similar occasion. Precisely at noon the old and new officers appeared and took seats at the right of the stand. At 12:10 John W. Breidenbach, chairman of the people's party state central committee, and master of ceremonies, introduced Rev. W. G. Todd, who invoked divine blessing. Then Gov. Humphrey spoke briefly, congratulating his successor. When Gov. Lewelling appeared the first real hearty demonstration of the occasion was shown. In his address he said in part: "The survival of the fittest" is the government of brutes and reptiles, and such philosophy must give place to government which recognizes human brotherhood to protect the rights of the laborer and producer. Sectional animosities should be forgotten. "The state," he continued, "is greater than party; but the citizen is greater than the state, while the family the citizen produces the priceless jewel of our civilization. The problem is now to make it possible for the citizen to live by his own labor. If government fails of these things it ceases to be of advantage to the citizen. He is absolved from his allegiance and is no longer held by civil compact. But government is not a failure. This is the generation which has come to the rescue. Consentance in the saddle and the grandeur of civilization shall be emphasized by the dawn of a new era, in which the people shall reign, when the withered hand of want shall not be outstretched for charity; when liberty, equality and justice shall have permanent abiding places in this republic. The oath of office was then administered by Chief Justice Horton.

OTHER INAUGURATIONS.
New Officers Take Their Places in Several States.
SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 9.—To-morrow's inaugural ceremonies will probably find assembled at the state capital more prominent Illinois democrats than have gathered at Springfield since the war. Thousands of invitations were sent out. A letter of regret was received from President-elect Cleveland, who says in part: "I concur with you in your estimate of the significance of the occasion. The fact that Illinois, for the first time in forty years, is about to inaugurate a governor of our political faith affords me, in common with all democrats throughout the land, great gratification. I trust that this administration will fully satisfy the high expectations we have of it, and that democratic supremacy in your state may be maintained."
Gov. Stone in the Harness.
JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Jan. 9.—Gov.-elect Stone, in the presence of joint houses of the legislature, was duly inaugurated this afternoon, and the other state officers inducted into their positions. After taking the oath of office Gov. Stone delivered his inaugural address.

INHAUGURATION IN INDIANA.
INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 9.—Clude Matthews was inaugurated governor this afternoon in the presence of the members of the legislature in joint session, and delivered his inaugural address. It dealt exclusively with state matters.
WYOMING SENATORSHIP.
Several Democratic Aspirants for the Seat Now Held by Warren.
CHEYENNE, Jan. 9.—Members of the legislature, which meets to-morrow are in the city, and the senatorial fight is beginning to assume definite proportions. The republicans still have a faint hope of inducing a few populist members to desert their principles and join them in re-electing Warren. But there is a very remote possibility of such an event taking place. The fight on the democratic side to the present time has been waged most vigorously by George W. Baxter and A. J. New. Mr. Baxter was the democratic candidate for governor two years ago and made a good race, but was defeated by Warren. At that time he was the leader of the democratic party in the state, and had been nominated with his party during the last campaign would win hands down in the present fight. He is a large cattle owner and president of the Wyoming Stock association, and refused to stay with his party when it made the stockmen's invasion one of the issues of the campaign. As soon as the election was over he got back into line and is working energetically to capture enough votes to send him to the senate. Mr. Baxter is a wealthy and has powerful political connections in the east.
A. L. New is chairman of the state central committee. He is apparently developing considerable strength. He basis his claim to the senatorship on his conduct of the late campaign. George T. Beck, son of the late senator, is working hard for the place. He is wealthy and has considerable ability. He was luke warm on the invasion question which is hurting him. W. H. Holliday, a member of the state senate, is a strong candidate who preached invasion during the late campaign and stands well with the populists. Judge Samuel T. Coon and A. Beck with a wealthy stockman, both of Evanston, are in the race.
Conservative observers believe that Holliday and Beck will, though not working as persistently as other candidates, stand in the lead with the legislature.

Will Support a Straightout.
TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 9.—The populist leaders at a secret caucus last night decided that in the contest for senator to support "the middle of the road" third party man. "The democrats are very much put out over this action, and it is understood that their five members of the legislature will stand firm, having the balance of power, for a candidate.
A Fortune and No Relatives.
SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 9.—Egbert Judson, capitalist, and interested in several big manufacturing companies, died here to-day aged 81 years. He was a bachelor and had no relatives in this city. He leaves a fortune estimated at several million dollars.

THE NEW HOSPITAL.

Completed at Missoula for the Employees of the Northern Pacific.

MISSOULA, Jan. 9.—[Special.]—The new Northern Pacific hospital, completed, and the furniture is being moved in. It has been built on the site of the one which was destroyed last spring by fire. Though of about the same capacity as the old, it will be a vast improvement in the way of scientific ventilation, general convenience and equipment. In fact, the whole realm of hospital architecture has been ransacked in the search for ideas and modern improvements.
No expense has been spared where anything could be added which would conduce to the comfort of the patients, and, as a whole, it is representative of the latest scientific advance in its line.
Dr. J. V. Buckley, chief surgeon of the western division of the Northern Pacific, together with his assistant, Dr. B. W. Sippy, and the hospital steward, David Block, personally supervised the young men and saw that they were carried out on scientific principles, in all of which they received the hearty co-operation of the general manager of the road, W. S. Meilen, who is also president of the beneficial association.

The building is frame and consists of a two and a half story center flanked on the east and west by two long wings, thus giving the structure a long frontage. The architecture is simple and plain.
The building is heated by steam and equipped with the Sturtevant system of ventilation. The ward rooms and apartments for surgeons and employees are provided with electric, bath rooms and all modern conveniences. A commodious smoking and reading room, a large library, which will be supplied liberally with scientific and literary volumes and current reading matter.
The appointments throughout the building are almost luxurious and the whole structure may be considered the most complete for the purpose for which it was designed in the west.

JAWED A FEW ROUNDS.

Corbett Beats Goddard in a Match With Long and Active Tongues.
CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Champion pugilist James J. Corbett and Joe Goddard, of Australia, had a wordy war in the lobby of the Grand Pacific this evening, which an interested crowd thought for a moment would develop into a physical encounter. The whole thing was caused by Goddard offering a verbal challenge to Jim. When the latter strove to accommodate him by his young brother, Goddard walked up and opened the conversation. Boon he exclaimed abruptly, "I want you to fight me."
"I want you to fight me," exclaimed the champion, sizing Joe up with a look that made the crowd laugh, and caused Goddard to grow pale with anger. "Why should you offer to fight me? You must know that you are unworthy of consideration and I have fought and whipped Jackson and Miller. I'm champion and shall not accept a challenge from the representative of any nation except in its declared champion."
"You're in it," said Goddard, "any one could have licked Sullivan."
"I won't hear one word said against Sullivan," retorted Corbett. "For years he held the championship; whipped all comers and retained it for a long time. No Englishman and no Australian ever proved his equal." This tribute to the dethroned king stirred the heart of the assembled crowd, which sent up a cheer of approval.
"Go," said Corbett, "go with your spurs as others have done before you. Try to enter into competition with man of the rank. I am now the defender of pugilism in the country, and in taking your offer as I do I'm doing that which is in the best interests of my country as far as the prize ring is concerned. I propose to fight with you if he will give the opportunity. After some comment, Jackson, champion of Australia. Then if you have anything to say it will be your turn. But if you will make a match to fight me, I shall sign articles on the part of the promoter to sign yours to fight me. I shall put money up to show my good faith in the matter."
The crowd cheered itself hoarse and Corbett fired a parting shot, saying: "You acknowledge Jackson, the Australian champion. Well, go and lick him before you think of approaching me."

PROFITS OF THE READING.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 9.—At the Reading meeting to-day the report of President McLeod for the year ended Nov. 30, 1892, showed a net profit of $3,157,147. The net profit of the coal and iron company for the year makes a total for all of $3,151,486. The report refers to the loss of the Lehigh valley railroad system and says the net traffic earnings of this system have already increased about $1,000,000 since its acquisition by the R. R. Co.
A dispatch from Trenton, N. J., says the New Jersey Central Railroad company has withdrawn from the Reading combine and hereafter will be operated independently. The same day before the agreement with the Reading and the Lehigh Valley. The authorities there decline to speak about the matter. What influences moved the Central to take this step are not known, but undoubtedly the fear of a merger with the legislature had something if not all to do with it.

LIVES WERE IN PERIL.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The six story building occupied by Doll & Co., furniture dealers, burned this morning. The loss is a quarter of a million. Three hundred people who were employed in the structure escaped, though many lives were in peril for a time, as at the first alarm there was a panic and the exits became choked.
Fire in a Colorado Camp.
CREsted BUTTE, Col., Jan. 9.—At an early hour this morning fire broke out in Telford & Carlisle's store and because of the defective water supply rapidly spread until the entire block of frame buildings was destroyed. Thirteen firms were burned out and several families lost everything. Total loss, $70,000.

LARGEST SHOE HOUSE IN OHIO.

TOLLEDO, Jan. 9.—Dawey, Rogers & Co., the largest wholesale shoe house in Ohio, failed to-day. Liabilities $400,000, assets $150,000. Several city banks are said to be heavily involved. The failure is said to be due to a disagreement of partners, resulting in the withdrawal of a large amount of the company's capital.

RANSACKED A COURT HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Burglars entered the Fairfax court house, blew open the safe, scattered the records over the floor and burned some. The safe contained George Washington's will, but the burglars evidently overlooked it, for it was undisturbed.
Corporations Sued for Taxes.
SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 9.—Suits was commenced to-day by the attorney general against the Central Pacific railroad and several other companies to recover taxes levied for the year 1892, aggregating with penalties, about one million dollars.

WANT IT PUT THROUGH.

Opponents of the Sherman Law Pushing a Bill for Its Repeal.

Provisions of the Measure Ordered Reported by the Committee on Banking.

The Subject of Silver Purchases and Coinage Discussed in the Senate—Other Capital News.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—The house committee on banking and currency to-day by a decisive vote pushed the Andrew banking and bullion purchase repeal bill, together with the Cate amendment for the coinage of silver bullion now in the treasury, through the committee and ordered it reported to the house. This was done in pursuance of the plan of the opponents of the Sherman silver law to get the repeal bill on the calendar at the earliest possible moment, in order to work out practical legislation this session if possible. Another significant feature of the meeting was that a motion by Cox, of Tennessee, to carry out the state bank plank in the Chicago platform was defeated eleven to one. Townsend, of Colorado, offered the Stewart free coinage bill. This was voted down. Townsend also moved that the committee permit those in favor of free coinage an opportunity to be heard before the committee and that the secretary of the treasury, director of the mint, and others be asked to appear. The majority is evidently opposed to any delay and the motion was defeated eight to four. The members who voted in favor of the bill were Bacon, Wike, Cate, Dickerson, Sperry, Cobb, Russell, of Connecticut, and Walker, of Massachusetts. Those voting against it were Cox, of Tennessee, Kendall and Townsend, Brooks, of Pennsylvania, not voting. The members not present were Grant, of Ohio, Busby, and Henderson, of Illinois.

The bill agreed upon provides that national banks, upon deposit of interest-bearing United States bonds, shall be entitled to receive circulating notes to the full par value of the bonds deposited. At present it is the limit, Section 462 of the act of 1862, that the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of treasury notes hereinafter provided for, and coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the use of the treasury as speedily as the demands of the treasury may require. The payment on the national bank circulation from one-half to one-quarter of one per cent each half year. Section three repeals the Sherman silver bullion purchase act. The secretary of the treasury shall coin into silver dollars as much of the