

LIKE THE CASE OF BYERS.

The Supreme Court of the United States Makes an Important Ruling.

It Was in the Matter of Lord Beresford's Alleged Son.

And It Will Regulate Judge Knowles in Deciding the Case Here—Other Court Proceedings.

Judge Knowles, of the United States circuit court, yesterday wrote for a copy of the opinion of the United States supreme court in the case of the Sidney Lascelles alias Walter S. Beresford. The judge wanted it for use in the case of William Byers, who is asking for relief from prosecution in the district court on a different charge from that for which he was extradited from Kansas. Byers was brought back from Kansas by City Marshal Galvin to answer a charge of forgery. He was convicted in the district court and sentenced to one year in the penitentiary. A new trial was asked for. Meantime County Attorney No'an filed an information against Byers, charging him with larceny as baiter. Byers' counsel contended that having been brought back on one charge he could not be tried on another. Judge Knowles heard the arguments last week, but reserved his decision pending the settlement of the Beresford case by the supreme court. The Beresford case was decided on Monday. Beresford claimed to be the son of Lord Beresford, and out a wide swath in New York and other places on the strength of it, and in every instance somebody else's foot on the bill. New York had not gotten "to" him when Georgia people awakened to the fact that he was a swindler. He was taken back from New York on requisition papers charging one offense, but on his arrival efforts were made to try him for other offenses. The same claim was set up in his case as in that of Byers. The supreme court's decision is to the effect that Beresford can be tried in Georgia on other charges than that for which he was extradited, and that without being first returned to New York. Similar cases have been decided before in the same way by the lower courts. The decision by the United States supreme court is the first by the highest tribunal in the land. Judge Knowles will be guided by it in determining the Byers case.

A QUESTION OF TAXATION.

It Comes From Custer County to the United States Court.

The case of Custer county vs. W. J. Anderson was argued in the United States court before Judge Knowles yesterday. J. W. Strevell represented the county and E. C. Day argued for Anderson. The case in one transferred from the district court of Custer county, and involves the question of the right of an assessor to list property for purposes of taxation, on information and belief, after the owner has refused to make return under oath of what he owns. The county treasurer of Custer sought to collect $1,780 for taxes for 1892, and $178 penalty for failure to pay on time, also $1,542 for 1893 taxes and $163 for expenses. Anderson refused to pay and the treasurer seized some of his cattle on the Crow reservation. Anderson's cowboys recovered the cattle from the treasurer and his assistants by force, and drove them off. Then the suit was brought.

The only point at issue is as to whether the county assessor can list property on information and belief when the owner refuses to make return under oath; or whether, as claimed by Anderson, he must do it after personal inspection and appraisal. The case involves the construction of the revenue act of Montana of 1887, and subsequent amendments.

Judgments by Default.

The following judgments by default were entered in the district court yesterday: John Mitchell vs. Whalen & Grant, $328.50; T. P. Fuller vs. Whalen & Grant, $548.61; Albert G. Swertzer vs. Geo. B. Diehl et al., $1,703.

BEAUTY IN TAG ENDS.

A Hat That Was a Sensation and a Marvel.

One girl I know has a marvel of a bonnet. It is a bit of lace in a butterfly knot, a gleam of a jewel and a distracting fringe of tiny flowers, so delicately woven that they seem to be strung upon the gleaming threads of her bright hair. The whole is held on by a fillet like band under the knot of hair at the back, and is the sort of thing that simply must have come from Paris. So much was said about it by a party of her friends one day that finally she remarked that if the lot of them would go home with her she would give them a chance to see the thing off, so they could get some sort of pattern if possible. So she began to take off the hat.

"I always hate so," she murmured, as she removed the jewel and stuck it on her pin cushion. They began to gasp. She took off the knot of lace, untied it and smoothed it out. "These old-fashioned lace tippets are such useful things," she remarked. Then she began pulling out odd bits of tiny flowers from here and there, and then she announced, "Well, it's off!"

Of course the fillet remained, but that was evidently a part of her hair dressing and had nothing to do with the bonnet. In fact nothing had anything to do with the bonnet. It was just tag ends fastened on to look like hair. But then some women are that way. The world is very likely to call them useless women and blame them because they cannot make their own clothes and darn stockings, but if it comes to that it costs much less to get plain sewing done than it does to create a French hat right out of nothing on your head, a bonnet that you could not buy for thirty dollars. It is needless to say that the girls didn't feel that they had been taught the pattern.

Not all of our original such a device; indeed, a great many women cannot trim their own hats, or care to, to paraphrase the fox's remark about the grapes, but the one pointed is not difficult. A frame should be covered with velvet, changing from blue to yellow, and the crown trimmed with narrow rolls of velvet from top to bottom. At the left side an Alsatian bow with four loops should be placed, from which start a bow of orange satin ribbon, and an egret.

All hats purchased this week at Fowler's Cash Store will be trimmed free.

DEATH GOT THERE FIRST

A Pardoned Convict Expires Before Action Could be Taken by the Board.

Edward Brown Was Dying, but Wanted to Die a Free Man.

Governor Rickards Granted His Request, but the Grim Reaper Arrived Several Weeks Too Soon.

Edward D. Brown was convicted at Great Falls on Oct. 27, 1890, of the crime of rape committed in Cascade county, and sentenced to five years in the penitentiary at Deer Lodge. When admitted to the penitentiary Brown was a robust, hearty looking man. About a year ago, however, he began to show signs of failing health, and as he wasted gradually away the doctors said he was suffering from cancer of the stomach. He was removed to the prison hospital and everything possible done to relieve him. The case was pronounced incurable, and, knowing this, Brown asked to be allowed to die outside the walls of a prison. Attorney General Haskell looked into the matter and recommended to the governor that it was a case for executive clemency. Gov. Rickards, during a recent visit to Deer Lodge, also inquired about Brown, and saw him in the hospital. He was satisfied the man's days were few on earth, and as he says in his letter to the board of pardons, "it is an act of mercy that he should be granted a free and unconditional pardon." The governor recommended this on March 23, just a week ago. The board of pardons set the time for the hearing on April 27. On Monday morning Brown died and was buried the same afternoon.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

Patti Rosa's engagement at Ming's opera house next Friday and Saturday and Saturday matinee will afford one of the most delightful events of the season. This charming comedienne is always welcome, and those who go to see her performances do so with the assurance that she will afford them a rich fund of clean, clever and wholesome entertainment. She will be seen here in "Dolly Varden" and "Miss Dixie." An exchange, referring to her performance of "Dolly Varden," says: "What a rattling bubble of contagious fun Patti Rosa is! She is changeable as an April day and keeps Hamilton's audience either in tears or shouts for two hours that seem all too short. She has such a bright, expressive face, happy laugh and so many fascinating little tricks of head and foot, that every word, kick, rob or shriek is laden with magnetic originality. Her company is capital and works with a hearty vim and sympathy that makes the show really splendid."

"Joe Cawthorn, as Otto Wagner, is fine, and his accordion specialty is equal to Dutch Daly's. Gerald Griffin is entertaining in a character sketch, and Will Mandeville, a good-looking young fellow, sings and acts exceptionally well. He makes a great hit in Charles K. Harris' pretty little song, "Kiss and Let's Make Up." Patti Rosa is simply past describing in a German dialect song and dance, with "Overture de deuce duck," she is inimitable and electric, and there is a hurricane of laughter loose at the Grand Opera House, which seems given over to innocuous hilarity for the season."

"The Prodigal Father."

Ming's opera house was well filled last night, and to-night there should be standing room only, if a good attraction played by artists has drawing power. The comedy, "The Prodigal Father," was the attraction. It is a little out of the usual run of comedies, in that there is not an exaggeration of peculiar and ludicrous incidents. No better company has ever played in Ming's opera house than that which gave "The Prodigal Father" last night. George W. Denham has few equals and no superiors in old man characters, and as Stanley Lodge, the ancient of Oldport, he captured the house. An equal favorite was Blanche Chapman Ford, who as Dolie Bonde, late of the Adamos Eden, proved a match for the Antocrat. G. C. Boniface, Jr., Walter Thomas, George Gaston, Frank Caldwell, Cecil Kingstone, Cora Maey and Hope Rose are all artists. The o is not a "stick" in the company.

Many of the audience went especially to see Carmelita, the celebrated Spanish dancer. She came on between the second and third acts and illustrated the grace of her country women. The dances are not of the high kicking order, and the feet and limbs do not cut so much figure in them as do the body and arms. Carmelita was recalled several times, as were all the players.

There will be a matinee this afternoon and the engagement will close this evening.
