A FRIEND

Speaks through the Boothbay (Me.) Register, of the beneficial results he has received from a regular use of Ayer's Pills. He says: "I was feeling sick and tired and my stomach seemed all out of order. I tried a number of remedies, but none seemed to give me relief until I was induced to try the old reliable Ayer's Pills. I have taken only one box, but I feel like a new man. I think they are the most pleasant and easy to take of anything I ever used, being so finely sugar-coated that even a child will take them. I urge upon all who are in need of a laxative to try Ayer's Pills. They will do good."

A PAIR OF SLY ROGUES.

Clever System of Swindling Explots of Edward Howe and Martha Stiles.

His Victims Were Harvard Graduates, Located All Over the Country.

Her Specialty Was G. A. R. Posts, and Her Method a "Drummer Boy" Story—Grief at Last.

The recent arrest in New York city of Martha E. Stiles, alias Kate Clayton, was the means of throwing full light upon the operations of the cleverest pair of swindlers known in American police annals. The other member of the precious duo is Edward Robbins Howe, whose arrest in Chicago for defrauding various Harvard alumni last December caused a sensation and who now languishes in the Cook county jail awaiting trial on 13 indictments.

The methods of Howe and his wife—for such has Martha Stiles proved to be—stand out as the most unique and singularly successful ever employed by cunning rogues. Their victims are numbered in every large city in the United States, and for 20 years they have lived in luxury from money obtained of obliging collegians. Howe made the study of the Harvard alumni his life work and has the history of every graduate since 1850 at his tongue's end. He has richly profited from his close knowledge of the Harvard body graduate and has traded upon its generosity and good nature to the extent of thousands of dollars.

Howe was well acquainted with members of Harvard clubs in towns the country over, and he bluffed from one to another with the facility of a drummer and always left victims behind. He was in the habit of registering at the best hotels in the places he visited and then calling upon the Harvard men there. The story he would unfold was invariably like this: He had just arrived in the city and was on his way to a distant town, where pressing business engagements were already overdue. The first night of his stay he a good position in the world of science. His family have made repeated efforts to reclaim him, but have utterly failed. As to the ultimate punishment of Howe and his wife, there are enough indictments against them to give them prison homes for a century to come should they escape the clutches of the law now.

Luck in orchids.
Among a lot of the commonest orchids some years ago was found a plant similar to the rest in every characteristic except the color of its stem, which was green instead of brown. When it flowered, the bloom should have been green, but it was golden, and the plant became in consequence practically priceless. It was divided into two parts, and one was sold to Baron Schroeder for 75 guineas, the other to Mr. Measures for 100 guineas. This latter piece was several times divided, selling for 100 guineas each time, but Baron Schroeder's piece was never mutilated and is now worth 1,000 guineas! It would bring that sum, say the authorities, in the public sale room.

The good fortune of orchid buyers is sometimes remarkable. Bulbs which have not flowered and give no sign of peculiarity are often treasured in disguise. An amateur once gave 3 francs on the continent for an odontoglossum. It proved to be an unknown variety and was resold for a sum exceeding £100. Another variety, bought with a lot at less than a shilling each, was resold for 72 guineas to Sir Trevor Lawrence, who has one of the finest collections, if not the finest, in England.

A Cattleya, developing a new and beautiful flower, at once advanced in value from a few shillings to 250 guineas. It was afterward sold in five pieces for 700 guineas. Simply because its flower has proved to be white instead of the normal color, 280 guineas have been given for a Cattleya, and hundreds of guineas are available at this present moment over and over again for rare or extraordinary orchids either in private collections or in the market. A plant no bigger than a tulip bulb has been sold for many times its weight in gold, and a guinea leaf is a common and often inadequate estimate of the worth of rarities.—Chambers' Journal.

Worn Out a Harness.

In the harness of every day business workmen and women wear out prematurely. For some of us it is not easy, for others, again, it is impossible to get out of harness. It is the inflexible yoke, that only forged unbreakable shackle of imperative necessity to us, that we cannot do without. The weight of it often bows many of us into the grave before our time, but it is undoubtedly true that there is a means of rendering the burden less onerous, and of mitigating the ailments that unrelenting toil—especially of a sedentary kind—has a tendency to produce. Overworked clerks in counting houses, mill operatives, bookkeepers, typewriters and others testify to the reviving, restorative effects of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and its power of renewing physical and mental energy when overtaxed and on the verge of collapse. Druggists, failing vision, rheumatic, bowled and kidney complaints yield to this benedictine medicine, which is a preventive of malaria and counteracts the effects of exposure to inclement weather.

Egyptian Styles of Writing.
The Egyptians had four separate and distinct styles or forms of writing—the hieroglyphic, the hieratic, the enchorial and the Coptic. The hieroglyphic was probably in use as early as the year 4000 B. C. and at first was made up entirely of pictures. About the year 2000 B. C. the hieratic form or style was introduced. In this the picture hieroglyphics were greatly simplified, finally developing into forms purely linear. The enchorial form of writing was in use among the Egyptians from about the year 700 B. C. until about the year 300 A. D., and was still a further simplification of the earlier forms, which finally developed into the alphabetic form known as the Coptic.—St. Louis Republic.

When the blood is loaded with impurities, the whole system becomes disordered. This condition of things cannot last long without serious results. In such cases, a powerful alterative is needed, such as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It never fails, and has no equal.

Soap Stilled the Stormy Sea.
During a storm in the Adriatic Captain Gal of the steamship Senegal, Messageries Francaises, made an experiment of the effect of soap water in arresting the fury of the waves. He dissolved six pounds of soap in 70 quarts of water and poured the mixture on some uncasted ropes, down which it ran slowly into the sea. In this way a zone of smooth soapy water was formed around the steamer of about 40 feet in extent, against which the waves broke without being able to reach the steamer. This was while the vessel was lying to, but when she began to move the zone of quiet water moved with her until the engines had made 45 revolutions.—London News.

"It has cured others and will cure you" is the motto only of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The motto also is the medicine and the medicine the fact that it has cured such multitudes of others?

THE STAMP OF STYLE.

Crushed strawberried red is the favorite color in wash silks used for the blouse waist.

Plaid silks are usurping the place which moire has held so long and have become very popular for dressy gowns.

White dresses are effectively trimmed with yellow lace and insertions and are particularly pretty made over yellow silk.

A show which bids fair to become popular for outdoor dressy functions is a Louis Quinze with a cut steel buckle. It is made in different kinds of leather.

Parasols to match the tiny checked silks so much in fashion now are the proper thing, and give an opportunity to possess a simple parasol which is not extensively duplicated.

Openwork embroidery is fast gaining favor and is now done on colored chambray as well as white and ecru mill. It is used extensively on one gown, sometimes forming the entire front of the skirt.

Among the delicate colored organdies so pretty for summer gowns there are bright poppy reds and a dark navy blue. The red gowns are very striking trimmed with black lace, and the blue is pretty adorned with white.

A very important accessory of dress for the chic young woman as well as those who are not so young is the waistcoat, without which summer outfit is sadly incomplete. This fancy has grown and multiplied into a craze.—New York Sun.
