Frank Hunter's Four Brothers Are Coming Out Here for Revenga.

They're After the Men Who Killed Frank at Medicine Lodge.

Story of a Brutal Murder Which Took Place in Beaverhead on August 12th Last.

Four stalwart sons of James Hunter, of 514 East Fourteenth street, New York, are, according to the Recorder, of that city, about to start for Montana, bent upon avenging the murder of Frank C. Hunter, who was killed on the afternoon of Sunday, Aug. 12 last, at Medicine Lodge, Beaverhead county, by desperadoes, Frank, the murdered man, the brother of the four avengers, was a native New Yorker. James Hunter, the father, who is now the proprietor of a grocery store in East Fourteenth street, was for years a school teacher in New York, and has many friends. All four of the Hunters are stalwart, muscular and courageous young men; each has had considerable practice with rifle and revolver, and each is said to be a good marksman.

Frank C. Hunter, the murdered man, was 31 years of age at the time of his assassination. He was one of a family of nine brothers. Hunter owned a ranch in Wyoming, which he had purchased from the government. While there he married a Miss Price, a pretty and buxom young woman, whom he had known for many years. He settled in the vicinity of Red Rock, Mont., opened a saloon at Medicine Lodge, and soon became one of the most popular and trusted citizens of the village. Hunter lived with his wife and family in a house about twenty rods distant from his saloon. As the murder occurred on Sunday the saloon was closed at the time. The alleged assassins, for whom the four brothers will go in search, are Paul Metcalf and A. F. Harness. A Medicine Lodge cowboy, known as "Irish Jack" is to be punished for participation in the crime.

Metcalf and Harness are cowboys, the murder was committed about 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Metcalf and Harness, having armed themselves with rifles and revolvers, had mounted their mustangs and started out for a high old time. When they reached Medicine Lodge, they at once headed for Hunter's saloon. On the way they picked up "Irish Jack." The cowboys, on arriving at the saloon, proceeded to break in the windows and doors by throwing empty beer kegs through them. Hunter started out to protect his property.

When Hunter reached the saloon the cowboys had already broken in and were making free with his liquors and beer. On his entering the saloon, Metcalf immediately covered him with his revolver and ordered him to go behind the bar and "set 'em up" for them. There was nothing for Hunter to do but comply. He served them several rounds of drinks, with the muzzle of Metcalf's revolver constantly presented to his head. There was a telephone in the saloon connecting with his house. While Metcalf and his comrades were pouring down the drinks, Hunter seized the opportunity to ring the telephone bell, in the hope of summoning assistance. The cowboys detected him in the act, and, realizing his purpose, it is said, shot him down in cold blood. They then, it is alleged, rifled and robbed the body, and, mounting their horses, rode off. Mrs. Hunter and a young French woman, who had been dining with them, alarmed by the ringing of the telephone bell and the pistol shots, hastened to the scene. They found Irish Jack sitting on the doorstep, bleeding from a wound in his head, and Hunter lying on his face on the floor behind the counter, shot through the left temple, alive, but unconscious. Two shots had penetrated his brain.

Jack said that Metcalf had struck him over the head with the butt end of his revolver before shooting Hunter, and had done so because he had accused him of drinking too much whisky. Metcalf and Harness changed horses, got provisions and a large supply of ammunition and started off for the mountains. Since then no trace of them has been seen. Sheriff Hamilton, of Beaverhead county, and a posse started in pursuit of the murderers an hour after the crime was committed, but their pursuit proved fruitless.

"We are going west," said the oldest of the four avengers, "fully determined to hunt these men down. If they resist us when we find them and find them we will—we will have no compunction in shooting them down, and will feel that we are thoroughly justified in so doing."

Specimen Cases.

R. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with neuralgia and rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklin's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Spicker, Calais, O., had five large fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklin's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold by Parson-D'Aeshel Drug Co.
