Special Sale of FURS.

LADIES—In high class Furs of every kind it has been exceeded by all competent judges that for workmanship, taste, style, progressive ideas as to the "living present," a total absence of old fogeyism, and above all for a downright ledge-hammer, low price system of Fur retailing, Sands Bros. have no equal. Here is a sample of what we are doing this week: A line of fine Alaska Sealskin Jackets, London dye, 30 inches long, very best quality, Marten collar and edging. The furriers get $250, $275 and $300 for this same quality—Sands Bros. will sell this week only, for $167.50. We sell no "trashy Furs,"—we guarantee absolute satisfaction. Our Fur reputation is too valuable to us to risk it by handling spurious Furs. We sell only the best Furs, which are always the cheapest in the end. For "Dependable Furs," Sands Bros. will at all times be your headquarters. For "Fur Honesty," Sands Bros. are proverbial. For "Low Prices," Sands Bros. are the "Originators of Low Prices." FETE OF FLOWERS.

Concluded from Fifth Page.

best the house afforded. The rooms were delightfully decorated, the blinds drawn and the gas lighted, throwing a mellow radiance over all. There were roses and chrysanthemums in profusion, garlands of smilax and potted plants. From one corner of the music room, the Breadwater orchestra poured delicious strains of music, and in the evening alternated with Higgins' band outside in musical effort. From the music room the guests were shown into the dining room, where the climax of beautiful decoration was reached, in brilliant yellow, green and white. Colored waiters served the guests with all the urbanity which is characteristic of that polished fraternity. In the front drawing room Mr. Cruse received his guests, and every one who entered that hospitable door, had gracious and kindly thoughts toward the pleasant host who had done so much toward making Montana a free state. Mr. Cruse was assisted by his niece, who was gowned in pale blue silk, over dress of striped silk, trimmed in white lace. Other assistants during the afternoon and evening were Mrs. Lynch, of Butte, black silk, lace and jet trimming, decollete; Miss Hamilton, of Brooklyn, blue silk; Miss White, of Minneapolis, blue crepe and pink lace trimming; Miss Davenport, pink crepe, velvet trimming; Miss Murphy, extra silk, bands of lace trimming; Miss A. Murphy, pink dotted silk, velvet ribbon; Miss Cullen, pink satin; Miss Ashby, pink satin; Miss Rosenbaum, yellow and black silk; Miss McChinnell, blue chiffon trim; Mrs. Wallace, gray satin, steel trimming; Mrs. Quinn, black silk and jet.

The reception was a happy occasion, given in the spirit of true western cordiality, and one long to be remembered. A golden wedding with pontifical high mass was celebrated at the Cathedral Saturday morning. The aged couple who had this day reached their fiftieth mile stone together were Mr. and Mrs. Valentine Saul, of Fifth avenue. The service was attended by many friends and was very impressive. Six of their grandchildren, little girls in white dresses, preceded them, strewing their way down the aisle with white flowers; the two foremost ones carrying golden scepters. Bishop Brondel celebrated the mass, blessing the kneeling couple, and afterwards preached a short sermon in both English and German. At the conclusion, the procession, in carriages and on foot, headed by a band, moved away from the church to the house, where substantial refreshments were served all the friends. It was a happy time and many congratulations were showered on the couple on the occasion.

The auditorium Monday night presented a gala appearance and never looked so handsome. Its walls and pillars were festooned with patriotic drapery, evergreens and flags; overhead, inverted bells, in the same drapery shaded the electric lights, and the stage was gorgeous in color and flowers. A large arch of triumph was placed in front, containing the words "Montana's Victory," in large white letters. All this decoration was the result of thought and labor, and the committee who did the work deserve much credit for their fine ideas so artistically and skillfully carried out. The committee were Misses Cruse and Barbour, Mesdames Sellman, Child, Flower, Wallace and Wheeler, Dr. Foote, and Messrs. Metten, Wheaton, Brandegee, Peairs, Shaw and Jones.
