

HE WAS TO FOLLOW.

Mannie Schwartz Meant to Travel on a Freight Train to Great Falls to Save Expense.

HIS WIFE WENT ON THE EXPRESS.

Early in the Morning He is Found Unconscious Near the Trestle and Dies Some Hours Later.

Mannie Schwartz, aged about 28 years, who travels about the country with a variety troupe, of which his wife is one, was found unconscious about half past 2 yesterday morning in the bed of Lyndale avenue at the Montana Central crossing. J. H. Kilgore, foreman of the switching crew which was working in that vicinity, saw the man lying in the road and called his companions, W. D. Purdy and William Thompson. Word was sent to the police and Schwartz was removed to the city hall. There Dr. Rockman and Dr. Steele attended him. He was apparently dying. He bore no external marks of violence, but was bleeding from the nostrils and from the right ear. About 8 o'clock he rallied somewhat and was removed to St. Peter's hospital. He died a few minutes after reaching there.

Coroner Pleasants summoned a jury of inquest, which met in the afternoon. From one of the witnesses, Joseph McDonald, who had known Schwartz about six years, it was learned that Schwartz was from San Francisco, where he has relatives who are well off, but who have ceased to have anything to do with him because he married outside of his faith. His wife's stage name is Ida Warren. Schwartz was a barkeeper and not a variety performer. He traveled around with the troupe of which his wife is a member, getting work at his business when he could. The troupe, which consisted of Ida Warren, W. F. Baker and the latter's wife, whose stage name is Mattie Shelby, came from Billings on Monday, with Schwartz. The four took dinner uptown and then started for the Montana Central depot to take the train for Great Falls, where the troupe were to open in a variety hall that night.

From other witnesses it was learned that Schwartz remained behind when the other three took the train, preferring to travel on a freight train and save expense. He was seen about the yards several times during the evening, and made inquiries as to the time the freight train left. Along about 2 o'clock he was met by Acting Yardmaster Kilgore near the Lyndale trestle. He asked Kilgore where the train was, and was told it was standing near the roundhouse ready to pull out. Kilgore was superintending the switching of some cars at the time, which brought him back to the trestle shortly after meeting Schwartz. The light of his lantern showed him the body of a man lying in the road below the trestle. On examination it proved to be the man he had been talking to. What took place from that time until Schwartz died has already been told.

The railroad men who were before the coroner's jury had a theory that Schwartz had started across the trestle to go to the roundhouse to catch the freight train; that he either missed his footing, or hearing a shifting engine coming with some cars, stepped to one side and fell over. The fall was about twelve feet.

There was no difference of opinion among the doctors as to the cause of death, all agreeing that it was from an injury to the brain. But there was some difference as to what might possibly have caused the injury. Dr. Rockman said the injury might have been produced by a fall, though it might have been caused by a small bullet entering the brain by way of the ear. When he was called to see Schwartz about half past 3 there was a hemorrhage of the brain, which oozed through the right ear. Dr. W. L. Steele, who was called in an hour and a half later, said he found a fracture of the skull over the right ear and the brain was oozing out. Dr. Steele did not express any opinion as to what might have caused the injury. Dr. W. J. Fallard, who examined the body, said the injury was such as might have been caused by the man falling from a height of eight feet or more. There were no special marks about the head, except that blood was coming from the right ear and nostrils. The doctor had heard it intimated that the man might have been shot. There were no indications of it. It was decided to have an autopsy to settle definitely the character of the injury, and the inquest was adjourned to this morning.

From what is learned from those who knew Schwartz and his wife there is every reason to believe that the couple were much attached to each other. Schwartz had given up his family on account of his wife. Some months ago when she was in Butte performing in a variety show, Schwartz, who was in Portland, sent her a telegram that he would kill himself unless he got money to come to her. As he showed up in Butte soon afterward, it is inferred that she sent him the money. When they were in Helena together on Monday they seemed to be in very good spirits and on the best of terms. The wife was telegraphed to yesterday at Great Falls. She will take charge of the body.

Schwartz was a fine looking young man, of medium height and robust frame, and apparently in the best of health. On his right arm he had his name tattooed in ink, and above it, apparently at a later date, the first name of his wife, "Ida."

Comfort in Traveling is Everything. Everybody knows that the Northern Pacific is the most comfortable and best equipped line between Helena and all points east and west. It is the only line running through dining cars, Pullman standard and tourist sleeping cars, and through coaches between Helena and St. Paul. No waiting by this line at junction points for connecting trains, which are subject to material delays. Having the short line, and slightly slower time, passengers are sure of making eastern connections.

Take the Northern Pacific and avoid a change of cars and vexatious lay-overs.

SUNSHINE AND SHADOW.

Dr. James Reid Delivers the First Lecture of the Unity Course.

The opening lecture in the course given by the Unity club was delivered last evening by President James Reid, of the Agricultural college, at Grand Army hall. A crowded house greeted the speaker, and his subject, "Sunlight and Shadows," was handled in a scholarly and eloquent style. President Reid spoke of the uplifting of character through adversity, the "shadows" of life, and said that he did not believe in being entirely optimistic any more than he did in being absolutely pessimistic. The lecture was an able one, showing great breadth of thought upon scholarship. In part Dr. Reid said: "Human life is a continuous blending and mingling of sunlight and shadow as it passes through all the transitions of joy and sorrow, happiness and misery, pleasure and pain. There comes into every life the serious and the humorous, the sublime and the grotesque, the pathetic and the ludicrous. It has been truly said that life is a comedy to those who think and a tragedy to those who feel. There is no life so bright or so filled with joy that shadows do not come into it. There falls upon each the sunshine and shadows and both go to make life what it is. They fall upon some charity. They bind and meet in other lines and produce bitterness and wretchedness."

The lecturer then referred to the fact that out of similar experiences and environments come characters as dissimilar; that out of the home nest, and nurtured by the same loving hand, goes forth the strong, noble, virtuous man, and the other who has become a vagabond and an outcast. It was one of the mysteries that would never be solved. "No nation of the past," he continued, "could boast such a degree of intelligence as that which exists among all classes of our people. But our social and national life is not all sublime. Around the horizon hang heavy, ominous storm-clouds which may burst in fury upon us. The antagonism which exists between capital and labor contains within it elements of danger. Men were never so restless as to-day. They never felt so keenly the limitations of their lives. With the spread of intelligence there is a universal longing and reaching out for improvement of conditions. Throughout our social life are organized antagonisms. There is hope in a noble discontent which is guided aright but when misguided by the sophistry of selfish demagogues it may work untold injury."

The speaker closed by alluding to the danger involved in the tendency to concentration. Another danger briefly alluded to was the pursuit of wealth as an end of life in that it is destructive of high ideals and demoralizes character.

NOTHING MISSING.

And the Only Damage the Thief Did Was to the Door.

Some one entered the store room of the Jackson music house, in the Montana club building, late Monday night or very early yesterday morning, and attempted to effect an entrance into the main salesroom. Just how the thief got into the storeroom is unknown, as the windows and the one door leading to the street were all locked. There is a trap-door in the floor of the room, but the would-be thief could not possibly have come through it, as a heavy table and chest stood upon it. The only supposition is that the party had a key to the door, although it is provided with a Yale lock.

The thief attempted to open the door leading into the salesroom. He poked the key out of the lock and then attempted to get it from under the door, but it had fallen too far away. Then he started to bore a hole in the door, but quit that to attempt to take off the hinges. He nearly succeeded in this when he probably became frightened and hurried off.

Nothing was carried off and the only damage done was the hole in the door.

Remember, ladies, that shell combs are just the thing, and we have the only stock of genuine shell in town.

BACK FROM FARGO.

Mrs. Aaron Hershfield Returns From the Scene of Her Triumph.

Mrs. Aaron Hershfield, with the baby and the little one's nurse, returned yesterday from Fargo, N. D., where she successfully fought the suit of her husband for annulment of their marriage. The party went at once to the Helena, where they have rooms. Mrs. Hershfield was tired out with her journey and retired early. She looked travel-worn and showed evidences of the great strain to which she has been subjected for the past few weeks, but seemed triumphant over her victory. The next step in the matter will be the trial of the suit now pending in the district court here against L. H. Hershfield and wife, in which Mrs. Aaron Hershfield asks $7,000 for alienating the affections of her husband. This trial will probably attract fully as much interest as the one just concluded at Fargo.

A Bread and Water Diet.

Wm. Simmons and Thos. Scott were found guilty in Judge Gage's court yesterday of petty larceny, and sentenced to thirty days in jail. The last ten days they are to be kept upon a bread and water diet. The men on Monday night took a sack of flour that was in front of a bakery on State street. They tried to sell it to various persons, including Scott Hines, who refused to buy. They evidently disposed of it to some one, for as Hines was going down to the fire station he ran across the men, who were about to walk off with another sack of flour from the same bakery. Hines caught the men and walked them to the police station.

Money From State Lands.

The state board of land commissioners have received $57,196.24 from state lands for the year ending Dec. 1, divided among the various grants as follows: School fund, principal, $41,896.82; interest, $10,924.97; university fund, interest, $2,747.75; public building fund, principal, $7,065.52; interest, $416.87; normal school, interest, $449; college of agriculture and mechanic arts, interest, $63.

The Committee of One Hundred Against Re-incorporation.

The Citizens' Association of One Hundred, at its meeting last night, adopted the following:

"The association declares its unalterable determination to advocate by every honorable means in its power the practice of economy in our city government, and in furtherance of this cause it will oppose any change in our present charter which may permit an increase of taxation, expense or indebtedness, or any action looking to the re-incorporation of our city under the general laws for the incorporation of cities."

"The association will endeavor to impress upon the minds of the members of the city council, and also upon the minds of the people of the city, the necessity of the most rigid economy in all city expenditures."

"The association will oppose any measure looking to the bonding of the floating debt of the city at the present time."

"The association believes that the city should own its own waterworks, and it will approve any wise measure looking to that end. As a water supply would enable the city to erect an electric light plant at small cost, which could be operated at a mere nominal expenditure, it will also approve of a measure giving the city and people cheap electric light."

NOW AT THE COURT HOUSE.

The Fountain That Was at the World's Fair Can Be Seen.

The beautiful marble and silver fountain sent by the woman of Lewis and Clarke county to the world's fair was set up yesterday in the center of the main corridor of the court house. This fountain, which was a very costly affair, graced the woman's building at the Columbian exposition, where it attracted very wide attention by its richness and beauty of design. Upon a granite base rests the finely-carved and polished pedestal which in turn supports a large shell-shaped bowl. The exterior of this bowl is silver and it is lined with gold; over it is suspended a pretty design of metal fashioned in the shape of a slender branch bearing marvelously perfect leaves. The fountain was brought to Helena soon after the closing of the fair, and was stored in the armory, from which place it was taken yesterday. It is a fitting ornament to Lewis and Clarke county's court house, the finest public building in the state.
