PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY.

A WORD TO FARMERS SONS.

Farmers' sons are quite apt to suppose that they can only attain to any coveted position in life through an avenue of some trade or profession. They look about and find the wealthy men nearly all belonging to these classes. They do not stop to consider that only the wealthy ones come to view; that for every one of those who has acquired wealth or distinction, ninety-nine others have failed and disappeared, or have never risen to notice at all. They act on the belief that they are the only persons that can be called into public life, ignoring the fact that it is the training they get that constitutes the difference, rather than the calling. A farmer of equal learning and culture with the lawyer would, we believe, find himself in just as good request, with perhaps many chances in his favor. If the farmer allows the professional man to monopolize all the advantages at the start, he must expect to find himself at a disadvantage all the way through.—Dirigo Rural.

The Grange Bulletin in an article on the pecuniary purpose of the grange, concludes as follows: It need hardly be added that the order is better and stronger from the fact that those who expected to reap a harvest where they had not sown withdrew or were dropped, and that those who remained adopted new methods or directed their energies into new channels. It must be admitted, however, that in the aggregate a large number failed to keep their first estate. Assuming this to be even one-third of the entire number, with false principles as the ground-work of action, the grange is better without than with them. It only proves, with increased force, the necessity for the existence of an organization of the agricultural class with purposes and aims in harmony with the general good and tributary to a rational progress. That such is the work of the grange is now the accepted belief.

At the last annual meeting of the National grange, says the Farmers' Friend, the following resolution, among others, was adopted:

We shall demand by our ballots admission into the legislature of the several states, and in both branches of the national congress for representatives of agriculture, chosen directly from its votaries, as the only means of relief.
