THERE IS NO DEATH.

There is no death! The stars go down To rise upon some fairer shore; And bright in Heaven's jewelled crown They shine for evermore.

There is no death! The dust we tread Shall change beneath the summer showers To golden strains of mellow fruit, Or rainbow-tinted flowers.

The granite rocks disorganize To feed the hungry moss they bear; The forest leaves drink daily life From out the viewless air.

There is no death! The leaves may fall, The flowers may fade and pass away; They only wait through wintry hours The coming of the May.

There is no death! An angel form Walks o'er the earth with silent tread; He bears our best-loved things away, And then we call them "dead."

He leaves our hearts all desolate, He plucks our fairest, sweetest flowers; Transplanted into bliss, they now Adorn immortal bowers.

The bird-like voice, whose joyous tones Made glad these scenes of sin and strife, Sings now an everlasting song Amid the tree of life.

And where he sees a smile too bright, Or heart too pure for taint and vice, He bears it to the world of light, To dwell in Paradise.

Born unto that undying life, They leave us but to come again; With joy we welcome them—the same, Except in sin and pain.

And ever near us, though unseen, The dear immortal spirits tread; For all the boundless Universe Is life—there are no dead.

ABOUT WALTZING.

Prof. James P. Welch, who keeps a dancing school at Tenth and Chestnut streets, has begun a crusade against the waltz as at present danced, which he pronounced to be immodest, vulgar and generally demoralizing. He says: "I have been a dancing master for the past ten years, and have made it a practice throughout that period to observe carefully all the changes in the public taste, and to note the changes for better or worse in my profession. I have watched closely and thought deeply on the subject, and now I have no hesitation in saying that the waltz, whatsoever name it may go under for the time being, is immoral. It is the only dance that decent people protest against, and I am happy to say that there are numbers of careful fathers who will not allow their daughters to dance it, although a vast proportion of the fashionable, and a majority of the middle and lower classes, do not as yet seem awakened to its iniquity. I have recently been conversing with the Rev. Mr. Wayland, of the Baptist church at Broad and Arch streets, and with others of the clergy, and they agree with me that the dancing of the waltz has full as demoralizing an effect in its way as have alcohol and tobacco in theirs."

"Do you hear many objections to waltz nowadays?" "Oh, yes, any quantity of them—and I think the time is just right to begin a crusade. I don't think my efforts or those of the clergymen who will take part in the good work will have any immediate effect, but when the people begin to think, which they will do when the subject has had all the agitation, they will soon act, and the voluptuous waltz will gradually disappear. Ten or fifteen years ago the waltz was not objectionable as at the present. Dancers of to-day come into altogether too close contact. In the old time a gentleman merely touched a lady's waist, and at the same time holding her right hand in his left. Now, he throws his right arm clear around her form, pulls her close to him, as tho' fearful of losing her, brings his face into actual contact with her soft cheek, and, in a word, hugs her. Such action is altogether too familiar, but still custom and society sanction it, and instead of improvement for the better, we see, year after year, a marked advance in the improprieties of the dance. In the old days the waltz was comparatively modest; now it is just the reverse, and the waltz is calculated to do more injury to the young than any of the vices that are preached against from the pulpit and deeply deplored in private life."

"But suppose you succeed in abolishing the waltz, Professor, where will you find any dance to take its place?" "Well, when the necessity arises, a new dance will be invented that will have all the gliding grace and the glorious exhilaration of the waltz without its delirious voluptuousness. My own intention is to substitute the 'Minuet de la Cour,' a dance introduced by Louis XIV, of France, which kept its place in public esteem for centuries, but has of late years gone completely out of use. It was partially revived in this city in 1876, but was allowed to drop out of fashion again, principally for the reason that the ladies and gentlemen who danced it were compelled by the dictates of fashion to dress in court costume, which is very expensive, and is at the same time very repugnant to the fierce republicanism of Americans. The dance consists of marching, bowing and turning, and develops all the grace that the dancers possess. Its great recommendation is that it is perfectly modest and admits of no hugging, such as you see nightly in the waltz."

"You speak with much force, Professor, with regard to the morality of the waltz. Do you speak from personal observation or from hearsay?"

"From personal observation. I have made it my practice for years to attend parties and balls in order to keep pace in my teaching with the popular demand. I have no hesitation in saying that I attribute much of the vice and immorality now prevailing to the insidious influence of the waltz. This may seem an overstraining of the point, but it is my honest conviction. I tell you that in the higher circles young ladies at parties and balls are absolutely hugged—embraced would be too weak to express my meaning—by men who were altogether unknown to them before the music for the waltz began to inspire the dancer's toes. Is this pleasant to contemplate? Then in the lower classes, the license of the dance is much more shocking. I have seen couples so closely interlocked that the face of the man was actually in contact with that of the palpitating girl in his arms. I have seen kisses interchanged amid the whirl of the maddening waltz. The persons interested in the crusade intend to send circulars to the leading clergymen and heads of ecclesiastical organs and institutions of the United States, and ask them to aid in the great work. Dr. Wayland said he would aid us in any way he could, and promised to write Mrs. Gen. Sherman, the authoress of a book in opposition to waltzing, asking her assistance. I also wrote to that lady requesting her advice as to the conduct of the crusade. Mrs. Sherman's book takes the ground that the waltz is immodest; that it detracts from the purity of young ladies who indulge in it; that it gives to the young men opportunities for familiarities that should never be allowed, and that it is, in fact, demoralizing in the extreme. She holds no young lady should be embraced save by the man she proposes to marry, and that the close contact of the waltz is dangerous and injurious to the purity and modesty of womanhood. There are six dances now in vogue that involves the hugging principle of the waltz. They are the plain waltz, which was introduced by the Germans (who seldom, by the way, take part in the square dance); the glide, a very fashionable and pretty dance; the redowa, which has held its own for many generations of dancers, the Danish, (hall march and half waltz), and the three step gallop. I entered upon this crusade, first, because I thought the waltz an immoral dance; and second, because the clergymen whom I consulted thought the iniquity steps in the matter should be taken by a member of the profession most deeply interested."

Prof. Welch, in conclusion, said that the waltz step is in itself objectionable, but that the closeness of the partners, as the dance is now practiced is worthy of strong condemnation. He suggests that the waltz step be retained, but that the partners be widely separated by a very simple expedient. This is, to cross and join the hands. A possible objection to this is that it will not afford to the lady that sense of support and protection that is derived from the pressure of her partner's arm about her waist. The professor said that he introduced this style of waltzing to some of his higher classes last winter, and it was well and favorably received.—Philadelphia Press.

An Explanation.

The delicate, flowery and lasting fragrance of Floreston Cologne explains why it is such a favorite with the ladies.

Why Should They.

No man or woman can do satisfactory work when the brain is dull, the nerves unsteady, the system relaxed and they feel generally wretched. Why should anybody drag through their work in this condition, when a bottle of Parker's Ginger Tonic will at moderate cost give them the strength and will to perform their duties satisfactorily.—Ed.
