DEFENSE INTRODUCES JOSEPH BROWN

DEFENDANT IN MURDER TRIAL TELLS HIS STORY OF KILLING FOR FIRST TIME.

The principal feature of the third day in the trial of Joseph Brown for the killing of Robert Gilruth near Lolo on February 28 was the testimony of the defendant, who took the stand yesterday to tell his story of the case for the first time.

Court opens. Court opened at 9 o'clock and the remaining state witnesses were called to give minor details as to some of the circumstances leading up to the killing. The whole, however, did not consume more than 30 minutes and at 10 o'clock Attorney Hall presented to the jury the case of the defendant.

The First Witness. Mr. Hall then called as the first witness for the defense Henry Westerman of Lolo, who testified that the defendant had been staying at his home at the time of the occurrence and related what he knew of the events of the day of Gilruth's death.

Defendant Testifies. The defense then called Brown himself to tell his story. In regard to the circumstances leading up to the killing, he said he was practically the same as the rest of the witnesses, but when it came to the killing itself his story differed entirely from that of John Gilruth, the only other eye-witness.

Cross-Examination. Mr. Mulroney then subjected the witness to a fire of questions, the cross-examination lasting nearly two hours, but the testimony remained unshaken with the exception of one place, where Brown had said in his direct examination that he had taken the gun because he had been warned that he had better look out for Gilruth.

Mr. Mulroney then subjected the witness to a fire of questions, the cross-examination lasting nearly two hours, but the testimony remained unshaken with the exception of one place, where Brown had said in his direct examination that he had taken the gun because he had been warned that he had better look out for Gilruth.

He also said that he did not tell Mr. Hess when he had come to his house after the murder that Gilruth had fallen as he entered the cabin, and after procuring this statement, Brown was dismissed.

Many Witnesses. The defense then brought on a long list of witnesses who all gave practically the same evidence, namely, that at some time or other Gilruth had declared his intent of "getting Brown" and that they had repeated it to Brown.

The state and the defense then rested and the witnesses were finally discharged and the court was adjourned until 9:30 this morning, when the final arguments by the attorneys in the case will be heard.
