CAUGHT ON THE RUN ABOUT TOWN

PEOPLE YOU KNOW AND SOME OF THE THINGS THEY DO AND SAY.

Oliver Harlow went up to Hamilton last night to arrange with the bitter root people for the performance of "The Right of Way" next Thursday. Their part will be to get aboard and come down, they will see a good performance and will have a good time. Manager Charles Harlow, speaking last night of the train, said: "We have had so many requests from the bitter root people to run another train that we are trying it again. The last one was successful from our point of view and the valley people said they were pleased. The performance Thursday night will be one of the notable attractions of my house for this season, it has proved immensely successful wherever it has been played and I am sure the folks up the valley will enjoy it to the utmost. It is a dramatization of the famous novel of the same name, and is fully as strong as the written story. The men who are the principals have made fame for themselves in this production and I am glad that the bitter root people will have this opportunity to see this high-class performance. The train arrangements are the same as those which were in effect before; the train will leave Hamilton at 6 o'clock in the evening and will return after the performance, giving visitors time enough to visit the old inn."

Game Warden Avare has to his credit one rescue. For a while yesterday it looked as if he was in line for a Carnegie medal, but in the afternoon the pipe went out. It all happened through the kindness of heart of the state game warden, combined with the fact that Deputy Warden McCormick knows every child in the west end of the state and has his eye out for any juvenile in distress. Wednesday afternoon McCormick met a small boy on the street, crying bitterly. Dougal asked him what was the matter and the youth said between sobs, that he had lost his father, who had come to town with him on the train. Dougal took the small boy in hand and set out in quest of the missing parent. He met Mr. Avare, who was in town that afternoon, and the big-hearted game warden at once entered into the case. The boy told his name and Mr. Avare at once recognized him; the lad was Emil Ozanne, and his father is clerk of the commission for Silver Bow county. That made it interesting. The search for the father became warm; the lad insisted that his father had come to town with him and had got lost. He had no idea what had become of him and he wanted him. Then there would be more tears and the hearts of the Avare-McCormick combination would ache with sympathy. Up and down the city streets, in and out of every hotel in town, through lodging houses and into restaurants the search was made, but there was no father anywhere. At length Avare took the boy to the Shepard hotel, where the father stays when he is in town, and there he arranged for a bed for the lad and a comfortable breakfast. It was arranged that the other lad should show up Thursday morning the lad should be sent back to Butte on the Copper City local. Mr. Avare attended to this part of the program yesterday morning, after vain endeavors to get into communication with somebody in Butte who knew something about the movements of the Ozanne family. The conductor of the train agreed to see that the boy got home all right. Then Avare and McCormick went about their business, each confident that he had done a worthy deed. But the bubble burst when, later, Avare having left town, McCormick discovered by use of the telephone that the boy had been sent to Missoula, where he is a pupil at the sisters' school, by his father, with whom he had been spending his Easter vacation. He had come to Missoula all right but had not reported at the school, and was so homesick that he was willing to do anything just to get back to Butte and his father once more. He got back, all right, but what the father said is not known. It can only be imagined. But if you were ever homesick you know how the lad felt and you will not blame him a bit.

Over across the Rattlesnake there are scores of people who last night remembered Alderman JENSEN in their prayers and who would vote for him forever if he were only in their ward. For Jensen has added one more bridge to his accomplishments at this one makes it possible for the Vine street people to cross the Rattlesnake without risking their lives on the wiggly, wobbly, waggly plank that for almost a year has been their only means of getting to the other side of the creek. Jensen was resting and discovered that the city had a lot of lumber that would make a good bridge at the Vine street crossing of the Rattlesnake. So he built a bridge; it is a good, strong, substantial bridge and it will afford unlimited comfort and enjoyment to the pedestrians who go back and forth on the Vine street thoroughfare. Thus has the industrious alderman from the Fourth added to his achievements and also added to the list of bridges. And this last one is the most thoroughly appreciated of any of the many that he has builded.

For three days Tylar B. Thompson has been busy answering telephone calls and explaining NO SPOIL TO THESE. That a lot of eggs that were sent out as strictly fresh Bitter Rooters proved to be hard-boiled when they were opened. There is nobody in the long list of complainants who thinks for a moment that Mr. Thompson is to blame, but their confidence in him does not soften those eggs or render them any the better adapted to the construction of custards or cakes. There have been many tales related of the experiences of those who tried to use this particular lot of eggs. It happened that nobody who got them wanted them hard; they were all wanted for something light and fluffy that requires eggs that beat well and stand up under the beating. One little housewife on the south side had everything ready for a dainty cake and proceeded to open an egg. It was hard, so hard that it was blue. She opened another and that was hard, too. A third was a little bit harder than either of the others, and a fifth was likewise solid. This particular little woman is persevering and she kept opening eggs until, when she called for help, there was just the top of her head showing above a heap of shells and a mound of shiny, hard-boiled eggs. Then Tylar was called upon. It was all news to him, and he thought there was some joke about it until he began to receive 22 complaints a minute. Then he proceeded to investigate. The investigation has reached the stage where it is certain that the case of hard-boiled eggs came down the Bitter Root with a shipment of "strickles." It has not been discovered yet where this particular case came from, but it is certain that the farmer who shipped them was determined that his eggs should not spoil. They did not, but they have nearly spoiled one man's disposition.

DANCE OF KNIGHTS IS ENJOYED

THREE HUNDRED HAPPY PEOPLE ARE GUESTS OF COUNCIL—SOCIETY NEWS.

In every way successful was the Easter ball of Missoula council No. 1621, Knights of Columbus, given last evening in Elite hall. The hopes of the knights themselves were realized, as the attendance was large, and the anticipation of the guests of an enjoyable evening was made something concrete. Three hundred happy couples danced to the music of the Missoula Club orchestra, and there was nothing to mar the perfection of the event. Elite hall was prettily decorated.

The following committees were in charge of the ball, and to the conscientious efforts of their members much of the success of the event may be credited:

Executive committee—D. W. Fitzpatrick, chairman, Daniel L. O'Hern, Edward Roulier, John W. Pope, Thomas L. Myers, W. L. Kelley.

Reception committee—A. J. Violette, George Reeves, Thomas P. Conlon, Edward Roulier, Edward C. Mulroney and Ernest Holmes.
